TO GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XIV

Rod asked Tom to do the ordering. "You know the ropes," he said, excusing himself.

her glittering diamonds and endless ropes of pearls, and the men's black and white dress were striking contrast to the exotic furnishings all around them. The walls were paneled in dark wood with arabesques in deep red, forest green and antique gold, used as the decorative motif.

Unlike many clubs with dazzling white lights and screeching jazz the Arabesque offered refinement. But it was, after all, a night club, and as such was permeated with an air of gaiety, both forced and natural, that excited the senses and set free a desire to forget care, to let the living was good and to let tomorrow take thought of tomorrow's troubles.

Bertie Lou felt the wine of it in her tapping toes and time-beating fingers. The waiter brought something in glasses. She left it untouched to dance with Rod. Tom was dancing with Lila. They bumped into each other presently. Bertie Lou's eyes were closed dreamily. She did not see the look Lila bent upon her. Neither did Rod.

Tom asked Molly for the next dance. Bertie Lou knew Rod must dance with Lila. She hated to miss a number. Lila looked happier.

They were given time to nibble on the first course of supper. Not much time and not much supper. The musicians began softly tuning up their instruments.

And then Bertie Lou got a lucky break. The hostess came over and spoke to Tom. He called her by her first name and introduced her to his friends. She said they needed an extra man. There was a perfectly good one going to waste at a table all by himself. His party had moved on and the girls couldn't get to first base with him. All right to bring him over? She gave some information about him, vouched for him. Said he used his right name. One of her remarks caught Lila's attention. "Of course he's filthy with money, if that means anything to you!"

ROD danced with Lila and Bertie Lou talked with the new man while Tom galloped around with Molly. But that, Bertie Lou was sure before the music crashed into the third number, would be the end of her warfare with Lila for this evening at least. For Lila had been playing up to the stranger, Mr. Loree. She had her heart and soul in her work.

Mr. Loree was an oddish man, but he carried the stamp of success in his crisp speech and sure, brisk manner. Bertie Lou rather liked him. Too good for Lila, but, and as such was permeated with an air of gaiety, both forced and natural, that excited the senses and set free a desire to forget care, to let the living was good and to let tomorrow take thought of tomorrow's troubles.

Neither Tom nor Molly cared particularly for dancing. Mr. Loree did. Lila was now perfectly willing to let Bertie Lou have all the dances with Rod. So it turned out to be a much happier evening for Bertie Lou than she had anticipated. And the show was what Tom called a "wow."

Little girls with wise eyes and pert legs pointed out ahead of a principal and tossed balloons to the patrons. To the ends of the stems toy jazz makers were attached. The singer came on and pleaded with everyone to make music for her. Queer sounds suddenly filled the smoky air as the revellers endeavored to favor her.

Bertie Lou spoke to Tom about the entertainer's voice. "Oh, yes," he said, "she's good. Came to New York to study for grand opera."

Bertie Lou fell silent over the untold story. The song ended and the girl—she was just a girl—made way for the star. Bertie Lou was fascinated with the latter's costume, made of big leaves and small to her friends. She said they needed an extra man. There was a perfectly good one going to waste at a table all by himself. His party had moved on and the girls couldn't get to first base with him. All right to bring him over? She gave some information about him, vouched for him. Said he used his right name. One of her remarks caught Lila's attention. "Of course he's filthy with money, if that means anything to you!"

When, along toward morning, Rod asked for the check he got the shock of his lifetime. One hundred and sixteen dollars! Whew! And he had about seventy in his pockets. Mr. Loree was too used to money even to think of offering to pay for hospitality to which the hostess had assured him he was invited.

And Tom was nodding in his chair. Only Bertie Lou saw the dull red color mount in Rod's cheeks as he stared stupidly at the check.

Sports Matter

By HARRY FERGUSON
 United Press Staff Correspondent

From the region on the other side of the tropics comes a mighty rumble and roar. A hairy-chested, swarthy giant with angry black eyes goes puffing along the high ways of the Argentine, watching the excess flesh melt slowly off his ponderous frame. The "Wild Bull" of the Pampas is on the war path.

Luis Angel Firpo, who was knocked into obscurity five years ago by the good left fist of Jack Dempsey, is planning a comeback.

Mesh has happened in the realm of pugilism since that night in 1923 when Firpo crashed a blow into Dempsey that sent the Marassa Mauler hurtling out of the ring, and then stood there stupefied while Jack crawled back and rocked him into dreamland in a second round. Gene Tunney has retired; Jack Dempsey has turned actor and Firpo has gained 45 pounds.

Those 45 pounds are a heavy burden on the Wild Bull's shoulders as he grasps the lowest rung and prepares to start all over again in the long climb up the ladder to pugilistic prominence. United Press dispatches from Argentina the other day carried the news that Firpo already had lost 15 pounds and was confident he could get back to his fighting weight of 215. He is doing his roadwork conscientiously and proudly exhibits four notches that have been taken in his belt since he started reducing.

He's Not So Old
 Firpo isn't an old man in his age of 30-year-old champions. He was born in 1896 and should have at least three good fighting years left in him; he rivals Tunney as an exponent of clean living and has never been known to smoke or take a drink.

Fate has been kind to the Wild Bull since he sailed away from these shores with plenty of Tex Rickard's gold lining his pockets. He has worked hard and is now the head of a prosperous automobile importing concern in Argentina, which he plans to incorporate so he can have more time to devote to training.

Probably nothing would please Rickard more than to have Firpo get into shape, whip a few seconds and then plunge into the elimination tournament out of which the next champion of the world will emerge. The Wild Bull is a great favorite among the customers at Madison Square Garden. Making no pretense of being a boxer, Firpo storms into the ring and starts milling with his heavy arms, hoping one of the blows will land. When one does, something happens, Dempsey will swear to that.

Packs a Punch
 Firpo's record is one long affidavit, testifying to the fact that he packs a punch. Out of the 36 bouts he has won 24 by knockouts. Dempsey is the only man who ever sent him down for the count of ten.

Tunney's retirement apparently convinced Firpo that he had a good chance against the contenders for the title. With Dempsey out of the way, the Wild Bull is the only man on the horizon who can knock out his opponents consistently. And that's the kind of fellow Rickard is looking for.

If Firpo can get back into shape there may be some excitement after all in this winter's elimination tournament.

SPEED UP AIR PERMITS

WASHINGTON.—A new system to facilitate the issuance of student aviator permits is being adopted by the aeronautics branch of the Commerce Department. Under the new plan, the student turns his application over to an authorized examining physician who will check it for correctness. The student is no longer required to send the application to Washington. Upon successfully passing the medical examination the physician will issue the student a letter of authority, allowing him to operate pending receipt of the actual permit.

OUT OUR WAY

Driverless Tractor Plows Field While Farmer Does His Chores

LINCOLN, Neb.,—Imagine a farmer starting his tractor-plow early in the morning, jumping off, doing his chores, taking his milk to town and returning at noon to find his field all nicely plowed—and without the help of a hired man!

It's being done in Nebraska with a newly perfected automatic tractor pilot, use of which is to be extended to the great fields of the wheat belt and to the rice fields of the South.

A year ago, when the pilot was wholly an experiment, people were "interested" in the novelty of the thing. Today it is being put on a manufacturing basis by a midwest factory, and its backers believe it is destined to fill an important place in farm economics.

Frank L. Zybach, formerly a Grand Island garage operator, invented the pilot. Since its test at the University of Nebraska College of Agriculture he has made improvements. These make it possible not only to use the pilot with a stirring plow but also with a disk plow.

Usefulness increased. This greatly increases the usefulness of the invention, as it can be employed in the wheat fields, according to Mr. Zybach. The attachment also makes it possible to use the pilot in the rice fields of the South, where the little ridges used in irrigation made it impossible to use the pilot with just one shoe, or rudder. By adding a second behind the first, the pilot can be operated over these ridges.

It was also discovered that a second shoe made it possible to guard against the pilot getting out of the furrow where water had washed out little gullies or made ridges. Mr. Zybach found that in improving his invention for a disk plow he had simply to shape the rudder somewhat differently so it would follow the disk plow furrow.

In order to have the pilot guide the tractor it is necessary to plow one furrow around the field for the pilot to follow. After that it guides itself. There is an attachment which stops the tractor if the pilot gets out of the furrow.

Has Had Severe Tests. The device has received the most severe tests, according to its backers. In a test on a farm six miles west of Hastings, Neb., a farmer plowed 170 acres in 10 days. Without the pilot he had been able to plow but 6 1-2 acres a day. It has been used on a farm near Ashland where the field is 22 bends in the furrow. This field runs a creek which flows into the furrow. The tractor banks, but the tractor has such good work that the farmer is going to make use of the pilot. One of the farmers who is using the guide says he likes his plows and then goes to work with the milk. He gets milk with water and fills the tank with water and oil and lets it run.

Whoofus Whiffletree's Woozy Wonderings

Shakespeare once wrote that ambitious youth climbed the ladder of success but after reaching the top, unto the ladder turned his back, scorned the base degrees by which he did ascend. Gene Tunney, raised to millionaire by the press of the nation, criticizes the newspapermen because they will not leave him alone. But you don't have to wander as far away as New York to find evidences of ingratitude. For instance in the Oil Belt, in some of the towns the newspapermen who write the "hip-hip-hurray" articles to bring the crowds milling through the gate find the press box so crowded with distinguished guests and others who are only sight-seers that the scribes—who earn their living by writing about the games—have to perch on the back of a seat with scarcely enough room to move a pencil. It is all right if those in charge desire to entertain distinguished guests, but why not a separate stand?

The sports writer is not seeing the game as an individual but he is the "eyes" of hundreds, perhaps thousands who were unable to attend the game and will know only what he can tell them. Even those present read the newspaper account to fill in certain gaps in their own recollection. Did you know that in one of the greatest victories in the history of Ranger high, the credit for the winning touchdown was given by everyone—press included—to the wrong man and the fact, to this day, has never been published? One man carried the ball over the goal line but fumbled and a teammate recovered. The mass of players was so great that the spectators could not see this and the players themselves were so excited that they perhaps hardly knew what was happening themselves. The coach, nearly a year later, in a conversation, casually mentioned to this columnist the particulars.

And the Spudders keep blazing away. They are now seven games in front. Philadelphia Athletics can only get so near—and yet so far.

WHO IS OSCAR CALLAWAY?

Oscar Callaway, was reared on a farm ten miles South of Comanche where he still resides, is the oldest of a family of six brothers. He worked his way through high school, and the University of Texas, and then helped four of his younger brothers through college. He has given six of his sons and nephews a college education. Mr. Callaway served his county as County Attorney when he first got out of school. From 1916, he represented the 12th District in Congress, making a nation wide reputation as a reformer in his fight against useless appropriations to improve rivers that could not be made navigable, as the "Pork Barrel" graft. In 1916 Callaway resumed his residence on his farm, and in the last twelve years, has had a notable success as a farmer and sheep and goat raiser. He owns one of the choicest flocks of sheep of about 2000 head in West Texas. Callaway has proved to be and is a successful Congressman, a successful farmer and stock raiser and a successful lawyer. He is absolutely honest. He is fearless and forceful in his advocacy of measure he believes in. His six years service in Congress fits him to immediately render you efficient service, without having to go through two or four years necessary to break in a new man.

WHO IS R. Q. LEE? R. Q. Lee, of Cisco, Mr. Callaway's opponent, says in a circular he sends out: "Vote for R. Q. Lee, because he is a successful merchant, banker and railroad president." We have investigated his record as a "Railroad President" and the only one he left a written record of, and we charge that that record shows him to be unworthy of trust, and absolutely unfit to hold the great office of Congressman. The Facts. Lee and his associates, organized the Cisco and N. E. R. R. in 1920 running from Cisco to Breckenridge and Lee was elected President of the road, at a salary of $1,000.00 per month. The stock was sold out to local people and friends of Mr. Lee, who subscribed for it as a Community enterprise. Lee took seventy-five shares. There were 4947 shares of $100.00, par value each, sold. He operated the road for six years and never paid a dividend and those owning the stock thought little of its value. On September 13th, 1926, R. Q. Lee made a written contract with the T. P. R. R. Co. by which he sold 2591 1-2 shares of the stock for one-hundred cents on the dollar, or par. At the time he made this contract Lee owned 1074 shares of stock, and had in his possession 1517.5 shares of stock for which he was agent. Lee originally owned seventy-five shares. On December 21, 1926, the Interstate Commerce Commission approved this contract, but further provided in the order that if the T. P. R. Ry. bought any more hundred cents on the dollar for it, and also provided that the railroad must immediately be extended to the town of Throckmorton. R. Q. Lee, concealing said sale from his stockholders, in January, February and March, 1927, went or sent his emissaries among his stockholders and represented to them that he had an opportunity to sell the stock for fifty cents on the dollar, and bought the majority of the stock at that figure. Many stockholders do not know even yet, that they were swindled out of half of the value of their stock. Lee's man bought $5,000.00 of the stock from A. J. Olson, of Cisco on Feb. 14th, 1927. About the same time he bought $5000.00 worth of stock from J. H. Ball of Abilene, $5000.00 worth from N. N. Rosenquist of Eastland; $5000.00 worth from E. Sid Curry of Abilene, all for fifty cents on the dollar. There was about $200,000.00 worth of this stock outstanding when the Commission approved the sale. It is fair to assume that Lee and his agents got the most of it. They therefore got about $100,000.00 of the stockholders' money. Every share of the capital stock which Lee bought, or permitted any other person to buy, after the 13th day of Sept. 1926, for less than par, was a fraud on the stockholder. Every share of stock that Lee or his men bought after that date, or permitted any other person to buy, without informing them that the stock had already been sold for 100 cents on the dollar, was a breach of the trust which the stockholders had confided to Lee when they elected him president. WE FURTHER CHARGE that after the Interstate Commerce Commission had made its order requiring the T. & P. Ry. to extend the road to Throckmorton, that R. Q. Lee concealed that fact from the citizens of Throckmorton county, and represented to them that they would have to raise a $50,000 bonus in order to secure the road; and that they did raise this money, and paid it to R. Q. Lee in ignorance of the order.

Is R. Q. Lee a Democrat? Mr. Lee, you advertise in your circulars that you have been a life long Democrat. If this is true, why did you apply to Giles
