Firemen Are Told Air Conditioning Creates Hazard

By United Press
COLLEGE STATION, Tex.—H. Oram Smith of Dallas, manager of the Texas Inspection Bureau, told 600 firemen at the annual Texas A. & M. College firemen's training school that air conditioning is increasing fire hazards in buildings.

"The ducts which convey the cold air throughout the premises constitute the main source of danger," Smith said. "Some are constructed of inflammable materials, and even metal ducts present a hazard unless cleaned out frequently."

"In the latter case, the ducts will collect a deposit of oil and dust which will feed a fire under the forced draft of a fan. An added hazard is found in the systems which recirculate air drawn from the floor. In this case the sweepings, bits of paper and other particles are drawn into the system by the suction and accumulate to feed a possible fire."

"With a high speed fan forcing air into the ducts at the rate of 30 miles an hour, it may readily be seen that any spark induced into the system is likely to start a fire. While the fire might be confined to the refuse in the ducts, it would give off smoke that would likely cause a panic in a crowded building."

Smith explained that the term "air conditioning" has become general in scope and is applied to cooled, filtered, washed or circulated air.

"Not only do we transmit fire originating within a system," he pointed out, "but we invite outside exposure fire to enter through openings made in firewalls to allow the entrance of fresh air under heavy suction."

Smith said that "air conditioning is still in the experimental stage. There has been nothing since the advent of radio that has captured the public interest as has the demand for air conditioning."

Countess Likes Life of Trapper

By United Press
MONTREAL.—A Belgian Countess who lived alone seven months in a trapper's cabin in the wilds north of The Pas, Man., has arrived here to rest and recuperate from a sunburn, mosquito bites and an injured leg before sailing home to Belgium.

She is the Countess Anne de Mischagen, explorer, trapper, writer and stepdaughter of a Canadian, the late Sen. H. S. Beland. Despite the hardships she encountered in the wilds, she said she was sorry she was leaving Canada. She prefers running her own trap line in the North and living entirely by herself to the civilization of city life in Europe, she said, and intends to come back to Canada.

"I have spent several winters in the Canadian north country, and I love it," she said. Before establishing herself in a trapper's cabin at The Pas, she spent some time hunting in the Caribou valley of the Rockies, where she heard tales of lost gold mines, found that the only grizzly bear in the country preferred to charge her guide and die under his rifle before she even caught sight of the beast, and where she gathered material for her writings.

The Countess has written three books, all in French, on her North Country and hunting experiences. She cut her leg while chopping wood.

The Countess plans to come back to Canada to get one more shot at a grizzly.

"I don't like killing things any more," she said. "I've had so much of it in the Belgian Congo. I do most of my hunting with a camera now. But I would like to get a grizzly."

The Inauguration Of O'Daniel May Be Most Colorful

By United Press
AUSTIN.—A spectacular state campaign for governor promises Texas its most colorful inauguration next Jan. 17. Not since "Ma" Ferguson, first woman to be elected governor, took the oath of office has national and state interest centered so much on a Texas political race.

"Biggest" crowd at an inauguration in Texas was the throng that gathered when Mrs. Ferguson was inaugurated for her comeback term. Better roads and faster automobiles made traveling more easy than when she first became governor.

A search for state jobs brought many to her second inaugural. Before she had been in office more than a few weeks, her husband had to shoo them from the office so the governor could attend to state duties.

The second biggest crowd attended the out-door inauguration of Gov. Dan Moody. Most glittering was the war-time inauguration of Gov. W. P. Hobby. Military uniforms predominated. Dress coats were numerous.

If a hill-billy band is to furnish music at the next inauguration, it will not set a precedent. Mountain music entertained huge crowds that filled Gregory Gymnasium of the University of Texas for Mrs. Ferguson's second inaugural ball. Dean Emeritus T. U. Taylor of the University of Texas engineering school was master of ceremonies and led round dances far into the night.

Receptions took the place of dances for the inaugurations of Governors Neff and Moody. Austin inaugural committees thoughtfully provided unofficial dances, which were largely attended.

TWO WARS AT SAME TIME IS JAP OUTLOOK

By United Press
Japan faced war on two fronts today, fighting China in the south and Russia in the north.

On the Yangtze river front in China the Japanese threw 20,000 fresh troops into the battle line, an effort to turn back the Chinese. Japan apparently sought opportunity to send a large force against the Russians in the north in the disputed border region, Siberia, Manchukuo and Korea.

Dispatches from Tokyo said Soviet warplanes crossed the Korean border, dropping bombs on Kejo.

Japan, engrossed in her war with China, appeared to be in no mood for a real war with Russia. Russians, on the other hand, to advantage of the weakness of Japan and refused to yield an inch.

The Japanese had trouble enough in China, but the ultimate capture of Hankow seemed to be taken for granted.

The U. S. Ambassador, Nelson Johnson, moved his headquarters up the river to Chungking.

The war in Spain presented a similar aspect, with the loyalist striking back fiercely at the insurgents. At Madrid 23 persons were sentenced to death and others given long prison terms on charges of treason. Of 195 defendants, on 25 were acquitted.

Only four teams are entered in the girls' tourney. Since each team must be defeated twice before it is out of the running, the finals may not be played until Friday night. However, the final will likely be Thursday, officials stated.

Earl Weathersby of Eastland is regional commissioner of the A. S. A. A. and Frank Crowell is district commissioner. The men's A. S. A. A. meet is to begin Saturday night, it was announced.

Monday night Cisco and Rising Star girls were losers in their initial battles.

Georgia to Pay More Pensions

By United Press
ATLANTA, Ga.—Confederate veterans and their widows have drawn more than $50,000,000 in pensions from the state of Georgia according to L. T. Gillen, director of the Confederate division of the state welfare department.

The Confederate pension pay roll will approximate $85,000 a month for the next 14 years, Gillen estimated. Most of this will go to widows, since only 250 veterans are still on the pension rolls.

Under a recent legislative act allowing pensions to widows of married Confederate veterans between 1881 and 1920, applications have been filed by 1,669 persons, of which 1,315 have been approved.

During the fiscal year ending June 30 payments included $76,650 to Confederate soldiers, $481,710 to widows, and $221,520 to widows under the legislative act.

In addition to pensions, $100,000 was paid out for funeral expenses and $8,772 to county ordinaries for handling checks for veterans.

The administrative expenses amounted to less than 1 per cent of the money handled.

He Gave Children the Opportunity to Live

The public playground is so common a feature of the modern city that it is still a fairly youthful institution. It is actually only a little more than one generation since the first playgrounds were established.

This is called to mind by the fact that July 28 has been designated "National Joseph Lee Day" by the National Recreation Association, with the indorsement of President Roosevelt. And if you don't know who Joseph Lee was, it might be worth your while to find out.

Joseph Lee was a wealthy Bostonian, the son of an aristocratic banker. Graduating from Harvard in the 1880's, he decided that he had all the money he would ever need and that he would devote his life and his fortune to the promotion of play and recreation.

He came to this decision in an odd way. He read in his paper, one day, about a group of Boston boys being arrested for playing in the streets. It was an every-day occurrence, of course; but, as he said, "To me it was as if those boys had been arrested for living." So he decided to do something about it.

Do something he did; and that "something" was a driving, unceasing campaign to persuade people to provide play space for children. He made an elaborate study of the cause of juvenile delinquency, helped develop a model playground in Boston, helped to organize the Playground Association of America, devoted years of his life to its service—and, all in all, gave some $360,000 of his own money to further the cause.

It would be a great exaggeration, of course, to say that Joseph Lee was solely responsible for the development of the public playground. But it is indisputable that he was responsible in a very large part, and that a great many thousands of children have had decent room to play in which they would not have had if Joseph Lee had not lived.

We don't build monuments to men like that, or devote whole chapters of our history books to them. It might be a good thing if we did. For Joseph Lee's capacity for getting indignant over wrongs which were done—not to himself, but to other people—is one of the finest and most valuable traits the human race develops.

The industrial city of the late nineteenth century, with few parks and no playgrounds, with mile on mile of congested housing, inflicted a very great wrong on millions of people. It wasn't, directly, any of Joseph Lee's business; but because he had that priceless capacity for getting mad over somebody else's troubles, he made it his business—and did a great deal to right the wrong.

There are still, heaven knows, plenty of similar wrongs to be righted. They will get righted only as we develop and exercise that same capacity for selfless indignation.

$20,000 State Fund Saves $10,000,000 Yearly In Texas

COLLEGE STATION, Tex.—It may sound hard to believe, but a $20,000 appropriation made by the state legislature in 1931 is returning Texas property owners a saving of approximately $10,000,000 a year in preventing fire loss and at a cost of about $4,000 annually.

That appropriation was made for the equipping and operation of the Firemen's Training School at Texas A. & M. College and the bulk of the original money was spent for fire fighting apparatus and other permanent equipment. The $4,000 annual cost is spent for the salary and expenses of Field Instructor G. F. Williams, who spend about ten months of each year traveling throughout Texas instructing fire departments in the latest and approved methods of fire fighting and fire prevention, according to H. N. Brayton, director of the school. The training school was organized under Prof. Brayton's guidance in 1929 and the first annual Firemen's Training School was held in 1930, when 76 cities sent 196 men to attend the course. It has grown annually, until this year 245 cities were represented and approximately 600 firemen took part in the training.

It was not until 1933, however, and after the appropriation mentioned had been made, that the work was extended to the field. Cities sending representative to the course receive a three percent reduction in their key rate, provided the existing rate is not twenty cents or lower.

AUTO'S RENTAL $1,200

By United Press
CLEVELAND, Ohio. — How to collect the accumulated rental, about $1,200, on a car they hired out a year ago, is the problem of officials of a drive-it-yourself company here. The car, never returned, was found recently, and so was the man who rented it—in the Indiana state penitentiary.

Class Sets Up Guides for Family

By United Press
CLEVELAND—How long should a couple know each other before marriage? Greater Cleveland's answer to this and other related questions are revealed in a survey made by the Fenn College class in "family problems." Here are some of the answers:

A couple should know each other an average of 1.3 years before marriage.

Greater Clevelanders, as a whole believe in distribution of birth control information by medical authority.

They advocate physical examinations before marriage.

If a family's income were suddenly cut in half most of the people interviewed would act thusly: Cut down on entertainment. Pay less rent. Have the phone taken out. Dispense with the automobile or restrict the wardrobe. Purchase cheaper cuts of meat. Call the children home from college or reduce charity and church contributions.

Most of the answers showed economical tendencies. They believed that a couple should have saved an average of $985 before marrying. A few, however, considered no financial reserves necessary.

The average savings of those married was $774.

Most parents do not advise corporal punishment for misbehaving children. They would rather deprive the children of some privilege.

The majority of those interviewed who were married knew each other two or three years before marriage.

As for the importance of religious beliefs and family consent in considering marriage: Religious opposites should not marry, according to the greater number of answers.

A slim majority consider parental consent preferable. General sentiment was against "working wives." This sentiment was waived, however, in cases in which the husband's income was inadequate and there were no children.

They waited, hidden on the hilltop, and watched the man...

"We can't be very far from camp," reasoned Steve.

"As long as we keep him in sight," said Steve.

"They waited a moment until they were hidden from Sarto's view by his own progress.

There was a sharp declivity into a short ravine that had been gouged out by some prehistoric glacier.

"Nikki," said Steve as they approached the edge.

Steve walked cautiously down the incline, his eyes searching the surface of the depression below him.

"Nikki waited, feeling that Steve was much more afraid of what he might find in that ravine than of Sarto's return.

Women Passengers Puzzle a Conductor On Street Car Line

EL PASO — Peculiarities of women passengers have E. W. Hayslett, a motorman of the El Paso-Juarez street car since 1912, scratching his head in amazement. "Women are vain publicly rather than privately these days," Hayslett said. "They used to paint up at home years ago. Now they're right hold about it. They even smoke on street cars. I guess I'm too old fashioned to get used to it."

"Other of their peculiarities are that women will seat themselves in the front of a street car, and by the time they have reached their getting-off point, will have tried at least five other seats and ended up in the rear of the car."

"First thing they do is powder their noses, scrutinize other passengers, and then proceed to raise or lower the window—and finally move to another seat expecting the view to be better." Men never bother much about getting a special seat, Hayslett declared. "They usually take the first one they see, settle down with their papers—or perhaps they wave or talk across the aisle to a friend."

Hayslett thinks most people are abominable automobile drivers. "Men don't drive any better than women, either," he said. Steel Upswing Reduces Ohio's Army of Jobless

CLEVELAND.—Visible business straws-in-the-wind in industrial Ohio are pointing the way, observers hope, to a national recovery.

Many business leaders in this state which has eight cities of more than 100,000 population feel that the prophecy of the stock market is borne out in business uptrends and that a measure of prosperity lie ahead.

In Ohio, signs of encouragement are seen in:

The rapid rise of steel operations. Improvement in retail trade. Five weeks of consecutive improvement in department-store business in this federal reserve district.

A decline in unemployment. In Toledo, a city of 300,000 and Ohio's third in population, the Libby-Owens-Ford Glass company has called back more than 1,000 men in its plant at suburban Rossford.

Machine-tool makers in Toledo are increasingly active with orders for 1939 automobiles, due for a showing and sale in early November.

At downstate Massillon, almost a part of generally bustling Canton Republic Steel corporation has called 500 men back to work.

Here in Cleveland, the White Motor company plans to go on a five-day week.

The White Sewing Machine company, also with headquarters in this city of a million, reports a definite business pickup since mid-June.

At Painesville, 30 miles east of Cleveland, the Industrial Rayon Corporation, one of Cleveland's busiest employers through the depression and recession, is preparing to open a large branch this fall.

The number of applications for WPA employment in Cleveland has remained quiescent recently for the first time in many months.

Negro, 110, Says He May Live 20 Years

HOUSTON, Tex.—Uncle Eli Watts, Negro ex-slave, is 110 years old and says he's "liable to live another 20 years." He has survived five wives.

Uncle Eli loaf's most of the time, walks a mile a day for exercise, and does some fishing near his home at Fulshear, Tex., where he lives with a 59-year old daughter.

"Ah used to work all night by de moonlight," the old Negro said. "Den, ah'd work a thousand head of cattle all day."

Eli was born in Nashville, Tenn., on the Bill Raynor plantation. After slavery was abolished, he worked for the Allen family until the last member died here 10 years ago.

Sam Watts, Eli's father, was a carpenter who helped build the first homes here for Gen. Sam Houston and Stephen F. Austin, pioneer Texas heroes.

Eli came here to visit his 60-year-old son, Elijah. His hearing is bad and his health is delicate.

"Ah don't wanna get married no more," Eli said. "Ah can't even work no more. But ah's liable to live another 20 years."

Observers regard it as a sign of industrial upturn.

Optimism of business experts is bulwarked by the pickup in steel in the northern Ohio sector.

An uptrend in steel means more jobs in Cleveland, nearby Lorain, Youngstown—capital of Ohio's "Little Ruhr," in the Mahoning Valley—Warren, Niles, Massillon and smaller places.

Construction awards in Greater Cleveland have advanced in the past month sufficiently to warrant the interest of business in lifting more than its eyebrows.

Retail automobile sales also are running ahead of both the expected summer and recession trends, a more than casual barometer, prognosticators feel.

Pressure Cuff Is Used In Fight On Dreaded Paralysis

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Physical therapy is employed at the University of Minnesota hospital to aid patients regain the use of disease-stiffened arms and legs.

Besides the swimming pool, where patients who are slowly regaining use of limbs left helpless by infantile paralysis, diathermy machines and ultra violet lamps are used in the treatment.

Two relatively new pieces of apparatus, the pavex machine and the pressure cuff, are also employed by physical therapists.

The pavex machine resembles glass boot which fits over the A motor alternately creates pressure and vacuum to stimulate circulation. The machine is useful in warding off gangrene, aiding circulatory systems attacked by hardening of the arteries.

The pressure cuff accomplishes much the same purpose. However, the body does the work instead of a motor. The cuff resembles a band doctors wrap around the arm for taking blood pressure.

Pressure is turned on for 2 1/2 minutes after the pressure cuff is in place around arm or leg. During this time, blood in veins is stopped, and only arteries function. The arteries carry blood to the veins, which dilate and force blood into smaller blood vessels where richer circulation is needed.

Appearing in the Cohasset, Mass., town hall in a summer theater's drama version of his anti-Fascist novel, "It Can't Happen Here," Sinclair Lewis, famous American novelist, made his professional stage debut in the role of Doremus Jessup, salty Vermont editor around whom the novel and play revolve. The photo shows Lewis as character as Jessup. His performance drew seven curtain calls from an enthusiastic audience and a curtain speech from Novelist Lewis, who said: "Let's not have it happen here."

"There's The doorbell again"

Suppose daily to your door came the butcher, the grocer, the clothier, the furrier, the furniture man, and every other merchant with whom you deal? What a tedium of doorbell answering that would mean!

It would be even more impractical for you to visit daily all these stores to find out what they have to offer and the price.

And yet you need those merchants' service quite as much as they need your patronage. Contact between seller and consumer is essential in the supplying of human needs. Before a sale can be closed the goods must be offered. Every day, through the advertising columns of this newspaper, the merchants of this city come to your home with their choicest wares. Easily, quickly, you get the news of all that is worth while in the market-places of the world.

They are not strangers at the door, but merchants you know and trust. You are always surer of high quality and fair price when you buy an article advertised by a reputable firm.
