Letter Is Received From Times Employee Of Two Decades Ago

The following letter was received today by Donald J. McCarthy, secretary of the recently organized Ranger Typographical Union, from Arthur L. Henry of Los Angeles, who was one of the employees of the mechanical department of The Ranger Times "way back when".

Ranger Local No. 842, I. T. U. Congratulations to the new local! I was in Ranger—but before it was organized—1919 I believe was the year. The members of the crew in part of The Times were: Steve, the skipper; Whitey and Tolley, handmen; Bozeman and Welch, operators; and one other whose name I cannot remember, also another handman who stayed only about three months. Andy the Swede and the other Welch twin were pressmen. And yours truly—the two-trippler apprentice.

Some of the things that I remember most about Ranger were: The big rain—the mud and the mud. The bunkhouse and at least 90 per cent of all the employees living there—directly connected to the rear of the shop.

The trip to Hogtown in the company's Ford—it stalled and Welch cranked it, and a gold watch in his pocket slipped out in the mud on the road and we never found it.

The shooting scrape among the Mexicans in the rear, and everybody hiding when the bullets whizzed about. Whitey I think found a stove—and I a roll of paper.

The time Jim the janitor cleaned up a crap game uptown and two shins chased him home to the shop—he had a ten dollar gold piece and a watch in his hands—and he was glad to see us!

The trips to the bathroom uptown—50 cents for showers and all the hot water you could use. 75c breakfasts and lunches and $1.00 up dinners in off-arm restaurants.

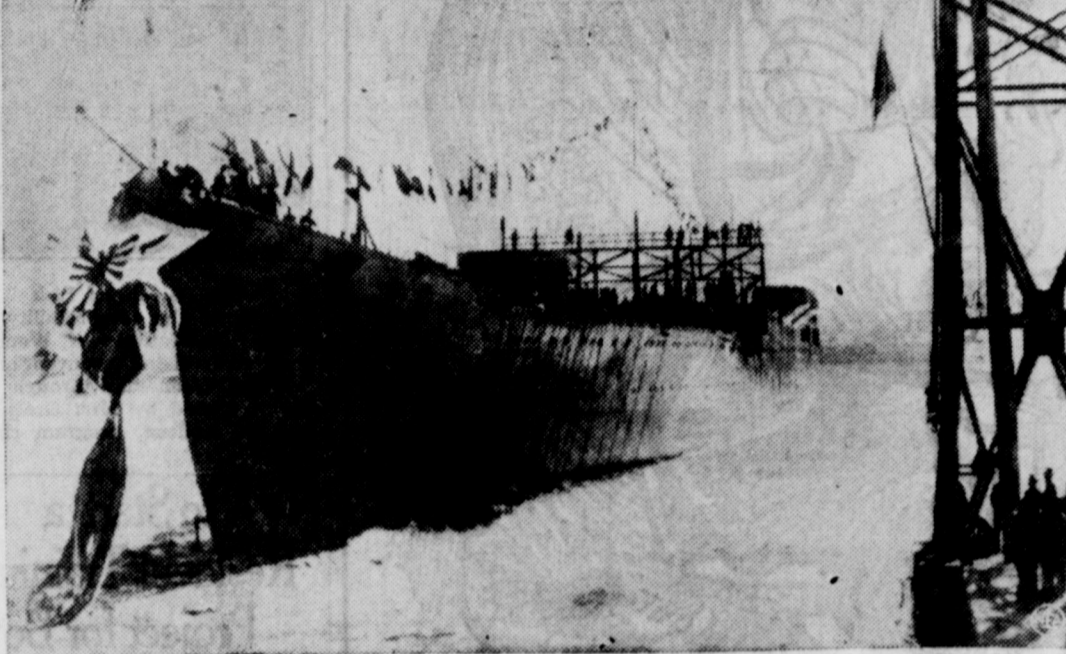

After the rain—the fire department washed off the main street and the big surprise—it was paved!

That Saturday shift—until Sunday morning at 8 or 9 o'clock! In regard to other members of the crew—the Welch twins—Gale the operator—and Bernie the pressman are in San Francisco and may be written care of 431 Sansome St.

Best regards to Whitey Hicks, who I understand is the only one there now.

Best wishes,
ARTHUR L. HANEY,
421 East Sixth St.,
Los Angeles, Calif.

One Going Down.. More Coming Up.. But Secretly

Permitting other nations to speculate as they please, Japan keeps augmenting her already large navy with new war vessels such as the second-class cruiser Chikuma, pictured above as it slid down the ways at Sasebo Navy Yard, Nagasaki. The Chikuma is just one unit in Japan's tremendous new naval building program, but Nipponese officials won't tell how many more such ships are being built or what the size will be. The officials did, however, deny reports that Japan is building 46,000-ton super-battleships and 20,000-ton super-cruisers, the latter with speed of 40 knots.

The thieves gained entrance to the store through a skylight, and tracks on the upper walls of the skylight showed where they had apparently tried to land on a bed in the furniture department, which occupies the second floor of the building.

Nothing was missing from the furniture department, it was stated, but downstairs a large assortment of merchandise was missing though a complete checkup had not been made.

The burglars apparently tried on shoes until they found their sizes, found hats to fit them and took other merchandise. Shirts and other merchandise was also taken.

It was believed whole boxes of ladies' hose had been taken as many pairs were missing.

The burglary is thought to have been committed Sunday night after the shower, as tracks indicated the rain had fallen before the store was entered.

The New Deal of Mang Wang

The nice thing about history is that so much of it has gone over the dam in the past few thousand years that a man can find a historical basis for almost any argument he wants to make, if he only looks in the right place.

Of course, his opponent may have just as many bases for his own contentions, but the outcome of these things depends on one man boning up on a period the other man doesn't know anything about, or else boning up just a little more on the same period.

All this is inspired by reports of some scholarly papers read at the Chicago meeting of the American Oriental Society. China, it turns out, had itself a New Deal some 2000 years ago. What happened to China's New Deal should make dandy ammunition for the present anti-New Dealers, but really, there's ammunition enough to go around for everybody.

A gent named Mang Wang announced his emperorship and proceeded to introduce a program of social experimentation that included, among other things, government regulation of basic industries, government control of natural resources, price-control over crops, and easy-term loans to businesses he wished to encourage. Work relief had already been tried and abandoned because the WPA boys of the time fooled around too much. Anyway, the whole thing fell through before Wang joined his ancestors.

"You see?" says Republican.

"I see," says Democrat. "I see China, 1938, with some 370 million rugged individualists living at the minimum subsistence level."

Then Economic Royalist, who scanned another of the Oriental Society's papers, butts in and remarks that private holding companies seem to have had staying powers, because the towp of Nuzi, in Mesopotamia, had quite a batch of them 1000 years before Mang Wang's time.

"And where," retorts somebody who hadn't been asked for an opinion at all, "is Nuzi today?"

Oh, it all evens up. History just keeps right on swallowing its tail.

NYA to Start a Resident Training Project for Boys

AUSTIN—J. C. Kellam, State Youth Director, has announced that the National Youth Administration will start a Resident Training Project for 150 boys from rural areas on May 2 at Buchanan Dam. The Lower Colorado Rive Authority is sponsor for the project and will provide facilities for housing the boys and for a training program in subsistence agriculture and farm mechanics. As the work project, the 150 boys will begin construction of a federal fish hatchery on lands now owned by the Authority. These lands will be deeded to the Federal Bureau of Fisheries, and the hatchery will be built under its supervision. It is also planned that boys will construct a stone administration building near Buchanan Dam. Plans for this project were completed in Washington following Mr. Kellam's conference with Congressman Lyndon Johnson, in whose district the Colorado River Authority properties lie, members of the CRA board, and representatives of the Bureau of Fisheries. The boys selected for this project must be between 18 and 25 years of age and must be eligible for employment on the NYA Work Program. They will be transported to Buchanan Dam, and during their stay will work about half time, earning enough wages to enable them to pay for their subsistence and to have about $8 a month left for their own use. During the other half of their time the boys will attend training classes. A camp recreation program will be developed by the project supervisors, Mr. Kellam said. The Buchanan Dam project will be the seventh Resident Training project put in operation by the administration. Others are at State Teachers Matcos, the Farm, Texas, and at Center.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOYCE BRAWLEY, heroine; she is a blonde, 20 years old, and is a student at the University of Texas.
MRS. PORTER, heroine's mother.
DICK, heroine's brother.
ADOLPH, heroine's friend.
ISOBEL, heroine's friend.

When Joyce suddenly found herself in a situation which she had never before experienced, she was not at all surprised. She had been told that the world was full of adventures, and she was determined to see it for herself.

CHAPTER XI
Dick followed Mrs. Porter out to the bar, a gloomy frown making his brows. Why the hell should he be called upon to take O'Hara out of the D.T.'s? What can I do? he demanded, for to keep the irritation out of his voice.

Help me get him out of here, Dick. I asked one of the waiters, but Mr. O'Hara resented it. He wouldn't be mauled by my dog, he said. I don't like to maul him, Dick. I'd like to dump him into the first garbage can I came across.

Where's his wife? he asked. Mrs. Porter said she could handle him for me, but I, on the other hand, would not be responsible for that matter. I know, Dick. I came with him, but she returned to the car when she saw the condition of the man. This was not altogether true, Mrs. Porter knew. As a matter of fact, she didn't want to find Mrs. O'Hara.

All evening she had prayed, desiring, for just such a situation. For just this sort of logical case to get Richard away from Mrs. Milner. Now, as she watched a go over to the slumbering O'Hara, she leaned wearily against the door and indulged herself in a long, tremendous sigh of relief.

Ted said to let him alone, Mrs. Porter, he advised crisply. "Surely, it's no fault of yours, and the man is perfectly well what do you wish to do with such cases. . . I'll go to get back to Joyce. . . Her eyes implored him. "I'll be a car brought around to this entrance, Richard. Please—let me get him to the car. . . I'll explain to Miss Milner." "All right, if you will," Mrs. Porter hurried toward the entrance, to look for Adolph. She did not stop to explain to Dick. Not just yet, she told herself. First I must find Isobel. . . It was several moments later before she returned to the car. In time to see Dick and his bag, assisted by one of the waiters, disappear through the door. Immediately she sent another boy with her message for Isobel. She worked it truthfully, she hoped it would be misunderstood. And when the boy looked after Mr. O'Hara and grinned understandingly, she knew that he would muddle the story exactly as she wanted him to. There was no doubt in her mind as to how Joyce would react.

She followed the three men through the side door, looking to see if the car had come around. It would take the chauffeur several minutes, she realized; the parking place was crowded to-night.

For a moment it seemed as if the cool air might revive Mr. O'Hara; he straightened suddenly and made a sturdy attempt to stand on his own two feet.

"Whassa matter?" he demanded. "Whassa matter?" "Mrs. Porter explained promptly. "Your wife is very angry, Mr. O'Hara. She has gone on ahead." After they had piled him into the car, Mrs. Porter hesitated. "I think I'd better go along with him."

"Nonsense!" Dick retorted hastily. "You can't go with him in that condition."

"I'll be all right," she assured him. "I'll sit in front with Adolph. He's my regular driver—aren't you, Adolph? Every time I come to Havana. . ."

In the end, he placed his faith in Adolph and saw Mrs. Porter and her charge off in good ride. Then he went back to the roulette table.

JOYCE was not there. He walked all around, looking over shoulders through the crowd. She was nowhere in sight. He glanced at his watch. Good Lord, almost three o'clock! He'd been gone more than half an hour. But Mrs. Porter had explained. . . "Hello, Tall, Dark and Frowning! What's wrong?" Isobel slipped her arm through his and smiled up at him. Her eyes were unusually bright. "I don't know what's become of Joyce," he said uneasily. "I left her here a few minutes ago." Isobel pretended a vague astonishment. "But she left. Didn't you know?" "Of course I didn't. I was outside with your mother, trying to sober up that fool of an O'Hara. You say she left?" "I saw her go." "But she wouldn't have gone back alone—" Her eyes were two round saucers. "She wasn't alone." "Whom would she have gone with?" "With Mr. Gregory," she spoke

Dutch Meyer Says Football Center Is Most Valuable Man

By United Press
FORT WORTH.—The center is the most important player on a football team, in the opinion of Coach Leo (Dutch) Meyer, who has developed some of the nation's best at Texas Christian University.

Most fans believe the quarterback, who directs the offense, is the most valuable player on the team, Meyer said, but the center really is "because he starts every

The faculty will be headed by August Vollmer, creator of the famous corps of University Cops at Oakland, later professor of police administration at the University here, and who resigned a year ago.

Then will come Edward O. Heinrich, Berkeley criminologist and modern Sherlock Holmes in his microscopic examination of evidence, who will give a course in criminal investigation covering all of the principles of scientific crime detection.

Finally, will come Bert Bridges, superintendent of the bureau of identification of the Alameda police department, who will present courses in fingerprinting as used not only in the United States but leading European countries.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—State Department officials are walking on eggshells these days, as they try to decide how to be just tough enough and yet not too tough with Mexico. The Mexicans know it. They are trying to find out the easiest terms the State Department will accept as compensation to owners of expropriated oil. The Mexicans are not able to offer very much. But they will be made to "offer something" and some of the American negotiators are afraid that "something" will just have to do.

Even Secretary Hull makes no genuine pretense that the Treasury's sudden suspension of Mexican silver purchases was meant as anything but a spanking. The administration's attitude, therefore, is curiously mixed.

Sympathetic with much of the Cardenas program, high officials nevertheless flew into something like a rage when the Mexican government seized the American and British oil fields.

Admitting the legality of that action, they were furious when a nation whose debt had been in default and which had stalled on arrangements to compensate for agrarian expropriations running into billions of pesos had yet to consider the start men to seize oil properties valued at four times the size of the annual Mexican budget and then talk vaguely of "compensation."

WASHINGTON diplomats believe the Mexicans felt that as long as the Roosevelt administration was in power they could continue their expropriation program without fear of interference. It was the background of futile negotiations as to compensation for a rapidly expanding agrarian program which caused the decision to stop buying Mexican silver—a decision which has come in for criticism. All indications are that the Mexicans were sharply jolted by the unexpected action.

Only one member of Congress uses the outside of his door as a billboard.

Representative Jerry O'Connell of Montana has a poster about half as large as the door itself, the burden of its message being that Tom Mooney, California's most celebrated prisoner, ought to be freed. The poster presents a drawing of Mooney's face and describes him as "Labor's Champion" and "Victim of Monster Capital Class Frameup."

names mean on balls and clubs. The combinations stick together like fraternity brothers. The Swat-s-Bills-a-Mile men do nothing to promote the Pitch 'Em Up Close Bros. boys. The Pitch 'Em Up Close Bros. lads barely speak to the Putt & Hole Outers.

For example, Snead picked up and stormed off the course in the Pasadena, Calif., Open. The incredible hill-billy explains that he had grown tired of being bracketed with Thomson, whose extra deliberation in more recent months would have made the slow game of the Cyril Walker of some years ago seem fast.

SOME of the big shots on the other side of the fence are a bit envious of the Snead who came with such a rush, it seems. They're resorting to technicalities, at least.

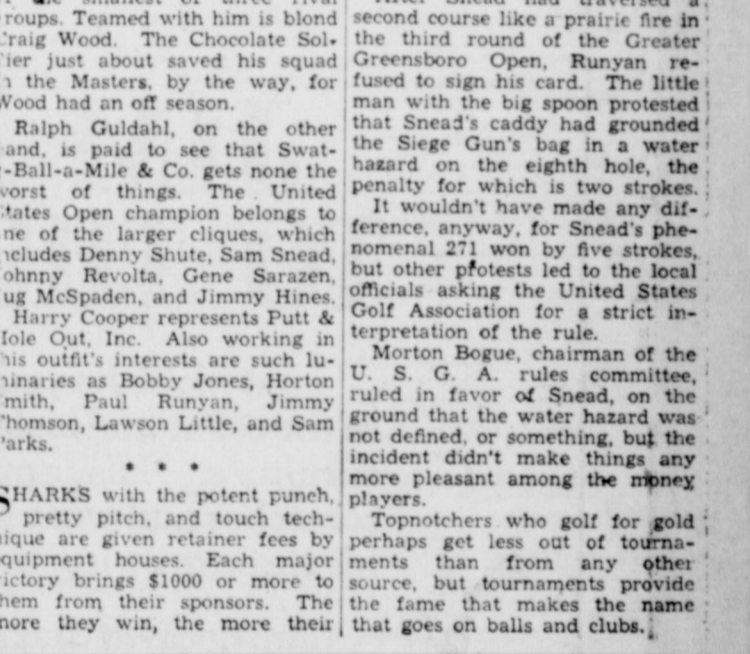

After Snead had traversed a second course like a prairie fire in the third round of the Greater Greensboro Open, Runyan refused to sign his card. The little man with the big spoon protested that Snead's caddy had grounded the Siege Gun's bag in a water hazard on the eighth hole, the penalty for which is two strokes.

It wouldn't have made any difference, anyway, for Snead's phenomenal 271 won by five strokes, but other protests led to the local officials asking the United States Golf Association for a strict interpretation of the rule.

Morton Boque, chairman of the U. S. G. A. rules committee, ruled in favor of Snead, on the ground that the water hazard was not defined, or something, but the incident didn't make things any more pleasant among the money players.

Topnotchers who golf for gold perhaps get less out of tournaments than from any other source, but tournaments provide the fame that makes the name that goes on balls and clubs.

100,000,000th Dollar Spent By the WPA In Texas In March

SAN ANTONIO. — During the month of March the hundredth million dollar was spent on the Works Progress Administration in Texas, it was reported today by Texas State Administrator H. P. Drought.

Records of the federal agency reveal that from July, 1935, through March, 1938, there has been expended on WPA projects operated in cooperation with local government agencies a total of $101,624,646. These local agencies, such as cities, counties, school districts and the state, provided almost one-fourth of the amount expended, their share totaling $24,721,247.

Men and women employed on work projects performed 214,452,795 man-hours of work, the equivalent of normal employment of 107,226 persons for one year. For this labor WPA and sponsors paid $66,888,572. Purchases of materials and equipment, and payment of equipment rental accounted for the remaining expenditure of $34,736,174. Of more than 6,300 projects which have been operated in Texas, those which involved construction and improvement of highways, roads and streets predominate. WPA and local agencies have expended $42,188,165 on road and street work.

Sewing rooms and canning plants, in which millions of garments have been manufactured and tons of food preserved for distribution to the destitute, are classified as goods projects on which there have been expenditures of $18,892,750.

Public buildings, including schools, gymnasiums, auditoriums, city halls, fire stations, and other types of public structures, have been erected or renovated in approximately four hundred Texas localities at a cost of $8,349,646. Such public utilities as waterworks, storm and sanitary sewers, reservoirs and disposal plants have been constructed and improved at a cost of $6,220,791.

EASTLAND BOWLING ALLEY

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY Mrs. Gaynor Maddox NEA Service Staff Writer

LOVE is in the soft spring air. Isn't it time for an announcement party?

Invite your friends to a surprise luncheon or supper. Plan your menu with loving care and at the right moment broadcast your announcement. You might announce your engagement by the use of special place cards at the table with the two names inscribed in interlocking hearts.

Very sentimental, of course, but then why not?

Or you might make the announcement by the "publication" of a miniature society page in a newspaper, or else by attaching cards bearing the names of the bride-and-groom-to-be to narrow pastel satin ribbon streamers from a bride's corsage bouquet.

However, don't forget that you have invited your guests not only to hear about your coming wedding, but also to enjoy a luncheon or supper. Here is a suggestion for the menu for the occasion—

JIM WENT TO THE CELLER

Last night Jim, our next-door neighbor, went to the cellar and looked over his last year's porch furniture. His appraising eye saw all the scratches and wear given the chairs last year by his three growing boys.

Jim decided that he needed some paint and a new brush; and planned to take that furniture out in the back yard next Saturday afternoon for the annual cleaning-up process.

Curious, but men all over the country are now thinking of paint, and seeds, and outdoor games. And—a new hat, a new suit and some new shirts.

And maybe the women don't feel the urge to buy new things!

And why shouldn't they? Why be content with old things when there is money for new? Mercants are offering the latest goods of all sorts in the advertisements in this newspaper. Go to them as you would to old friends. You can rely upon their descriptions of every article.

"Pin the Tail On the Donkey"

When you were young, you played that timeless game. Blind-folded, you weaved your way to the painted donkey on the wall, and tried to pin his tail in approximately the right position. You hit his nose, his ear, his leg—or you missed completely, and your blind stab landed on the empty wall.

Do you still "pin the tail on the donkey" when you go shopping? Do you make your purchases "bindfolded," leaving your choice to chance? That is literally the "unenlightened" method. It wastes your time, your energy, your patience—and your money.

Don't buy haphazardly. Know beforehand what to buy, and where to buy it, and how much to pay for it. Read the newspaper advertisements! Scan the shopping columns; compare prices, compare values—decide upon your bargain. Then go directly to the store which advertises it; make your purchase—and be content!

No more hit-and-miss buying when you follow the advertisements. They lift the blindfold; they make it easier to find the best values.
