ITALIANS ARE PREPARED FOR LAST DRIVE

By United Press GENEVA, April 30.—Diplomatic advisers from Rome, unconfirmed, today said the Italian foreign office had been advised Addis Ababa has been captured.

Italian armies closed in relentlessly today on the defeated army of Emperor Haile Selassie and the occupation of Addis Ababa and complete conquest of the last independent kingdom in Africa appeared to be in sight.

Just north of the capitol two Italian motorized units were only 60 miles away. The emperor sent his troops back from the front and ordered the capitol should be left undefended and the government moved out.

ORDER CLEARS LAST HURDLE OF THE WETS

Plaintiff Sought To Show Election Was Same As Held on January 3.

Ninety-first District Court Judge George L. Davenport dissolved Thursday an injunction issued on Monday to restrain County Judge Clyde L. Garrett from hearing applications for permits to retail beer.

Judge Garrett was informed by counsel, in view of the court's decision, that it was his duty to hold hearings on the application of retailers for permits to sell beer.

L. H. Welch of Breckenridge, attorney for the plaintiffs, Joe J. Mickle, Omar M. Mickle, P. L. Parker and J. F. McWilliams of Eastland, and more than 400 voters, contended that the April 18 election in which sale of 14 percent beverages was legalized was a re-submission of the 4 percent proposition rejected Jan. 3.

F. D. Wright of Cisco pointed out that three specific issues can be submitted voters on the liquor question. The first, he said, was voting for 4 percent alcoholic content beverages, the second, 14 percent beverages and the third for all propositions.

Neglectful Parents Produce Criminals

The oldest arrow in the quiver of the experienced criminal lawyer is the picture of a gray-haired mother weeping over the waywardness of her unfortunate son.

Any reporter who has covered very many criminal court trials can tell you all about it. The thing which is being tried will sit at the trial table, doing his level best to wear an innocent more-sinned-against-than-sinning look...

It is all very pretty and inspiring, of course. But it is about time that someone spoke up and inquired why mother isn't right there in the dock along with sonny boy, facing trial on her own account.

J. Edgar Hoover, renowned head of the G-Men, told the New York Round Table Forum the other day that an amazing number of the crimes charged to our underworld these days should really be charged to the underworldings' parents.

Some 20 per cent of all our crime, said Mr. Hoover, is committed by lads who are not yet old enough to vote. Practically all of them come from homes where papa and mama just couldn't be bothered to enforce discipline...

Worse yet, continued Mr. Hoover when one of these wayward boys does get into a jam with the law, his parents come down to court with only one thought in mind—to get him out of trouble.

They weep over him and cuddle up to him and save him, if they can, from paying the penalty for his misdeeds; all right if he goes out and steals another car or sticks up another filling station as long as the law doesn't catch him.

The attack on crime, then, Mr. Hoover concludes, must begin with "a reconstruction of the American viewpoint toward better parental discipline and a greater sense of law abidance beginning in the home."

This is so undeniably true as to be self-evident. Yet it is the one step we usually overlook when we talk about wiping out the underworld.

The police courts, jails, penitentiaries, and death chambers of our land tell an unspeakably tragic story; and it is a story which, in the vast majority of cases, begins back in some American home in which the father and the mother made a terrible mess of their most important job.

Back of almost every criminal stands a parent who failed. Carmella Ponselle's shrieks summoned New York firemen to a blaze. They must have been amazed to learn it was a real fire, and not just another soprano.

FOLLY and FAREWELL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
LINDA BOURNE, 20 years old, pretty and socially prominent in the little town of Newtown, is not usually penniless after the sudden death of her father.

She becomes friendly with FRANK GARDNER, political reporter, and shows him a scenario she has written. Peter gets Linda to join his society reporter.

LINDA, with whom Linda is in love, goes abroad for a year. Her letters are far less frequent, and Linda tries to forget her, but postpones the date of the wedding.

Peter writes a play, submits it to a producer who tells him to "go Hollywood."

HONEY HARMON, film actress, comes to Newtown on a "personal appearance" tour.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER VIII

NEWTOWN didn't close its shops the day Honey Harmon arrived. She had her cinematic glory over its quiet environs. Nor did it miss her train with the keys to the town. But what the town lacked in welcome, the residents made up by their massed attendance at the Palace. Complete from whole families to Linda Bourne and Peter Gardner, they waited patiently for the tickets that would give them a first-hand knowledge of what a real movie star could do, as an entertainer.

Fortunately there was little chance to see how lovely one small, golden-haired dynamo could be in the flesh. A glittering halo in her famous blond hair, a sheath of white satin, a coat of snowy ermine and the famous diamond bracelets all well by the picture, but the husky tones that only Honey Harmon boasted were lost. The rose and mouth smiled appealingly. Her eyes looked out sadly from under nearly-inch-long blackened eyelashes while Honey's manager explained to a disappointed audience that Honey was ill. Brave little thing that she was, she felt she could not let her public down, but speak she could not. A cold had developed into something serious and she had lost her voice. She spread her hands, bowed and blew them kisses and became less real to them than her shadowed self that appeared later on the screen.

Pete, sitting beside Linda in the darkened theater, was, for once, more conscious of the picture than the girl beside him. He watched the screen with absorbed attention, and slipped the ever ready scrap of paper from his pocket to make surreptitious notes on the figure of the famous heroine glided, swept and stormed across the silver sheet. "Bravo!" he said once under her breath.

THAT night, when the picture was over, Pete literally dragged Linda to the Mason House, Newtown's leading hotel, for supper. He said, "And when they had ordered the usual chicken sandwich and coffee, he excused himself and made a bee-line for the desk. Was Miss Harmon staying there?

She was, but she had gone directly from the theater to the Newtown Hospital. The cold in her throat was as serious as her manager had claimed. When Pete heard this he smiled with satisfaction. Hardly an expression one would expect at such news.

Pete did not mention his visit to the hotel desk to Linda. Nor did he tell her that the next morning he ordered—after personally selecting them—a box of long-stemmed roses sent to Miss Honey Harmon, Newtown Hospital. And with it enclosed a card marked simply: "You were charming last night."
—Peter Gardner.

That day he made two telephone calls to the hospital. Miss Harmon had lost her voice quite completely. Yes, it was likely that she would remain for a few days.

Pete waited a few days. Then, three days later, dressed to what he called "the gills" (by which he meant his shoes were neatly shined, his English suit well-pressed and he wore a low stiff collar) he presented his card at the hospital after scribbling "Representing the Newtown Blade" across his name.

HONEY looked like a picture titled "Hollywood Star Receives Reporter in Hospital." A little-girl hair ribbon bound the golden hair that flowed over a lace pillow. The darkened lashes dropped shadows on her unrouged cheeks.

"Please don't try to talk," Pete said hungrily, looking at her face. She looked back at him, not so hungrily but appraisingly. This was nice.

"But I can," she said with a throaty business. "And I want to. The flowers were divine. And I adored the message."

Pete looked embarrassed. "I didn't know I was going to have to come to see you officially when I sent them." He said it quite simply.

"Here to come?" she asked with a questioning smile.

"Say, you don't think I'd have dared to come on my own?" He managed to make it sound the way the words might.

"Oh, you've come from the paper?" She pouted.

"They want a story about your illness. I don't usually do this sort of thing, but they wanted . . ."

"Pete was becomingly modest—"well, you know, they took me off a big story to get it."

"Oh, you're the star reporter?" She sat at the feet of a great man.

"Nonsense," answered Pete, and proceeded to act like a star reporter for the next 10 minutes while he questioned and made voluminous notes. He wrote and Honey watched. She broke off one of the long-stemmed roses and played with it, trailing it across the satin coverlet.

"You've been a peach to let me take up so much of your time," he said when he finished the 10th page.

"You're a peach to come and see a sick girl," Honey said softly, and added, "Please don't go. It's terribly lonely here all by myself. Tell me about yourself."

Pete wasn't ready yet to tell her about himself, so he asked some more questions about her.

But when she had finished telling him about the finishing school in the east, the year dear Papa died, and how frightfully hard it was for Mumsie to get along on $15,000 a year, how Honey herself had gone into a beauty contest for a lark and won it, she came back to the subject of Pete. This was the first time she had met a man who actually fitted the Hollywood version of the tall, striking, silent newspaperman. Honey was tired of producers and juveniles.

"Why did you say you 'wouldn't dare' to come to see me if the paper hadn't sent you?" She managed to wriggle the rose into his lapel.

WHEN Pete had finished telling her why he wouldn't dare and she had invited him to come and see her the next day, it was well after 7 and Pete had promised to be at Linda's house for supper at 6:30.

"Are we going to a party?" Linda asked when she saw the stiff collar and the rose in his lapel.

"None," he said and that was all. Linda wrinkled her nose delicately as a wave of perfume (not the kind she would have used) wafted from Pete's coat, but she said nothing about it.

Linda didn't see as much of Pete as she had expected for the next week. Pete did not explain his absence, and she would not ask him to, but when she alighted from the trolley at the end of her street and saw a sleek Rolls parked in her path, she was curious enough to look at its occupants. Therein, in unaccustomed luxury, sat her Pete, a rug of fur over his knees and Miss Honey Harmon on his arm.

Linda got back on the trolley car and rode to the end of the line, trying to decide whether she was angry, jealous or disgusted. She decided she didn't know, but she would have given a great deal to know what Pete could have been saying that had brought a look of such utter absorption to Honey Harmon's face.

Two big fingers crossed, had been saying, "I had you in mind—or a woman just like you—when I wrote it."

(To Be Continued)

Better Be Vigilant

Here is an example of what too many pedestrians do. The person illustrated above never had time to wait for the green light, but now, as all will admit, he has P-L-E-N-T-Y of time. No doubt any person who has had such an experience will decide it's better to wait a few seconds than to spend weeks and even months getting over injuries suffered because of impatience.

Last year there were more than a thousand pedestrians killed when they crossed at intersections against the signal, and there were more than 35,000 who were injured, according to the Travelers Insurance Company. Many of those killed, if they had a chance to do it over again, would be more than willing to wait for the light to turn in their favor. Very likely those injured feel the same way. It may be a little irksome to wait for the signal to flash "Go," but one remains dead a long time, and it's far from being funny to be kept in bed recovering from injuries.

NECESSITY

The cemetery working will be held Saturday, May 2. Those interested are asked to attend.

Mrs. George Shockley honored Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Satterwhite with a shower Saturday night. Many nice presents were presented to them.

Mr. and Mrs. Elton Satterwhite were callers in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Satterwhite Sunday evening.

Misses Velma and Louise Hughes spent the week-end with Miss Rossie Lea Morris of Frankell.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Collins are wishing them many long years of happiness. Mrs. Collins is the former Miss Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. George Shockley, teachers of this school, entertained their pupils with a picnic Friday. They had as their visitors Mrs. W. L. and Eunice Fleen, Mrs. Herbert Telechik and Miss Smokey Hughes. A nice time was enjoyed by all.

The school closed Friday night with several prizes given and a program presented by Mr. Armstrong and his pupils of Breckenridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Rob Parks and family have moved into our community to make their home. We are very glad to have them with us.

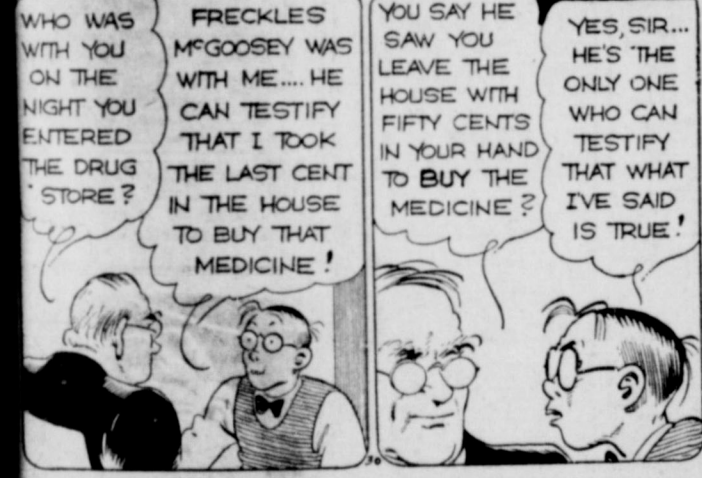

Mrs. Tucker and sons, G. W. and Kenneth Ray, were visitors in our community Thursday.

THE New Firestone

HIGH SPEED TIRE for 1936

RACING drivers will not take chances on any tire except a Firestone Gum-Dipped Tire in the grueling Indianapolis 500-Mile Race, where its greater blowout protection has been repeatedly demonstrated.

Gum-Dipped Tires on his 3000-mile run over the Salt Beds of Utah, which he covered in 23½ hours—a record of 127 miles per hour. He has driven more than a million miles on Firestone Tires, in every state in the union, on all kinds of roads, in all kinds of traffic, without tire failure or accident of any kind. What a tribute to safe, dependable, economical tire equipment.

When you drive at today's higher speeds, your life and the lives of others are largely dependent upon the degree of safety built into the tires of your car. Take no chances—equip your car with new Firestone High Speed Tires today and be sure of the safest driving equipment money can buy.

Woman Tells Of London Tower Theft

LONDON.—The inside story of the theft of a sword from the Tower of London last summer, told by Frau Maria Rump, of Cologne, an eye-witness, in an article published in the Cologne Stadtanzeiger.

While on a visit to London, Frau Rump took her small daughter to the Tower. They were looking at the old weapons in the armory when she saw a young man enter, remove a sword from the wall and, hiding it under his coat, rush from the room.

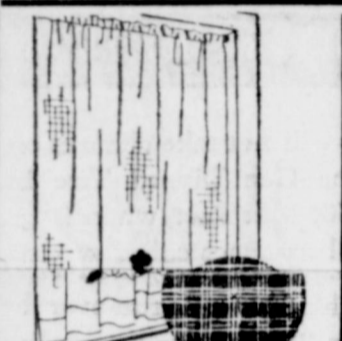

Unable to speak English, she did not tell any of the guards what she had seen.
