Clear Labor Concept Is Nation's Need Now

To say that labor is in confusing today is merely to say that everybody knows. But a good deal of the confusion is in the fact that we as yet have no settled law or even common concepts of labor rights and duties.

That is not strange. The labor problem in its modern, streamlined phase is new to the United States. We are simply fumbling our way toward settled conceptions.

The Wagner act is one of our first efforts to codify rights that are by no means commonly agreed upon. Neither employers nor organized workers seem entirely satisfied with it as it stands. But it would be odd if this early experiment were perfect. Basic concepts of labor rights are not yet clearly defined, and no law can be successful unless it reflects a generally accepted concept.

For instance: An odd labor election was held the other day by the New York Labor Relations Board. The question usually set up by such boards is "do you wish to be represented in collective bargaining by X union or Y union?"

But this ballot offered a third alternative, that "neither union" be chosen as representative. And lo and behold, when all the ballots were counted, X union got 88, Y union got 21, and the vote for "neither union" was 287.

Does this suggest that perhaps many of our labor board elections have failed to offer a chance to vote for what the employees really wanted? Industrial elections should be indicators to show the will of employees as regards collective bargaining. They do not yet do this perfectly, and here there is room for experiment.

Picketing rights have not yet been generally agreed upon. A recent New Jersey decision is that a strike is over and picketing is therefore illegal when the places of strikers have been filled and business has been resumed. Certainly there will be no general agreement that this is the final work on such a point.

On the other hand, suppose there are 100 employees in a plant, and 10 of them want to strike. They do, and bring 300 allies as "pickets" to forcibly prevent the other 90 from entering the plant. Is that picketing? There simply is not as yet any general agreement on the rights and wrongs in such cases.

New York electrical manufacturers are suing a union there under the Sherman anti-trust act, charging that it constitutes a monopoly. With the administration blaming monopolies for price-fixing and raising costs arbitrarily, it is possible that closed unions will be held to be as much "in restraint of trade" as monopolists in the ordinary sense?

Can union members sue their unions if they are damaged through acts of the unions? This question, too, is before the courts.

There are a thousand questions like these on which people generally must become agreed, and their concepts written into law before a smooth and systematic conduct of labor relations will be possible.

Baffling Case of Long Lost Bridal Pair Still Enigma

Drama, Mystery Locked In New Orleans Disappearance

NEW ORLEANS — New Orleans' mystery of the vanished bridal couple, a classic of the public administrator's office, has defied a solution for a score or more years, according to Major A. W. Newlin.

To me the most dramatic and mysterious of all tales arising from this annual event was that of the vanished bridal couple and the old trunk that contained their wedding presents.

"Just set the figure and I'll send you a check," the owner wrote to Newlin. He even sent his son to reclaim the suit-case.

Employers Due For Double Tax When Delinquent

AUSTIN. — Employers delinquent in paying their state payroll contributions for unemployment compensation on Jan. 31 will be liable for double taxation.

Federal returns are due on Jan. 31 for the year 1937. The final 1937 state tax — that for December — is due on Jan. 25.

Under the law, the state collects payroll taxes monthly and the federal government collects them yearly. If an employer pays his state taxes before the federal taxes are due, then he is permitted to deduct the amount of tax paid the state of Texas from the federal tax.

Trailer Exhibit Showing Crime Is Failure Arranged

A display designed to show that crime does not pay may be seen at Eastland during the showing of Alcatraz Island at the New Lyric theatre and Sunday and Monday, according to plans announced Thursday by B. J. Aylesworth, resident manager for Texas Consolidated Theatres, Inc.

The display is in a trailer which will be parked in front of the New Lyric during the picture's run, the manager stated.

Over 100 photos of the most talked about criminals, murder weapons, safe breaking tools, burglar tools and other devices used by the law breaking are among items to be seen in the trailer display.

The display has been assembled to advertise and show, as does Alcatraz Island, in addition to the entertainment qualities, that crime does not pay, according to Aylesworth.

The trailer will be taken to high school Monday with its display for inspection by students.

Alcatraz Island features players including Dick Purcell and Ann Sheridan. Booked also Sunday and Monday is "Behind the Criminal," another of the M-G-M. "crime does not pay" short subject series.

There Is no Escape from Alcatraz

Rising Sharply From the Waters of the Golden Gate, "Alcatraz Island" Takes its Place Among the Famous Islands of the World with an Historic Past Second to None and a Present Which Makes the Nation's Front Page News

by N. J. MacGAFFIN

It is not so long ago that all matters pertaining to crime and crime prevention were largely problems to be dealt with by local and state officials whose qualifications for the various offices which they held were usually based on political power rather than on experience or ability.

The results of such a system were bound to be far from satisfactory, particularly when modern modes of transportation make it possible for anyone to flee quickly from one state to another. Consequently, racketeering, murder, and theft became far more commonplace than anyone cared to admit. It was at this point that the Federal Government, through the Department of Justice, decided to take a hand and produced the results which time and again have been front page news in every paper throughout the country.

One of the most interesting and most publicized adjuncts to the Federal Government's drive against crime is its famed "break-proof" prison in San Francisco Bay known generally as Alcatraz Island. To the underworld it is "The Rock." Unique among the prisons of the world, it has been shrouded in a cloak of mystery, and has come to represent the ultimate among all efforts to protect the public from incorrigible wrongdoers.

History Begins in 1775

The recorded history of this famous penal institution begins in 1775, when one Don Juan Manuel Ayala, representing the Spanish Government, became the first white man to sail through the portals now known as the Golden Gate. It is said that Senor Ayala sailed completely around the forbidding pile of rock and seeing that it was barren of vegetation and was inhabited only by myriads of pelicans, shruggingly called it Isla de Alcatrazes (which means Pelican Island).

Other Spaniards showed a similar lack of interest in the island and established a fortress called Ft. Mason on the mainland. Today Ft. Mason is part of the Army's Presidio of San Francisco.

The island became the property of the United States in 1846 with the annexation of California, but it remained just a pile of uninhabited rock until 1854 when the government built a fortress for the defense of the harbor.

If Jose Limantour had had his way in 1853, the history of the island might have been vastly different. Armed with papers which he said were a land grant given to him by General Micheltozen, last Spanish governor of California, Limantour claimed the island was his. A French resident of Mexico, Limantour took his case to court, but his claim was ruled fraudulent.

Political prisoners were once confined on the island. The first to win this doubtful honor were those too outspoken in their criticism of the way the Civil War was being fought—and who soon discovered that there was a limit to freedom of speech.

Army men soon rounded up these offenders and took them to Alcatraz where they were put to work making little rocks out of big ones and building roads.

Once Army Post

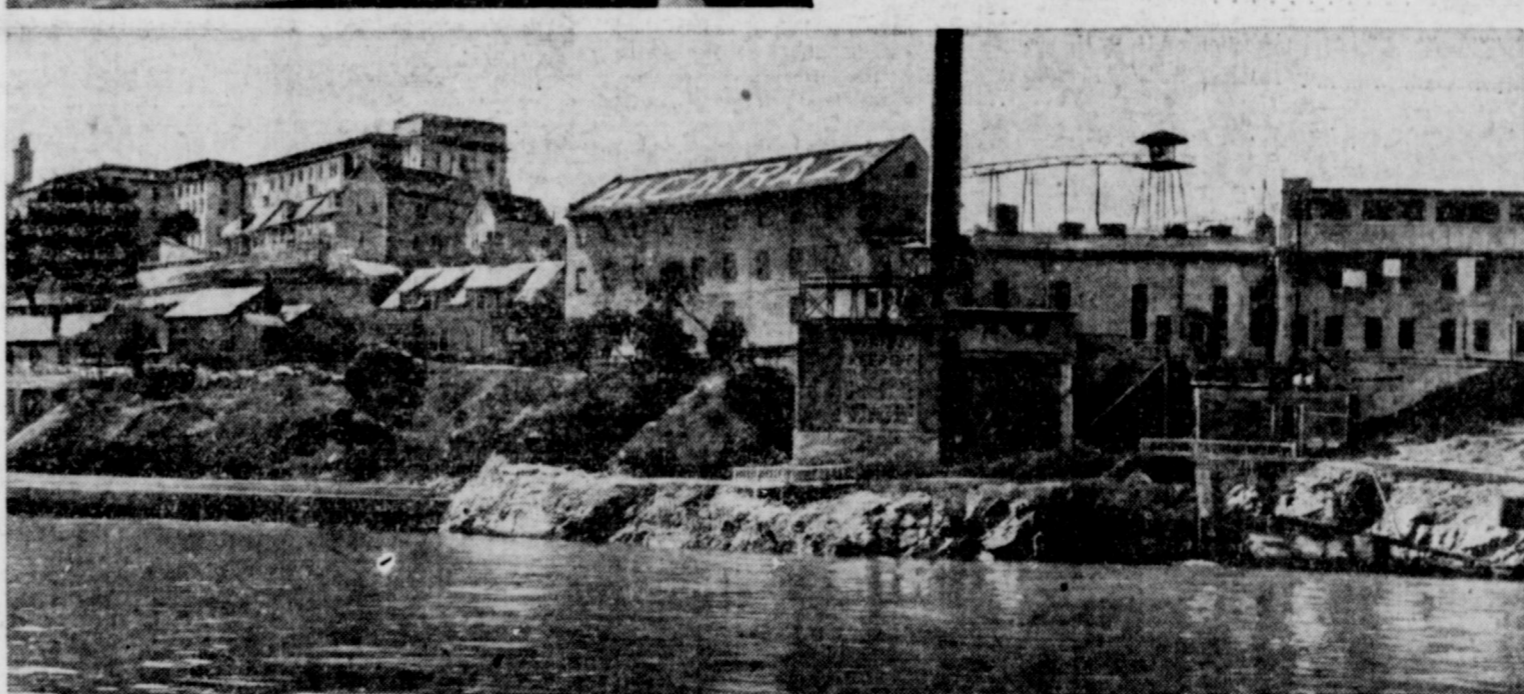

Decision to make the island the site of Army disciplinary barracks was made in the early '80s. First prison buildings were constructed then, and twenty-five years ago the present buildings, which were remodeled at a cost of $263,000 when Alcatraz was made a federal prison, were built.

Alcatraz Island is but one and one-half miles from the mainland and it would seem an easy matter for a prisoner to escape if he were successful in eluding the guards. However, in more than fifty years, no prisoner is known to have made his escape from the island by swimming.

Countless have tried and died and many have begged to be rescued from the icy waters. Since it became the Federal prison only one man has tried to escape by this method. He jumped from the high wall, but was shot and killed in mid-air by a guard.

The water is never warmer than 47 degrees and at ebb and flood tide the currents swirling around the island attain a normal speed of from five to seven knots per hour. A trained swimmer in the pink of condition could make the swim and has, but daily practice and perfect conditioning were necessary to accomplish the feat.

On one occasion prisoners made a raft and attempted to reach the mainland, but they drifted helplessly at the mercy of the currents. On another, a prisoner was nailed into a barrel which was tossed into the bay by his fellow inmates. From cell windows they watched the barrel drift around the island for three days and nights. Finally one could stand it no longer and confessed. The unfortunate man was rescued in time to save his sanity and life.

No Escape Ever Made

But these escapes were attempted before Uncle Sam stepped in to show what can be done in running a federal prison. As has been said, but one man has since attempted to escape by this method and death was his reward.

No one knows exactly what goes on inside the forbidding walls of Alcatraz except Uncle Sam and he refuses to say anything about it. However, certain facts have been gleaned about its internal working from released prisoners, and they should certainly deter others from doing anything which might make them candidates for membership in this select organization.

For instance, it is known that all guards are specially trained before they become part of the staff, and the once there, this training continued. Almost every day inmates can hear the guards at target practice outside the prison walls. The rattle of machine guns and rifles must make the would-be jail breaker a little nervous when he considers plans for escape.

Buoys Circle Island

Because of its inaccessibility to outsiders, "The Rock" is probably freer of distraction and undercover activities than are most prisons. Their contact with the outside world is so limited, that the inmates know little about what is going on among their former associates. It is possible that men in other prisons have deliberately acted up so that they would be transferred to Alcatraz for one reason or another. Usually such a procedure is motivated by a desire to revenge on someone who already there and this is of course possible only from inside.

To maintain this inaccessibility, buoys circle the land bearing signs warning craft to keep 300 yards distant. If the skipper does believe in signs and if within the deadline, a burst of machine-gun fire across his bow will soon advise him that the signs are there for a purpose. Machine guns also fire at floating rubbish approaching or circling the island; the rubbish may be an escaping prisoner—or a friend arriving to effect escape.

A motion picture has been produced known as "Alcatraz Island." It is an exceptionally human, dramatic and intensely exciting narrative. Among the principals are Ann Sheridan, John Littel, Mary Margaret Gordon Oliver, Vladimir Sokoloff (who has made remarkable an impression Cezanne in "The Life of Emile Zola"), Dick Purcell, Addison Richards, Ben Bates, George E. Stone, Paul Bates, Doris Lloyd and Anderson Lawlor.

... none had ever pleased her quite so much. Then, once more they were on their way.
 When they reached their destination it was long past midnight.
 The village was asleep under its blanket of snow, its little group of houses nestling close. High on a hill the tall steeple of its little white church rose against the mountains, keeping watch over all.

... THIS was where Katie Blyn,
 who had been Constance Cor-
 by, was to live and work, dream and play; this where she was to try her wings, find that freedom so long sought.

... "Like it?" Bret asked, at her side. He seemed to sense her mood, almost her thoughts. "It may not appear very grand—unless you have the seeing eye. But you'll find it friendly and kind and simple. I hope," he added with those same qualities, "you will find much more than that.
 Maybe your heart's desire!"

... They had pulled up now in front of a square brick house that sat well back on the Main Street. Its walls were almost completely covered with ivy that still clasped its green leaves; its wide porch was supported by tall colonial columns;
 over the door was an exquisite fanlight, delicately wrought. A row of stately elms flanked the crumbling walk.

... "Why, this house must be over a hundred years old!" Connie exclaimed. "It must have been a perfectly lovely house in its day."
 "Shh!" Bret put a finger to his lips. They had come through the gate; he placed her bag on the steps. "It still is, my dear young lady! Aunt Beatha—as I told you everyone calls her—she thinks it the finest mansion in the whole country-side. I'll have you understand, one other thing, his eyes twinkled warningly, "you will be her guest. No West Virginia lady ever takes in boarders,
 or accepts the smallest charity, you know."

... "I'll not forget," Connie promised. They could hear the water inside the house now; a bolt shot back; the big door opened.
 A woman peered out, holding high a candelabrum; her head was wrapped in a lace cap; her huge person enveloped in a faded old flannel robe.

... "Well, well, well," her face fairly beamed. "If it isn't Bret. And someone else with you? That's nice. Come in, come in!"

Iowa Pensions Are Thinning Out County Homes In State

DES MOINES—The old age pension is keeping Iowa's aged out of the county homes. Decreases in the population of the 95 homes in the state have been reported through discharge of inmates to receive pensions. Emergency unemployment relief funds have also helped reduce the number of inmates, but the effect has been less pronounced because most of the aged are unemployed.

A survey shows that the population of the homes is 4,805, or about one-ninth of the number receiving old age pensions. Most counties report that persons received at homes during the last year were more infirm than in previous years. This is believed due to the fact that more able-bodied persons are on pension rolls.

Four counties do not have county homes because the scarcity of inmates would not warrant the cost of upkeep. County homes in Iowa operate farms that include 23,692 acres valued at $2,500,000. The total value of the properties, including land and buildings, is $6,500,000.

Most of the food consumed in the homes is raised on the farms, which average 240 acres. Some of the farms produce a surplus and sell it for cash.

Hopeful for 1938

His firm would spend $35,000,000 in plant improvements in expectation of improved business conditions in 1938. Lamont duPont, chairman of the big duPont chemical firm, pictured on the witness stand, assured the Senate Unemployment Committee at a hearing in Washington, D. C. He urged the New Deal cooperative by "lifting the fog" of uncertainty which he believes paralyzes business.

Race Driver Shaw Always Wins Honors

1928 at Roby Speedway, Chicago, he won a 20-mile race, took the blue ribbon in a five-mile race and placed second in a third race. Three years later on the same speedway in a six-race card, he won three of the events and took second in a fourth. Whether it is derby racing or sprinting, Driver Shaw has what it takes.

One of the first lessons Speedway Racer Shaw learned was to protect his health. He says, "Quaker Oats has the stuff it takes to build the stamina and nerve our game requires."

 Constant Eyesight Protection
 For A Few Pennies A Day

It's never too early to begin protecting eyesight. Eye strain is a real and dangerous enemy of even a tiny baby and too often it is caused by poor lighting—one of the easiest things in the world to correct. It is a very simple matter to provide GOOD light for everyone in the home, young and old. New I. E. S. lamps do the trick—they supply evenly distributed, properly diffused light of just the right intensity, entirely free from glare.

Man Learns Where Father Was Killed

By United Press
LOCKHART, Texas.—For many years, E. H. Roebuck, Caldwell county pioneer, had wondered where his father, the late W. W. Roebuck, was killed during the Civil war. Recently he unearthed in the attic of the local courthouse a letter from Capt. Samuel J. P. McDowell, commander of a Confederate company organized at Lockhart at the outbreak of the war, telling of the death of his father and three other Texans on Jan. 13, 1863, at Camp Nelson, Austin, Ark.

Wettest Spot In All Britain Still Dry

LONDON.—The wettest spot in Great Britain in terms of rain, Lerwick has decided to remain the driest in terms of alcohol. The dries, however, are losing supporters and the wets are growing in numbers. A poll among the inhabitants to decide whether the capital of the Shetlands should allow the sale of hooch reveals a drop in the majority in favor of prohibition. This year 758 voted in favor of a continuance of prohibition and 695 for repeal, giving a majority of 63. In 1926 there was a majority of 282 in favor of prohibition.

Pioneer Likes Alaska After a Year In State

By United Press
SEWARD, Alaska.—A year in the States convinced John Standaal that 36 years spent in Alaska was not long enough, so he is back again in the Kantishna country. When he went out it was with the thought of spending the rest of his life with his son in Michigan. The son, born in Sweden after the father left the old country, had never been visited until a year ago.

Human Torch Takes Fire to Fire Station

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Frank Wehr took his fire to the fire station. His clothing aflame when he was sprayed by an exploding gasoline can, he dashed for the nearby station, screaming. A fireman tackled him at the entrance and beat out the flames. Wehr suffered second-degree burns.
