Do We Need Forcible Union Incorporation?

The decision of Federal Judge Fred L. Wham of East St. Louis, ordering the Progressive Mine Workers of America to pay $117,000 in damages resulting from a lengthy strike, has brought to a new crescendo the long and bitter argument over responsibility of labor unions.

The final outcome of the case, which presumably will be carried to the highest court in the land, is one which will affect the entire future of employer-employee relations in America.

Judge Wham's ruling, holding that unions and their members are responsible under the law for damage inflicted as a result of unlawful conduct or conspiracy to injure an employer's property or business, may eventually prove to be a turning point in the controversy over whether labor unions should be incorporated or otherwise made legally responsible for their actions.

The bitter argument over incorporation of unions goes back to around 1880 when, strangely enough, it was organized labor which was demanding the right to take advantage of the incorporation laws in order to remove the aura of illegality which surrounded unions at that time.

In 1886, Congress passed a law permitting unions to incorporate, but by that time labor leaders had had a change of heart and few unions took advantage of the opportunity. As years passed, labor sentiment against incorporation became more pronounced, leaders realizing that such action would make unions subject to many restraints and responsibilities which do not affect voluntary associations.

Since that time there have been a few court decisions on the issue, but never a controlling and all-inclusive ruling on the legal status of unincorporated unions.

Briefly, the stands of employers and workers on the question are these:

Employers contend that the present situation is unfair because they, as individuals or corporations, are responsible for their acts, while unions are not. They contend that employers should receive assurance under the law that, once a contract is signed, there will be no strikes or other disturbances so long as employers discharge their obligations.

Labor contends that unions are not irresponsible, do not violate contracts, and need not be incorporated to assure responsibility.

Without discussing the merits of Judge Wham's decision, it undoubtedly will serve, in the long run, to clear up one of the most puzzling aspects of employer-employee relations—whether organized labor is liable for damages for civil offenses.

It will not settle, however, the question of whether unions should be made legally liable for damages resulting from failure to fulfill contracts, as no question of agreement violation was involved in the Illinois case.

This, and many other aspects of the organized labor problem, will be solved only when Congress and the administration buckle down to the task of formulating a definite national labor policy.

THERE'S a young man of Manhattan who knows his mushrooms. He gave a party. Now his guests want full details. They are giving parties, too, and want to do exactly as he did, even to the boiled ham with clear apple jelly. So the young man of Manhattan, who prefers to remain anonymous, has written it all out for his friends. Because you, too, would be his friend if you ate one of his suppers, here's the whole story of that recent party. There were five guests and they came from parts as distant as Hong Kong and Baden, with Wisconsin, California and the Lake Erie country in between.

Creamed Mushrooms (Serves 6)

Three pounds fresh mushrooms, 4 tablespoons butter, salt, cayenne, 2 cups heavy cream. For six good friends, use a 3 pound basket of large, fresh mushrooms. Peel them and cut off only the ends of the stems. Then slice the mushrooms down from cap through stems, making 3 or 4 slices from each mushroom depending on the size of the mushroom. Toss the cut-off ends and the peelings into a pot for broth.

In a large iron pan, heat 4 tablespoons butter, then turn in the mushrooms and saute gently in the hot butter. After 3 minutes, cover and cook gently another 5 minutes. Season with great restraint, using a little salt and, though it may sound heretical, also a pinch of cayenne pepper. Now slowly add 2 cups very heavy cream and bring to bubble. Let the heavy cream bubble gently until it begins to thicken—only a few minutes. Turn the mushrooms out on a hot platter where a lot of little spears of piping hot toast are waiting. Now that's all there is to this dish—except the eating.

To begin the supper, serve clear tomato bouillon. Strip dark, wilted leaves from your salad greens and simmer in a little water. Strain and to the strained liquid add a little tomato juice, a little fresh or canned chicken bouillon, and a little of the stock made from the peelings and stems of the mushrooms. Strain, get very hot, and serve with a Swedish rye biscuit.

The sizzling hot mushrooms, in their robes of pure white cream and escorted by the little gallants of hot toast, come next. With them serve thin slices of boiled ham and the best and clearest crab-apple jelly you can find in this bountiful world. There must be freshly toasted halves of cornmeal muffins, buttered and irresistibly browned. Yes, the cornmeal garden variety of cornmeal muffins. But when they find themselves in the company of such mushrooms, such ham, such jelly and such grand company, they assume a golden flavor

When You Were Reading Your Paper in 1928—

Rambling With The Rambler

BY WAYNE WALLACE

One of the most surprising things about the American people as a class is the attitude of indifference with which they regard the affairs of government except when some policy interferes directly with their own personal interests. The prevailing attitude seems to be that as long as I am getting along alright the rest of the country can look out for itself. Frequently men who should know better remark, "why should I vote? In the first place my vote would do no good, and suppose I did I would not know which man to pick. One looks as good to me as another. Its only a gamble anyway you take it." All of which is true in a way because politicians do not always do the things they promise, the policies they adhere to are not always the best or they don't know what to do. Still it is possible to read up on the characters of the candidates, find out what their past record indicates, what they promise to do in the future and combining all three, pass judgment. Should you then be wrong you will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that reason was on your side; that if the candidate of your selection was unsuccessful the others would probably have been worse. For the one who makes a choice through reason, certainly stands to make a wiser selection than the one who bases his choice on sentiment.

And politics today certainly seem to lean more towards sentiment rather than reason. The last presidential election is a good example of this. No man living, even though of greater ability, could have successfully competed with President Roosevelt, and why—because at that time he had put millions of men back to work. It is reasonable to believe that few considered whether or not the policies of the president were the best that could be devised to bring this country out of depression and keep it that way. What the people saw was a man who had given them a new hope and nearly to a man they backed him.

One reason for such a condition as this is because a man does not take advantage of the many opportunities offered him to find out what is going on in the world, such as newspapers, magazines, radios, picture shows, etc. As long as educated men boast that they never read a newspaper, as long as people subscribe to such sources of information simply because the children cannot do without the comic strips, then just so long will such a condition exist. Concerning political speeches, many writers have expressed the opinion that people listen to them not for the purpose of finding out what the candidate intends to do but simply to be entertained. After hearing some of the speeches of our present-day politicians such a statement is easy to believe.

The big howl that has been raised in Russia about inserting sex interest into the story, "Treasure Island" for the purpose of making a movie out of it seems to be nothing more than a camouflage to cover up the resentment aroused ed in the red's ranks, of the political interest also inserted into the picture. Unless the film was immoral one would not expect the general public to raise such a fuss about substituting the character Jennie Hawkins for that of Jim Hawkins, especially since Soviet film actress Francisca Gaal takes the part, as to cause the heal of the film industry, Boris Shumiat-sky, to lose his job. It is more likely that the Communistic party, or rather its leaders, were afraid that the political side of this picture might inject some new ideas into the minds of the people and, less such a thing occur again, saw fit to get rid of Shumiat-sky. The reason for trying to hide it behind sex interest may have been a desire on the part of Russia to fool this country, for it is no secret but that she wishes to make us believe that her government is just as democratic as ours, for political reasons, and for this reason does not intend to risk such an impression merely because they find it necessary to relieve an important man of his position because of an offense that would not be considered such in this country.

It might be well to note here that the film industry as controlled in the United States and Russia gives a good illustration of the difference that exists between our government and theirs. Here the individual is in charge, in Russia it is under the government. We are allowed private ownership, in Russia everything belongs to the government. In other words we have a democracy that is by and for the people, in Russia it is communism, by and for the few.

According to results the least profitable of all crime rackets is that of kidnaping. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, disclosed the fact that of the 114 kidnaping reported since June, 1932, 112 of them have been solved. Why it is that anyone would wish to risk such odds as this is hard to understand. Ever since the Lindbergh kidnaping the people of this country have shown that this is one racket that they will not stand for. And they are to be complimented on this stand. When the lives of the citizens of a country are not safe then it is the duty of such citizens to see that a stop is put to the lawlessness that is behind it.

There is an ever growing widespread belief that the present business recession is due to President Roosevelt's attitude towards big business. We all know that since the beginning of his administration he has harassed big business at every turn until it now looks as though industry is afraid to do anything for fear of being dragged further under the influence of the men in Washington. Such a condition cloaks the future in darkness since men are afraid to venture anything not absolutely necessary and lack of confidence on the part of all concerned it the result, especially the worker since he stands to lose his job. The report that some 350,000 people were laid off last month would suggest that the president goes through with his present plans of cooperating with industry if we are to avoid another depression like that of 1929.

As the older generation sees it: The modern youth thinks the old folks don't know a thing, while the old folks know the modern youth don't think,

Joey, the Seal, Is No Longer Cut-Up Of West Waterway

SEATTLE—Joey, the seal, who for years was the pet of every one on the waterfront, has been gathered to his fathers. He was found floating in the bay near one of the piers. No more will people be amused by his antics as he capered around harbor waters. Joey's favorite sport was to show a large number of fishermen were trolling. With a joyous bark he would dive, seize a fisherman's spoon and head for the open sound. The fisherman would seize his screaming reel, thinking he had hooked a large salmon. Then Joey would pop to the surface, emit a sound similar to a Bronx cheer, drop the spoon and swim away to pull the trick on someone else. Another of his tricks was to steal the bait off the hooks if it were herring or minnows. Sometimes he would get hooked, then he would cry like a baby until the fisherman unhooked him.

New Brunswick Is Attacking Old Law

FREDERICTON, N. B.—Motivated by Attorney General J. B. McNair, plans are underway to renovate New Brunswick's antiquated debt law, long ridiculed by lawyer and social workers as the one on which creditors so hounded Dickens' immortal Micawber in "David Copperfield." Amendments to the act, said to be the only one in existence in the civilized world, were stymied to permit legislative officials to attend the coronation last spring. Agitation against the statute has been underway for the past 20 years, sponsored by the New Brunswick Barristers Association. The clause under attack permits the creditor not only to obtain an execution against the goods of the debtor, but to obtain an execution against his body also. In St. John, largest city in the province, an average of six persons are jailed monthly for debts.

Glimpsing Sol's 'Spot'

Old Sol was broken out in rash spots visible to one group of which covered an area 120,000 miles wide when this remarkable picture was taken by Dr. J. J. Nassau, director of the Warner and the Case School of Applied Science. The sun spot to the extreme right is the largest larger than our entire earth. Appearing in 1929, sun spots are actually gigantic formations of white-hot gases as large as the whole earth with terrific velocity.

Rare Volumes Found In Vault of Church

PHILADELPHIA—A 1599 edition of the Bible, hidden for decades among other rare books and documents has been found by the Rev. John Craig Roak in an airtight vault in Old Swedes Church here. The old Elizabethan Bible, published by Queen Elizabeth's own printer, is in nearly as good condition as it was in the days when Shakespeare was writing "Hamlet." It is three-and-a-half inches thick and weighs several pounds.

CHARACTERS: COBBY—heroine; ARDNEY—hero; BRANDON—Connie's BLANK—Connie's "don't worry."

CHAPTER XIX: anniversary dinner was held in the brown-stone manor on Fifth Avenue. It was a landmark pointed out to all sight-seers visiting New York.

Connie was the only one who recognized that little fine line settling around her husband's mouth, the only one who saw the storm gathering in his dark eyes.

OF COURSE they would not "settle down" to the business of serious living tomorrow. Or any other day. Why should they? Why need living be serious?

She did not stop to think that in trying to possess all of him, she might lose him entirely.

CONNIE rose to give the signal for executive rather than legislative consideration. Hunt had resigned in disgust and Houston appointed Jones to succeed him.

Q. When and in what way was the annexation proposal withdrawn by Anson Jones as minister from Texas?

A. On Oct. 12, 1838, Dr. Jones then minister from Texas, gave the United States secretary of state a formal communication stating that while the United States considered the matter finally disposed of there appeared to be an impression in both countries that it was still pending, and that he had been instructed by his government to communicate to the government of the United States its formal and absolute withdrawal.

Q. How long after Texas withdrew its offer of annexation was it before negotiations were resumed, and at whose instance and why was this done?

A. About five years afterward—in October, 1843—President Tyler opened negotiations for Texas annexation by treaty. This was done largely because of an increasing fear that Great Britain had some kind of designs on Texas, which was then attracting world-wide attention, and at that time had an armistice with Mexico pending reunion negotiations.

Q. Who was Jean Gery? A. Gery's statement to the Spaniards who took him to Monclova from his Indian throne in Texas, was that he was a native of St. Jean de Orleans, France, and that he came from way up the "Big River," that he had been sent to civilize and rule the Indians, had been there three years, and had been visited by some of his people within the last year.

Q. What led to De Leon's third expedition into Texas? A. In 1688, de Leon, then governor of Coahuila, sent a Tlaxcaltecian Indian, Agustín, across the Rio Grande to secure the help of friendly Indians in fighting the Tobosos, who were giving him much trouble.

Q. When and at whose instance was Alonzo de Leon's second search made for Fort St. Louis? A. In 1687, the Marquis of Aguayo, then governor of Nuevo Leon, fitted out an expedition with de Leon in charge with instructions to cross the Rio Grande near Cerralvo, proceed to its mouth and then follow the Gulf coast to the east.

Sport Glances... By Grayson

CLEVELAND.—Fat Eddie Mead is a big man now in more places than on the scales. Mead assured himself of plenty of his favorite kidney stew when he picked up Henry Armstrong out on the coast, and now when the boys want to dicker for the services of Homicide Hank, Fat Eddie can afford to tell them to come to Cleveland, his old stamping ground of leaner days.

Not even the presence of 25,000 road builders, here for an international convention, could lose Mead in hotel lobby or drown out the fight talk when Fat Eddie was so ably assisted by Jack Kearns and Sam Pian. Kearns, you know, made quite a success of bringing back the biff business in Detroit and now has his blue bulbs on Chicago. Pian is the manager of Barney Ross.

Now when three limbos like Mead, Kearns, and Pian get together, there is either a fight, or a mighty fine stab at one, and out of the Cleveland meeting comes three and possibly a fourth.

MOST of the action centers around the phenomenal Armstrong, and the assignments he is to tackle would be remarkable for a featherweight, if the Negro youth were a featherweight.

While it seems to be plain to all but the Armstrong camp that Hammering Henry no longer is a featherweight, it insists that he will attempt to make 126 pounds once more—for a 15-round title match with K. O. Morgan, which Kearns will promote in Detroit, Feb. 11.

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—It appears that there is as likely to be discrimination in favor of a pretty face or a personal favorite in the government service, as there is in private business.

Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana seeks an investigation of civil service administration and the promotion system, has been told as much. His information came in numerous replies to a questionnaire in which government employees are asked to tell of alleged discrimination, and to name people who have been promoted ahead of them.

The response has been a queer melange of protests against seemingly actual favoritism, and of spite answers from jealous and embittered malcontents.

Girl employes often are advanced for beauty, not brains, it is charged. There are such complaints as one about "discrimination against the color of one's hair or the shape of the nose."

Also, there's corroboration of the commonly-known fact that in the vast federal organization are numerous cliques which make promotions a matter of back-scratching.

MEANWHILE, WPA sleuths are making an investigation in Louisiana of charges aimed partly at Ellender. WPA has a rule that no one shall be compelled to leave WPA jobs to take private jobs at lower wages than WPA is paying.

But it is charged that in Louisiana Senator Ellender and others brought pressure which resulted in WPA workers being forced to take jobs on sugar cane plantations.

Most of these workers were promised $1.50 a day. They were paid as little as 75 cents a day, according to allegations, and company stores at which they were compelled to purchase overcharge them so that they had practically nothing left.

Ellender has a large sugar plantation, which is said to have the largest number of the WPA workers.

IMPORTANT item culled from days of anti-inching bill filibuster drive! Senator Reynolds of North Carolina: "Asheville, N. C., is 2300 feet above the blue waters of the Atlantic, and it rests beneath the shadows of Mount Mitchell, the highest peak east of the Rocky Mountains."

Senator Ellender of Washington: "Will the senator yield?" Senator Reynolds: "I gladly yield, if it will provide me with an opportunity to say more about one of the greatest states in the Union—North Carolina."

Senator Reynolds: "If my dear friend says that I said 2900 feet, he is right. I was speaking just now of one of the lower levels of my city."

A NEWS camera caught Hatton W. Summers, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee which recommended him to Roosevelt for the Supreme Court, with feet on his desk and a large hole showing in one sole.

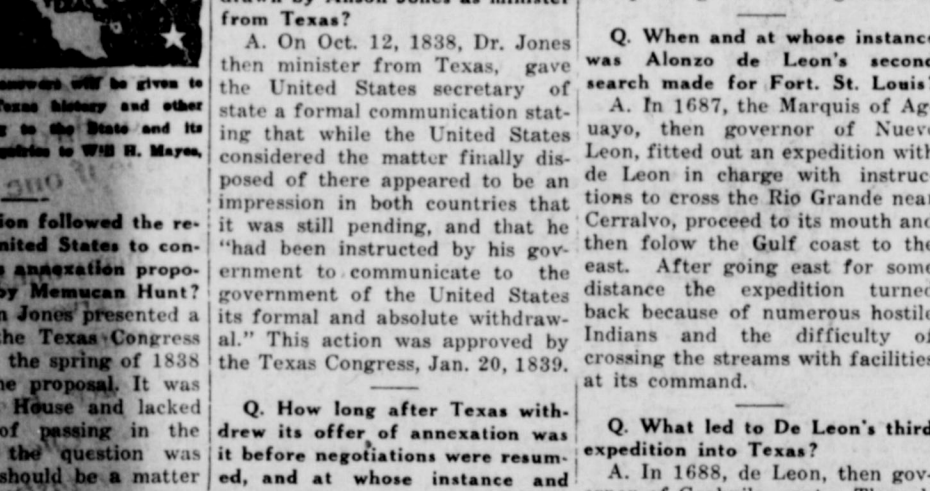

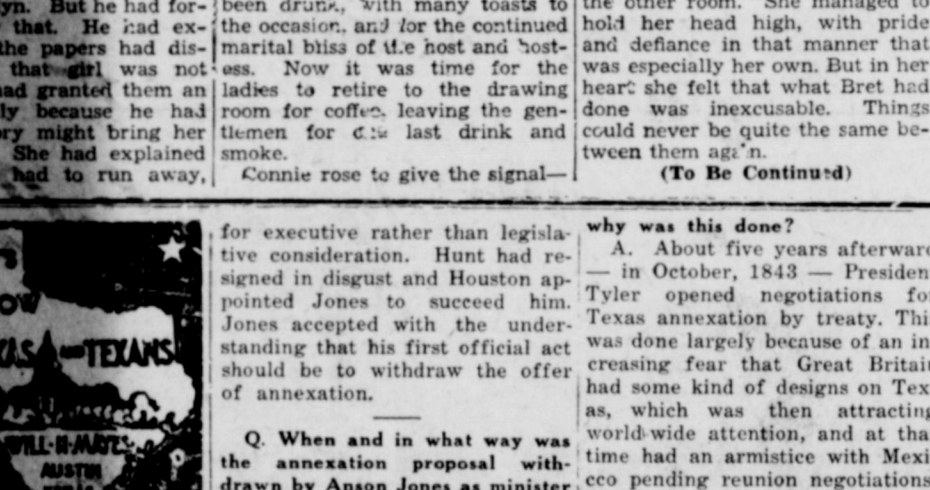

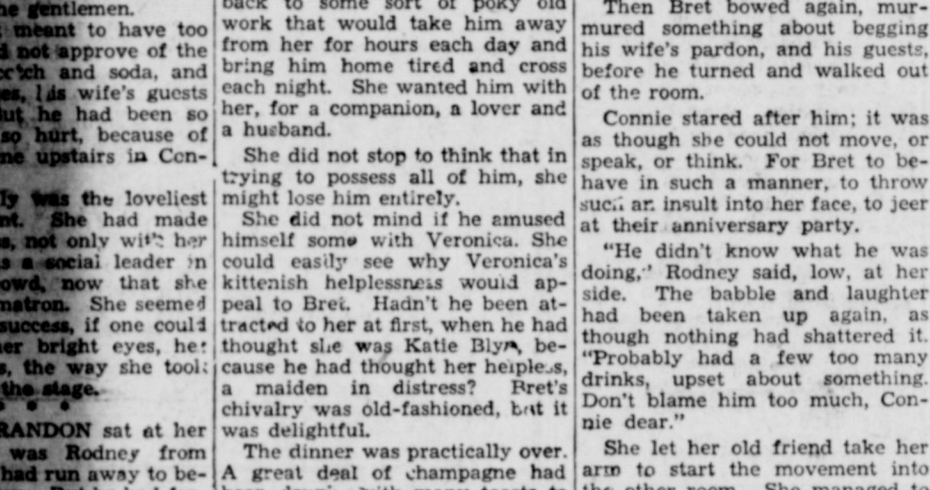

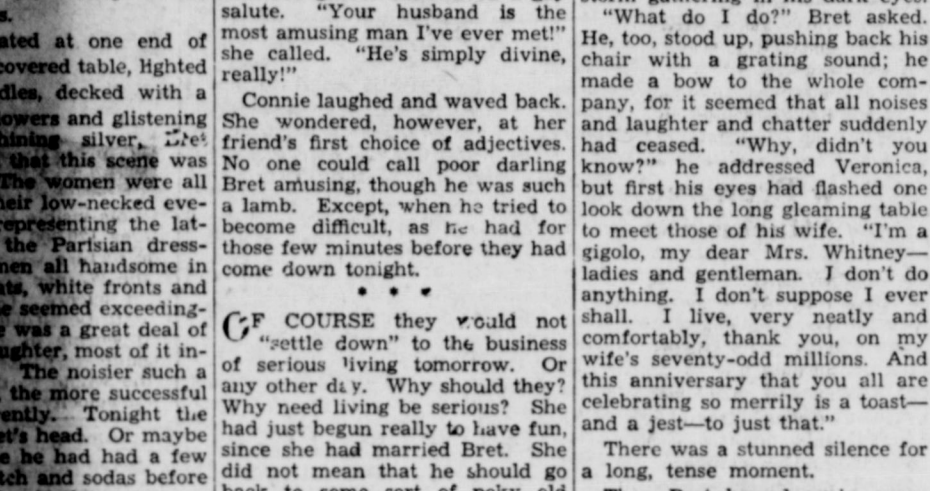

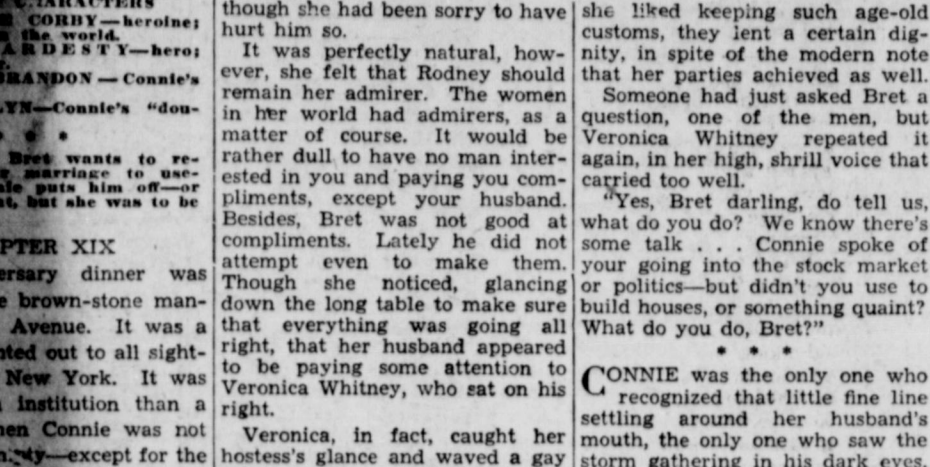

"I didn't suppose that hole would show," Summers telephoned the photographer. "But I've got a hole in the seat of my pants, too, in case you're interested in taking another picture."

THE LONG-TAUGHT "FACT" THAT ALL NEW-BORN CHILDREN HAVE BLUE EYES HAS BEEN DISPROVED!

CAREFUL EXAMINATIONS UNDER MODERN ILLUMINATION HAVE REVEALED ALMOST 100 DIFFERENT HUES OF THEIR EYES.

IN TEXAS, DURING THE PAST HOLIDAY SEASON, TUMBLEWEEDS, WIRED TOGETHER, AND SPRAYED WITH SILVER AND WHITE, WERE USED AS CHRISTMAS TREES.

THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA IS THE REMNANT OF A GREAT OCEAN THAT ONCE COVERED THE SAHARA DESERT.

EXAMINATIONS made at the Johns Hopkins University showed that out of 455 infants, only 28 had plain blue eyes. Examining a baby's eyes closely, with good illumination and a magnifying glass, and you will be able to see the real eye color shining through the cloudy, blue veil.

Texan Is Ranking Television Expert

AUSTIN, Texas. — Credit for being the country's ranking television expert is attributed to Robert Evert Shelby, formerly of Austin and a graduate of The University of Texas, by one of his former professors at that institution.

Joseph W. Ramsey, chairman of the department of electrical engineering, under whom Shelby did his major work at the university, says of him, "Most of the recent advance in the art of television in this country has been the result of work done by him or under his supervision."

Shelby was graduated from the university in 1927 with the degree of bachelor of science in electrical engineering. He immediately entered the employ of the Radio Corporation of America, and was assigned to the research laboratories of that concern in New York.

"Soon thereafter he became a member of the department investigating television," Professor Ramsey explained. "His natural talents as an electrical research man and as a director of the activities of others soon resulted in his being advanced to the position of chief of his department, where for several years he has headed up planned, and supervised the research work being done in that field."

Young Shelby is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Shelby of Austin, and the nephew of Dean T. H. Shelby of the University Division of Extension.
