Tracing the Descent of the Demagogue

Nothing ever stays put in the United States. Today's big shot, who shins painfully to the top of the flagpole...

This philosophical reflection was provoked by the news that Father Charles E. Coughlin had sold his newspaper, Social Justice...

It is not so long since no appraisal of public opinion was worth a nickel until Father Coughlin had been heard from. Millions of people hung on his words...

The man was up at the top—monarch, if not quite of all he surveyed, at least of some millions of listeners who clustered around the loudspeaker every week.

But inflation always seems to be followed by deflation, in this country. Now the radio broadcasts are ended, and the sizzling news paper is in other hands...

And the point is that this is just a sample of the way American life seems to work. Father Coughlin was a symbol; like Dr. Townsend, the Rev. Gerald Smith, Senator Huey Long and the rest of the great tribe of demagogues...

Where is Rev. Gerald, by the way? Gone to join the shadows, somewhere, a mute and inglorious Milton once again. Dr. Townsend, who once marshalled the pathetic bewilderment of some millions of aged folk...

For the confused social condition which produced these men—produced them, in the sense that it provided them with a ready-made audience—has changed. The best indication that the country has passed out of the depression is the fact that that audience has gone home.

We shall probably have another depression some day, and when it comes the old phenomenon will be repeated. New demagogues will arise and wax great, and new panaceas will be offered.

That boys want to become Scouts is vividly demonstrated by the Comanche Trail council's membership report of 830 members.

This figure, explained Dr. Jewel Daughety, president of the council, includes cubs, who are between the ages of 9 and 12, as well as Sea Scouts who are 15 or older, and their respective group leaders.

This is a record of growth which has continued unchecked from the day of the incorporation of the Boy Scouts of America, on Feb. 3, 1910, until the present date, stated Dr. Daughety.

Within the territory of the Comanche Trail council, including towns in the following counties: Stephens, Eastland, Erath, Comanche, Brown, Mills, San Saba, and Lampasas, there are 785 Scouts, 45 Cubs and 24 Sea Scouts, all of whom are led by the volunteer, inspired leadership of 213 men, respectively known as Scouters, Cubbers and Sea Scouters.

Throughout America, these figures show 734,853 Scouts and Lone Scouts, 81,539 Cubs, 18,821 Sea Scouts and 246,235 leaders operating in a total of 37,320 troops, packs and ships located in practically every town and hamlet in the land.

During the past 27 years, the scouting movement in America has touched the lives of more than 7,500,000 boys, many of whom are now grown men with sons who are Cubs, Scouts and Sea Scouts, in their turn, bringing scouting into the second generation of service to the boyhood of the country.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

Sunday School, 9:45 a. m. Morning worship, 11 a. m. Wednesday, testimonial service, 8 a. m.

Public cordially invited. "Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 14.

The Golden Text is: "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ" (Galatians 4:6,7).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory" (Colossians 3:4).

The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "In his resurrection and ascension, Jesus showed that a mortal man is not the real essence of manhood, and that this unreal material mortality disappears in presence of the reality" (page 292).

Moral Issue in the Drink Problem

Text: Romans 13:12-14; I Corinthians 6:9-11; Galatians 5:13-25

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance. THE moral issue in the drink problem, which is the theme of this lesson for International Temperance Sunday, is strongly emphasized at this time.

At one time it was the economic issue that was emphasized. This was true when the country was at war and every available source of economic wealth was necessary. The country then was strongly aroused to the matter of economic waste through drink, both on the part of the individual on human life, and by the waste of food stuffs in the manufacture of liquor.

It was then seen quite clearly that alcohol could confer no benefit upon individuals or nations, but that it might mean a very real economic loss.

This economic issue was also emphasized in the days of the country's prosperity when, broadly speaking, there was a place and need for every man's labor, and when those who were incapacitated through drink slowed down the process of production.

WHEN an artificial prosperity gave place to an artificial depression, when jobs were as scarce as they had been plentiful, and labor was cheap and unneeded, the economic argument against liquor lost much of its practical bearing.

There was a period also when the legal issue was emphasized in relation to liquor. Prohibition was the law of the land, and those who trafficked in liquor were law breakers. At that time the tendency was to put much of the stress upon the duty of the citizen as a citizen, to uphold the law and the Constitution.

The argument did not have much weight with those who wished to drink, and with those who were willing to engage in crime for the sake of profit, the indulgence of appetite, the legal argument has gone out of the repeal of prohibition.

Now once more we are faced with the moral issue of this crisis. There ought to be to have been any weakening of the moral emphasis, though should also be realized that moral emphasis is not the emphasis. That the prevalent sentiment in favor of total abstinence has weakened does not mean that alcoholic liquor is less the foe of humanity than ever was. Alcohol has still power to destroy men and weaken their efficiency economically, morally, and in every other way.

HERE in our lesson we have brought face to face with the problem in terms of sane, healthy living. It is not one matter of alcohol; but it is a matter of self-control, and of self-control in all one's habits and life. The appeal is especially to Christians and the Church, for the Christian life is one of self-mastery and sound relationships. The man who is led by the spirit of God will not indulge in evil things.

The lesson does not touch on the question of drinking in moderation, or what some would call the question of temperance against the question of total abstinence. It is not my purpose here to go into the controversy that might arise at this point.

One may, however, point to that considering all the evil of alcoholic liquor has wrought in the world, there is strong reason for the contention that Christian does not arise to full privilege in combating evil until he has refused to do anything to do with it at all. Total abstinence has logic on its side when he was against an evil habit and an evil traffic, his example gives to his own strength and consistency.

411 Attend Meets On Farm Troubles E. V. Cook Reports

A total of 411 persons attended 14 meetings this week for discussion of "what's wrong with agriculture," County Agent Elmo V. Cook reported Saturday.

"We had surprising good attendance at the meetings," stated Cook. "It has impressed agricultural officials that meetings on agricultural economic subjects should be held more often." At Flatwood Friday night W. I. Glass, district 7 extension agent of College Station, presided at the session, attended by 60 persons. The reports on the meetings will be sent by Cook to Glass. The meetings, as others in the nation, were at instance of national agricultural officials to learn the farmers' view of his ills, possible remedies and what they can do to aid the situation with and without government aid. Meetings were at Eastland, Shady Grove, Morton Valley, Colony, Okra, Romney, Rising Star, Nimrow, Dan Horn, Seranton, Pioneer, Alameda, Carbon and Flatwood. Those who conducted the meetings were Glass, County Agent Cook and Hugh F. Barnhart, agents, Miss Ruth Romney, Miss Cornelia Faye Stewart, cultural conservation agent, and Harry K. Westerman and national agricultural teachers, vocational agricultural teachers were T. G. Caudle of Cisco, Bush of Seranton, C. L. Williams of Rising Star.

Tobacco Belt Gets Sign of Prosperity As Prices Rise

By CHILES COLEMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
RALEIGH, N. C. —While the rest of the world is worrying over the fall of the cotton market, the North Carolina tobacco belt are experiencing one of the best seasons in history. Prices averaging from 6 to 8 cents a pound higher than last year and a record crop in the heel growers expect to produce 180,000,000 or more from the golden leaf. Less than the estimated crop of 200,000,000 pounds has been sold at the auction floors, but farmers have received $103 in cash from the sale of the big tobacco crop. It is the usual procedure to sell the low grade tobacco early in the season and save the choice for the final months; tobacco prices predict that the yet unsold part of the crop will bring higher prices. The marketing season continues through the month of Feb. 1. North Carolina produces about 40 per cent of American flue-cured tobacco. Most of it is grown on small farms, and it is all marketed in an open auction in upward

Layman Tools Used In Bone Surgery

PHILADELPHIA.—Physicians at Osteopathic Hospital here were forced to set aside their scientific surgical instruments, recently and use instead of a set of carpenter tools to perform a delicate bone grafting operation.
Mrs. Lillian Tappin, 60, suffered a broken arm in an automobile accident about a year and a half ago. The bone never set right because of injured nerves.
Drs. Edward G. Drew, Carl Frey and Robert Warden, reverted to the use of a common cold chisel, a hammer, electric saw and drill to take a piece of bone from her right leg and graft it to her useless arm.
The 50 North Carolina cities. The farmers haul wagon and truck loads of leaf to large warehouses, where it is stacked in long rows. Then the auctioneer and sets of buyers move down the rows, each pile being sold to the highest bidder.
Last year the average price paid for a pound of tobacco on North Carolina markets was slightly more than 22 cents. This season, the auctions opened at 25 cents a pound and have been steadily rising. Statisticians predict the average for the entire season will be nearly 35 cents a pound.

Fascists Parade to Honor Italians Killed in Spain

The Fascist legions drawn up in seemingly endless array on the Piazza Venezia, in Rome, provided the spectacular touch for impressive memorial services in honor of the Italian volunteers who fell in action in the Spanish conflict. The services were held as statesmen of Italy, France and Britain attempted to arrange for the withdrawal of all foreign troops from the contending armies in Spain.

Woman Bosses a Resort In Desert

By United Press
SALOME, Ariz.—Mrs. Addie Lee Van Orsdel, Salome's No. 1 citizen, probably is the only woman in the United States who controls destiny of an entire community.
Mrs. Van Orsdel is president of her own improvement company, founded several years ago to carry out plans originated by Salome's founder, Dick Wick Hall, to build a modern community and tourist resort in the middle of the desert.
The company purchased Hall's estate, the Salome townsite and several sections of land surrounding the desert spot and started a planned "business boom."
The first unit of her enterprise—a $50,000 modern adobe structure—now is open. A program under way provides for construction of 28 homes, to cost nearly $85,000, on the original townsite. A "municipal" airport is being laid out on property near the renovated city. A huge storage tank furnishes water under pressure, and workmen already have installed a power-plant for Mrs. Van Orsdel's town.

Salome's renovator plans to spend more than $250,000 in the desert community.
The money with which the community is being rebuilt was gathered when Mrs. Van Orsdel and her husband "struck rich" in the Arctic regions north of Mount McKinley, after the 1899 gold rush.
Van Orsdel's health failed and the couple came to Salome where they operated a service station and lunch room. After Van Orsdel died in 1933, his widow, inspired by tales of Dick Wick Hall's frog that was seven years old and couldn't swim and the grease-wood golf course which took 28 days to plant started work on her first project.
She built lean-tos on her resort building until, in her own words, "I had to get down on my hands and knees to crawl out the back door." The building had attained considerable size and could accommodate 100 guests at a time, when it burned in 1935. Undaunted, Salome's present owner began a second program.

Texas Game Supply May Be Increased

By United Press
AUSTIN, Texas.—Texas' game supply should be increased materially under grazing restrictions placed on 2,200,000 acres of University of Texas lease land.
The university's land agent will stipulate the number of cattle to graze on certain tracts, in that way restoring ranges and providing more food and cover for wild animals and birds.

Prison Pay Day Is Dramatic Event

By United Press
PLYMOUTH, Eng.—Three hundred convicts in Dartmoor prison, most famous in the world, have received their first payment under the new system of wages for men in penal servitude.
To avoid traffic in old coins which might be smuggled into prison, the men were paid in 1937 pennies. Many of them were handling money for the first time since their imprisonment, and some broke down and wept.
The previous night a provision van, packed with the little luxuries the convicts were allowed to buy, arrived in the outer courtyard of the prison. When the convicts orders were opened it was found nearly 90 per cent of them had asked for tobacco and pipes. So 200 cherrywood pipes and several pounds of twist and shag were delivered, and soon the smell of coarse tobacco filled the cells.
Men can now smoke anywhere in the prison, except in chapel, and one or two other prohibited areas. But as 70 per cent of them will receive less than 12 cents a week, they will have to make an ounce of tobacco, even at 14 cents, go a long way.
The few convicts who did not buy tobacco on their first payday bought small quantities of jam, butter and other provisions not on ordinary prison diet.
When the prison governor, Major C. T. Pannell, made his round during the morning, he was cheered excitedly by groups of convicts, despite the efforts of the warders to restrain the demonstration.
But the day did not end so happily for many. Unaccustomed for so long to tobacco, a number of the pipe smokers became sick.

Harvest Ends, So Does Family Bliss

By United Press
WINNIPEG—The conclusion of the harvest may be a period of rejoicing for most people and a season of national thanksgiving, but for officials of the city police court here it is nothing but a headache.
The end of the harvest means the return of husbands from the fields, and the return of husbands spells family quarrels.
"Look, said an official gloomily indicating a court docket of a recent day, "there begins the grief." Six cases of assault and battery were listed, together with two cases of non-support.
"This is nothing," he continued, "to what it will be in a few weeks time. When ever a husband starts hanging around the house, sticking his feet in the oven all day and taking the odd snifter of home brew at night, trouble is bound to result."

Toy Drum Capital Has Unusual History

GRANVILLE, Mass.—This remote hilltop town, home of perhaps the world's largest toy drum factory, was bought from an Indian chief for an old musket and six brass muskets.
In 1854, 68 years after James Cornish purchased the hills from Chief Toto, James P. Cooley started a drum factory in his kitchen. Today the Noble & Cooley factory produces 300,000 drums annually and provides employment for most of the town's 100 families.

BARRY WENTWORTH, Jill's stepbrother.
JACK WENTWORTH, Jill's brother.
SYLVIA SUTTON, oil heiress.

Yesterday Mrs. Wentworth found her husband dead and Barry standing over him with a marble paperweight in his hand. Immediately she sends Barry to bed to prevent suspicion. Later the house is intruded but Jill is absent.

CHAPTER XXII

EVEN in that moment of abandonment to grief, Jack had a sense of duty. He must be summoned.

It was now past 8. The family physician was in the study and with him a group of men from the police headquarters. A sense of tragedy and loss hung over the house, which only a few hours before had resounded to mirth and gaiety.

A step away from the room where men talked in muted tones, Jack sat with his mother and father. His arm encircled Mrs. Wentworth comfortably. His other arm reached out until his hand touched the shoulder of his stepbrother lightly, compassionately.

Jack's face was drawn with suffering. He wanted to believe as his stepmother said, that his father had died from a heart attack. But there was the position of the body on the rug, head up, with an open wound on his head. If his father had fallen and struck his head, he would have been lying face downward. Unless someone had moved him.

And if someone had been with his father, who was that person? The inspector had learned that the heavy paperweight his father had used was missing. Why?

"Mr. Wentworth," Inspector Waldrop was standing in the door. "We've reached our conclusions," the inspector said. "We agree with Dr. Lockwood that your father died of heart failure as a result of shock. Jack felt his mother stiffen against him and Barry's shoulder relax a little under his hand.

"But, we believe," the inspector continued, "that shock was the result of being struck suddenly by some heavy object."

He broke off, his eyes sweeping the trio. "It will be necessary to question the staff of servants, and talk with members of the family also. You are the only members of the family?"

"We three and my sister." "I should like to talk with your sister," Inspector Waldrop said. "Routine. But necessary. You understand."

"Miss Dexter, please awaken my sister," Jack spoke briefly.

He became aware that Miss Dexter's usually expressionless countenance was working with emotion, and that her eyes were fixed on his strangely. He seemed to read in her queer gaze a struggle to communicate something.

When she made no move to leave, Jack began again: "Miss Dexter—And then as something clicked in his brain, "wait, I'll go for Jill. I believe it would be best for me to break it to her."

"Do you mean the girl doesn't know her own father?" Inspector Waldrop stopped in sheer astonishment.

"We thought it was kinder to wait," Jack answered sternly. As he walked away, Miss Dexter got to her feet and pattered after him. Jack whirled. "Then you were trying to tell me something."

"Oh yes, Mr. Jack. You see, Miss Jill isn't in her room."

"Yes. Everything is in a whirl. She's gone."

He went back to the sunroom. "The secretary has just informed me that my sister went out early. Probably to some breakfast or other."

He realized his words were falling strangely, uncertainly. He saw amazement in his mother's eyes, a queer glint in Barry's and stark unbelief in Inspector Waldrop's.

JILL absent! What could it mean? Why had she gone? Why of all mornings in the world should Jill have left the house when any unusual act would be regarded with suspicion. And this was not merely unusual. It was something so bewildering that even he—Jill's brother—could find no explanation for it. Though, of course, there was one.

He felt Inspector Waldrop's eyes on him. "Where's the telephone?" the inspector asked abruptly.

Jack silently led the way from the room.

Inspector Waldrop said gravely: "I might as well be honest with you, Mr. Wentworth. I tried to spare your mother the shock. We're certain this is an inside job. That marble paperweight we found, by mere accident, shoved in between some magazines."

"I think you're all crazy," Jack muttered hoarsely. "What do you make out of that?"

"The man who cleans your father's study is positive that it was there yesterday morning, holding down some papers," Inspector Waldrop replied slowly. Jack did not reply.

"I understand the servants come on about 6.30. Is that correct?"

"Generally. Sometimes later, after a party that had kept them all here very late."

"I see. We've questioned the head gardener, who apparently, is deaf, dumb and blind to everything. Willis, and his wife gave some information. They were both awake at six o'clock—the time Miss Dexter and Mrs. Wentworth heard the sound of a fall, and also the time Mr. Wentworth's watch stopped. It was broken by the fall. Willis and his wife say the two German police dogs couldn't have allowed a stranger to enter the grounds without an infernal racket. Is that right?"

JACK answered slowly: "Yes, they're good watch dogs."

"Furthermore, there was someone with your father during the evening who smoked a cigarette. There are cigarette ashes on the smoking stand by a chair that is close to your father's desk. Close enough for the person in a fit of anger to have reached out and found the marble paperweight handy. Now, Mr. Montagne doesn't smoke cigarettes. Neither does your father. We've learned they were in conference together."

"I'm afraid all that is mighty flimsy evidence that dad was struck down, inspector."

"Maybe. But finally the servant who made his rounds after the ball found Mr. Wentworth alone in his study. He went about setting things in order, and he swears there were no ashes in the tray on the stand. I understand that you, your brother, and your sister do smoke cigarettes."

"Barry and I—," Jack began and hesitated.

"Your sister does not smoke?"

"Jill doesn't smoke generally. I've seen her take a cigarette on occasions. Very rarely. She doesn't like them."

"But under nervous excitement—"

"We must question your sister," Waldrop resumed. "We must know the reason why she left home before it was gone! daylight on a cold, snowy morning without a word to a member of her family."

He turned to the telephone. Jack stood like stone while the inspector spoke professionally into the receiver: "Call all cars with instruction to pick up Jill Wentworth, who is driving a custom built tan Pierce . . . the license number is . . ."

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH BODNEY BLITCHER

BY DANA X. BIBLE

Head Coach, University of Texas

AUSTIN—Arkansas has the ball on its 10-yard line late in the game, with the score favoring the Razorbacks, 7-3. The University of Texas defense is set for the punt which it believes Quarterback Dwight Sloan is sure to call.

Sloan drops back in long punt formation, and what does he do? If you know Southwest Conference football and particularly the Arkansas Razorbacks, the answer is easy. Sloan passes, of course, to one of his towering ends, for a gain that moves his team out of danger.

That is the type of daredevil football spectators see week after week in the southwest. Unorthodox? Certainly. Unsound? Wait a minute.

When Sloan called that pass, he KNEW the Longhorns weren't going to intercept it. This cool, steady young man, superb passer that he is, was running no more risk of giving the ball to Texas than he would of having a punt blocked and possibly recovered for the Longhorns' win if touchdown. He knew where he was throwing the ball.

When you have a passer who rarely ever costs you more than a down, and quite often connects for gains that eat up yardage in huge chunks, it certainly is sound strategy to take advantage of his talent.

FORWARD passing yearly is becoming more popular in football, and the southwest has headed the parade.

In the southwest some teams build their entire offense around the forward pass. In defeating Texas, 21-10, Arkansas threw 36 passes and completed 18, with only two intercepted and both those deep in Longhorn territory. Approximately every other play was a pass.

Throughout a three-game stretch the Baylor Bears passed for six consecutive touchdowns.

Why is the pass so popular in the southwest? First, we have the passers. Boys throw a lot in this section. Football in the fall and winter. Baseball in the spring and summer.

The weather influences the game in this vicinity.

In the north, east, midwest, and Pacific northwest, a coach wouldn't dare build his attack around passing.

IN the southwest bad weather is strictly the exception. There may be rainy Saturdays, but the real passing team is not seriously bothered. To refer again to Arkansas, most typical of the passing teams, the Razorbacks clinched the 1936 conference championship on a field ankle-deep in water, with rain falling in sheets—by marching nearly the length of the field on passes from Sloan to Benton and finally scoring the day's lone touchdown by the same route.

Receivers are as important as passers, and these woods are full of good ones.

Sammy Baugh refuses to admit that professional receivers are superior to the boys he pitched to at Texas Christian.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox
NEA Service Staff Writer

A LITTLE meat goes a long way in a rich soup. Dried beans and peas also spread their valuable proteins generously over the soup plate. And there is no good reason why such a soup should not be made into the main course for a nutritious family dinner.

How do these dinner menus sound to the woman who is determined to cut her meat costs without cutting the family protein nourishment?

1.—Lentil soup, toasted salines with grated cheese, salad bowl of chickery, endive, tomatoes, cucumber and hard cooked eggs, rye bread and butter, pumpkin salt and pepper to taste, 2 quart water, 1 cup cream.

2.—Italian vegetable soup (Minestrone), Waldorf salad, popovers, floating island, cup cakes, coffee or milk.

3.—Lentil soup, 1-4 small head firm cabbage, 2 cups string beans, 1 cup dried pea beans, 3-4 cup fresh peas, 1-4 pound noodles, 1-4 pound spaghetti, 1-2 quart water, 3-4 tablespoons salt, 1-2 teaspoon pepper.

Soak dried pea beans overnight. Slice string beans into 1-2 inch pieces. Dice potatoes and shred cabbage. Add salt to water and bring to boil. Add pea beans and boil 20 minutes. Then add all the other ingredients and cook until tender, about 25 minutes. Just before serving, add these extras which are really very important to the fine flavor of the soup: 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons olive oil, 1-2 cup bread crumbs, 1-2 cup cheese, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley and a little finely minced garlic. Stand soup for a minute or two, then serve in large dishes. There's nothing dainty about this affair—it needs elbow room. Pass a bowl of grated parmesan cheese and encourage each member of the family to spread a large portion of it over the top of the hot and fragrant soup.

4.—Lentil Soup (4 to 6 servings)
Three cups dried lentils, 2 large onions, 2 tablespoons bacon drippings, 4 stalks celery, 1 large carrot, 1 large bunch celery tops and parsley tied with white string, salt and pepper to taste, 2 quart water, 1 cup cream.

Wash lentils very thoroughly. Soak in cold water. Rinse in large pot place lentils and all the other ingredients except the cream. Simmer until lentils are tender. Stir mash through sieve. To lentil pulp, add cream. Serve with slices of cooked frankfurter or with small squares of toaster bread.

Monday's Menu
BREAKFAST: Sliced oranges, wheat cereal, saw brown sugar and cream, scrambled eggs, toast, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Tomato juice, French toast, bacon, eating apples, tea, milk.

DINNER: Cream of lima bean soup, salad bowl of lettuce, diced oranges, sliced bananas and grapes, French dressing, toasted rolls, peanut butter, rich chocolate cake, coffee, milk.

LET'S KNOW TEXAS - TEXANS

WILL H. MAZES, AUSTIN, TEXAS

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mazes, Austin, Texas.

Q. What drastic steps did General McKenzie take to stop Indian raids into Texas from the Fort Sill reservation?

A. General McKenzie correctly reasoned that Indians would not make raids except on horseback and that it was better to kill their horses than for the Indians to slaughter white people. So he captured and killed some 1,500 of their horses in Tule Canyon in 1874 at what came to be known as "McKenzie's Bone Yard."

Q. How early did Texas take steps for elementary public education and in what way was this done?

A. When the constitution of the state of Coahuila and Texas was adopted in 1827, it contained a provision that: "In all towns of the State a suitable number of primary schools shall be established, where in shall be taught reading, writing and arithmetic, the catechism of the Christian religion, a brief and simple explanation of the constitution of the State and that of the Republic, the rights and duties of man in society, and whatever else may conduce to the better education of youth."

Q. What distribution was made of the effects of the Mexican Army captured at San Jacinto?

A. The property was ordered sold and the enemy's military chest divided among the officers and men of the Texas Army as partial compensation for their ser-VICES. The amount so divided was $18,184.87 of which $3,000 were by the troops awarded to the Navy.

Q. When and by whom was Laredo established?

A. Laredo, on the north bank of the Rio Grande del Norte, and about 10 leagues above the village of Dolores on the south bank, was settled May 15, 1755, by Thomas Sanchez, under authority of Joseph D. Escandano, who held a grant covering that territory, issued in 1746.

Missouri Tries Parole Reform

By United Press

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., — A new board of paroles and probations created to give Missouri a "model" parole administration similar to the federal government's has begun its search for the "forgotten man" in the Missouri penitentiary.

The board, successor to a single commissioner, will study the records of 4,500 Missouri convicts, with the view of recommending releases to Gov. Lloyd C. Stark for all who have "reformed." The board also will have jurisdiction over releases from the four state reformatories.

Sponsors of the law creating the board said they were moved by a desire to give all reformed convicts a chance for supervised freedom without regard to politics. They also pointed out that a good parole law would relieve the crowded conditions at the Missouri prison.

For those prisoners whose recommendations are acted upon favorably by the governor the board will provide a supervisory program through a staff of parole officers. Circuit courts also may call on the board officers to supervise persons on bench parole who never reach the penitentiary.

The three-member board is composed of two members appointed by the governor, with the lieutenant governor as ex-officio chairman.

Algebra Is Added to Tests for Firemen

By United Press

CLEVELAND.— Future Cleveland firemen must be more intellectual, the civil service commission has ruled.

Following a poor showing of applicants for police jobs, Lawrence J. Young, secretary of the commission announced: "In the past, fire department applicants could have two years high school or the equivalent, which meant anyone could take the civil service examination for firemen. This time there will be more than 400 questions in a three-hour examination. References are Hughes' 'Building Citizenship,' Magruder's 'American Government,' Lake's 'Exploring the World of Science' and any elementary algebra textbook."

The discovery of new shotgun pellets to keep ducks from dying of lead poisoning should be a great consolation to the duck hunters who want to keep the fowl from dying out of range.

British Vessel to Mark Arctic Whales

By United Press

LONDON.—The royal research ship, William Scoresby, has left here on its seventh commission to mark whales in the Ant-arctic. This year it is leaving earlier than usual so as to mark whales north of South Georgia before the whaling season begins.

Lieut. R. C. Wrenker, in command, is making his fourth voyage on the ship.

"She is a small ship of only 324 tons gross," he said, "but she is built especially for the job and she is a good sea boat. There are 23 of us aboard and we should be a lot more if we were able to take all those who wanted to go along. We do not carry a ship's doctor, so we require a high standard of fitness from every member of the crew.

"For most of the time we shall be 1,000 miles from land, and we shall have sailed about 20,000 miles when we get back."

"Later the men will be issued special warm clothing. It will be summer when we reach the Ant-arctic, but the temperature, all the same, will never be more than a few degrees above freezing."

Whales are marked with a special dart. When a marked whale is taken by a whaler, the dart is sent to the Colonial Office with particulars of the place and time at which the whale was killed, the sender receiving a small reward. Last year nearly 900 whales were marked from the William Scoresby.

Indian Headdress Collected by Woman

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Halo hats worn by girls of today have had their day in India.

Mrs. Boggs has many other exotic pieces of headgear and hair ornaments in her collection, including a brass carrying weighing three pounds, and many other comparatively smaller earrings of amber and bone, which also were worn by Assamese women.
