Reward for People Who Sweeten Life

The last will and testament of the late William M. Carson contains a neat and painless little sermon for all

Mr Carson was a wealthy San Francisco business man who, when it came time for him to die, had neither chick nor child to leave his money to. He owned some $1,800,worth of this world's goods, and he didn't quite like the idea of handing it all in a lump to some impersonal philanthropic organization.

So when he sat down to make out his will he simply wrote the names of everybody who had been kind to him, everybody whose courtesy, efficiency or helpfulness had made his life a little pleasanter—and divided his bequests among all of them.

The 34 people who worked for him all got bequests. The maids, janitors, bellhops, waiters and elevator boys at his hotel got bequests; so did the employes of the country club where he had played golf, people in the hospitals where he had been a patient, the church he attended, the university from wich he had been graduated, and so on.

Altogether, more than 100 people were named in his will, for amounts varying from $500 to $10,000.

There is a sort of moving picture romanticism about this will, of course, and earnest thinkers will no doubt say that the money would have "done more good" if it had all gone to some worthy cause.

But there is a lot to be said for the idea of doing something to repay all the people who had helped to make life run more smoothly and happily.

For all of us, as we travel on toward the graves that await us, carry with us debts just like those which this millionaire paid in his will. We don't often stop to think about them, but they exist. It's a good idea to stop and tabulate them once in a while.

Life consists of an infinite number of small human contacts. A man may consider himself utterly friendless and alone-yet his ability to get his work done, to sleep well at night, to maintain a smooth temper, even to enjoy Gen Mot his meals properly, depends in no small measure on the Gulf Oil people with whom he makes these contacts.

Imagine what a miserable day you would put in if, Montg Ward some morning, you should find all of these people falling down on their jobs; if their pleasant efficiency should be Radio replaced by grumpiness, slovenliness and laxity.

Corner cop, street car conductor, filling station attendant, phone girl, lunchroom waitress, man-at-the-next desk, apartment house janitor, mailman, store clerk-all togeth- U S Steel they could ruin your day beyond repair; in a week they could drive you crazy.

We don't have millions to give away when we die, and Grain; even if we did few of us would give them as this San Franciscoan did. But it won't hurt us to remember that we carry those debts with us.

Roslyn's Old Mill Wheel Still Grinds After 236 Years

Priceless American Relic Stands with Few Changes Save for New Roof

By MARION CUNNINGHAM T'S water over the dam, all right, out in Roslyn, Long Island, and has been since 1701.

Ceaselessly for more than two centuries the old mill wheel has een revolving, marking with every turn the slow passage from pioneer simplicity to a modern America.

Long before George Washington saw the light of a Virginia dawn, tall-masted schooners were tying up at the landing in the little inlet of Hempstead Harbor to unload their burdens of Connecticut corn. With the nineteenth century steamers nosed into the dock to feed grain to the hopper. By 1916 even the mill wheel that still turns conceded to progress by giving its power to gen-

It was in 1701 that Doane Robinson built the old grist mill, and until 1916 it operated continuously for business. In that year its last private owner, Isaac Hicks, gave it to the town of Roslyn to be restored and cherished as a "Museum of Industrial Arts." America's three great wars are represented by a frayed British red coat, a drum carried by a little English boy whom the soldiers of the Civil War called "Johnny Bull," and the gas masks and bayonets of the World War. There are symbols of peace too, of life continuing in spite of war-a yellowing marriage certificate, a baby's christening dre a colonial wheat cradle, even a handmade tooth extractor among countless other objects.

CAPE COD TURKEY

Dipping into brown swells that champed hungrily at the frosted strakes of his dory, the Cape Codder crouched to his cold work with wet, streaming lines till a catch of fish had been made. Good cod was his Thanksgiving "turkey." With dull skies sinking heavily upon him and the first ghostly shafts of a nor'easter hissing from a smoky horizon, he would lift his crinkled eyes shoreward, thankful for the fish that meant both food and feast.

Sometimes, it seems, we come by our blessings too easily. We take the gifts a more progressive civilization has brought us with a complacency that robs us of deeper thrills. And the thrills are there, with but a slight exercise of imagination.

Try a slow exploration through the advertising in this newspaper. Behind each advetrisement is a story. Behind each story is a service or a product that may mean pleasanter living for you. Behind it all is the stirring life of the world in action-for here the producers of the world are offering you their wares.
