EMPLOYMENT OF ADDITIONAL WORKERS CONTRIBUTING TO EXTRA HOLIDAY CIRCULATION

Contributing to the increased circulation of money during the Chratmas season throughout the nation is the employment of extra clerks; that likewise is true of Eastland

Many extra clerks and other workers have been engaged by Eastland merchants to handle the holiday business transactions.

The additional employes are now on hand to serve far sighted buyers who do their shopping early and those who wait until the annual holiday is more near.

More Peace 'Lunacy' Is Needed by World

Probably is was inevitable that the man who interrupted the Armistice Day ceremonies in London should be locked up as a lunatic. Probably he really was a lunatic. But there was nothing particularly insane about what he

The king and all the big-wigs were there, drawn up in orderly files about the World War Cenotaph. The heartmoving period of silence had begun, and all over Britain men and women were standing in quiet remembrance of the men who had been killed.

Then, suddenly and dramatically, a bareheaded man is a raincoat rushed forward, jostled his way through the lines of soldiers and sailors, reached a spot within a yard of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, and cried in a loud voice:

"Stop all this hypocrisy! You're deliberately preparing for a new war!"

Well, of course, they gave the man the bum's rush. Away he went in the hands of the coppers. When the period of silence ended, the crowd began to yell, "Kill him!" But he was taken away unharmed; and later, in the House of arliament, Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare announced that the disturber "was obviously suffering from a delusion" Pand would be kept under observation

So that ended that. Probably the man really was really was crazy; for hardly any of our eminently sane leaders seem to be lifting their voices these days in protest against the increasing danger of war. Yet it is hard to avoid the feeling that we could stand a good deal more of this praticular kind of lunacy.

If you are old enough to remember 1918, you will recall how devoutly and wholeheartedly the world yearned for an enduring peace when the World War ended. Millions upon millions of them had been killed, civilization had been shoved to the very edge of the abyss, and enough ordinary, heartbreaking human suffering to make the angels weep for a century had been inflicted on the race.

One would think that people who had any sense at all would have resolved that whatever happened, they weren't going to go through that again. Once and for all, that experience should have been enough to show that no action men can take is as completely insane as the action which plunges them into a world war.

and Armistice Day came around again, and people stood in silence to honor their dead and renew the vow that it should not happen again; and all the while the great fleets were being built up, and the air squadrons were being enlarged, and the armies were drilling, and the new war was visibly drawing closer.

Is it any wonder that one man was driven to interrupt the ceremony with a desperate cry of protest? It did no good, of course. He was "suffering from a delusion." But he must have made at least a few people wonder uneasily just who was being insane.

"A fellow is foolish to get a college education and then become a pro golfer," says Willie Turnesa, who is aiming for a law career, ollowing his graduation in June.

Last summer, Willie Turnesa repeated in the New England intercollegiate, where his 139 took the medal for the second straight year. He repeated in the Westchester county, N. Y., amateur, and bagged taken up first at the special sestion. The farm bill was scheduled 4½ per cent interest, lend money national intercollegiate. He led qualifiers for the national open from the metropolitan area by flashing a 143. With Virginia Gilfoyle, he took the medal in the national mixed foursomes.

WILLIE, the Turnesa collegian, was edged out in the Jess Sweetser W victory memorial tournament at Wingfoot as Ray Billows un-leashed a 283. With Udo Reinach he attained the final of the John G. Anderson memorial four-ball only to have Eddie Driggs hole out a chip shot on the 18th to grab the bacon. In the national amateur at Portland, Ore., he knocked off a dozen who tied for the qualifying spot, only to lose in the final playoff.

Young Turnesa's peak achievement of the season was breaking Bobby Jones' course record at Winged Foot with a 68. "Golf is a matter of momentum," asserts Willie Turnesa. "The but it is uncertain whether the made clear his desire to have these main thing is to get away to a good start, and set a steady pace. full program recommended by Mr.

There are days when you can't seem to do anything wrong, when long putts are seeking the cup, when chip shots are finding the can from 50 feet out, and every stroke seems to fill the prescription.

WILLIE TURNESA can't see how John Montague can be so much better than the top-ranking golfers as stories claim.

"Our better pros have achieved practically maximum effectiveness," and I don't believe that Montague or anyone else can beat them consistently," he explains. "In my own case, the 68 at Winged Foot was about as close to rock bottom as it is possible to come on that course, and, honestly, I don't see how Montague could improve on it much. regardless of his tools."

Willie's idea is that professionals are better medal competitors, but lack the aggressiveness of amateurs.

Perhaps that is because they play for the dough, which Willie, to as credit, hopes to obtain in another line.

Wide-awake officiating keeps hookey speedy and open and the glistening game has sufficient body contact to be highly entertaining without the combatants having to belabor one another about the TOHN MONTAGUE'S appearance in a charity golf match got the professionals to talking about the relative merits of the fore-most in their ranks. To these worthies, who know the genuine from the gilded, the center of praise, or critic sm, still is Henry Cotton.

"Cotton is a great player—in England," observes Horton Smith, the scholarly Joplin star. "On his honie course he is capable of beating most anyone most of the time. There he has a decided advantage over American players. The we wind, and courses

all call for a different type of play

"But Cotton on this side would be just one of the first 15," Smith prophesies. "Many of us would beat him half of the time. At least 10 of us would win most of the time, and Harry Cooper would beat him pine times out of 10."

Every professional discussion of golf manages to swing around to the sparsely-thatched Cooper, leading money-winner again this year, daddy of them all year in and year out, and now the model of more good golfers than any other fairway figure.

WITH drep-kicking a supposedly lost art, Bill Lynch of Princetor created considerable excitement by scoring from the 25-yard line against Dartmouth by that antiquated route.

And those who saw Bronxville high school beat Fordham Prep by two after-touchdown drop-kicks felt that they were watching history in the making, for the kicker was Charles Brickley, Jr., with his father, the immortal Harvard star, looking on proudly. Young Brickley put on quite a show before the game, drop-kicking of after another squarely over the cross-bar, just as his daddy did prior to Crimson contests of his day.

It probably will take another Brickley to bring drop-kicking back

They've sprouted out of our well-cultivated gridiron grasslands in every section of the country. No, we don't know what's caused them to bob up in such numbers. All we know is there are a couple dozen or more highly-geared youngsters who are fairly oozing with signs of gridiron greatness.

Take Wild Bill Hutchinson, for instance. You won't find a more dangerous ball-carrier anywhere than the Indians' 175-pound fullback star. If ever a man has sparked his team to success, Hutchin-

GOOD first-year backs are a drug on the market. Minnesota is loud in her praise of Harold Van Every. So is everyone else he has played against.

Fred Trosko has been Michigan's margin of victory halfback in the three Wolverine victories this year. And he does it with only 154 pounds at his disposal. Jimmy Crowley of Fordham rubs his hands with glee every time

Dom Principe goes into action. The Ram halfback is a ball player from the word go, and he'd just as soon block as carry the mail. Speaking of blocking, Army offers Art Frontczac, a young husky who has no peer in the east at blasting the pins from underneath pesky linemen. He operates at halfback and is built for heavy duty. Merlyn Condit of Carnegie Tech is another who is gifted with triple-threat ability. Good fullbacks are a tradition at Minnesota, and Marty Christiansen is a 220-pound husky whose pile-driving excursions into the line are highly reminiscent of Joesting. Nagurski, Manders, Kostka, Smaller but faster is Jack Ryan, Jr., Northwestern fullback, son of the old-time Dartmouth All-America end Not only is he a good plunger, but he's a good passer as well.

VERY fine ends are Don Looney and Durwood Horner of Texas Christian and Bob Daly of Northwestern. All are big, strong, and glue-fingered pass receivers. The Wildcats also have an outstanding tackle in 210-pound Nick Cutlich, who broke into the lineup in the early part of the year.

Bill Heater of Syracuse and Bill Kirchem of Tulane, both of whom stand well above six feet and weigh in at 215 or thereabouts, are tackles who should go far. Navy boasts Jack Bergner, only 190, but labeled as terrific.

THE feast of Thanksgiving is over. Let's take a thought today of those members of the family who seem below par in general health. Many children and adults, although seemingly normal, actually suff m anaemia. Secondary anae....a, as it is professionally called, usually comes as a result of some disease such as nephritis, heart condition, diabetes or hemorrhage It comes also from a general run down condition or from undernourishment.

The anaemic member of your family will have a low red blood count and needs plenty of food containing iron and high in vitamins. He needs also lots of calories because he likely is underweight. Liver is usually fed daily. It tests a mother's skill to think up many ways of serving liver so as not to bore the patient. NECESSARY FOODS: Apples, apricots, peaches, prunes, raisins, pineapple, beef kidneys, beef, lamb or chicken livers, spinach, lamb or chicken livers, spinach, parsley, walnuts, watercress, lima beans or lentils. It is advisable to omit all rich pastries, fried foods, jellies and marmalades and highly seasoned foods. Give plenty of milk and eggs and all green foods rich in vitamins. Be sure all food is fresh and see that it is attractively served.
