ROOSEVELT IS CAMPAIGNING FOR FAVORITES

By United Press
ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 11.—President Roosevelt began his campaign in behalf of the senatorial candidates of Lawrence Camp today with a speech on the campus of the University of Georgia.
The occasion was not appropriate for a direct attack on Senator Walter George, anti-new deal democrat and Camp's opponent in the party primary Sept. 14, but there was reference in his appeal for a reformation of the south's economic structure, which was understood as a bank handed slap at George and former Governor Eugene Talmadge, who also seeks the Georgia seat and is a much more bitter anti-new dealer.
Mr. Roosevelt received the honorary degree of doctor of laws. The real fireworks of the Georgia primary was scheduled for Barnsville this afternoon, when Mr. Roosevelt speaks at a celebration commemorating a rural electrification project. He was expected then to speak out directly for Camp.
Mr. Roosevelt spoke here of economic conditions in the south, particularly regarding education.

HARGUS LEADS TESCO TO WIN FROM PIPELINE

Behind a neat bit of ball twirling by June Hargus and a lot of support from his mates, Texas Electric took up another notch in their belts in the district tournament Wednesday night by running the Texas Pipe Liners all over the park and coming out with the big end of a 11 to 0 score.
The game belonged to the electricians all the way, and the only time that Hargus was really in danger was in the second inning after he had walked Offield and Sparks and had the bases loaded, but Vickers the second baseman went down for the third out to retire the side.
The first three electricians to the plate accounted for tallies and the first three up for the Pipe Liners went to the out column.
TESCO faired to slow up on their hitting in the least and finally after they had blasted Sparks from the box, Thompson came in from short stop to relieve him of his duties but to no avail. Gilkey got on in the third inning by a bunt, then Morris and Mitchell were soon hovering over sand bags, and Lewis the TESCO catcher smacked one of Thompson's "fat ones" so hard out into the dark he cleared the bases.
The Pipe Liners collected only 2 hits from Hargus although he allowed five walks, and the Electricians touched Sparks and Thompson for 9 bingles. Gilkey and Morris accounted for 6 of the TESCO's runs, making three apiece with Overby, Miller, Lewis, Kearney and Pope marking up one apiece. Thompson and Podtoff were the only enemy batters to touch Hargus for a clean hit.
In the second game of the evening fans saw a contest chuck full of errors as Carbon came out a couple of runs ahead of Gorman in a 7 to 9 count. Carter started for Carbon but after Gorman touched him seriously several times, Bill Ramsey came in from right field to take over the mound duties, and managed to keep Carbon in the win column. Carbon collected 7 safe ones from Craddock and Tunnell, and Gorman only managed to add up a total of 2. Tunnell, who pitched for Gorman Tuesday night, was blasted from the box and Craddock came in to relieve, but the Peanut Venders continue to tap that "ole apple" on out to the outfield. The game last night between Carbon and Gorman was played over because of an infraction of the rules in an earlier game, after it had been made entirely agreeable with both the Carbon and Gorman managers.
In tonight's game the T.P. Oilers of Ranger will tangle with Carbon in the first game and in the second one, the Royal Blues, the district champs, will engage Street's Dairy Maids. The Dairy Maids were responsible for handing Kleiner's of Cisco their first defeat in the girls tournament held here a week ago, and the Royal Blues smothered Kleiner's in the final game behind the sensational twirling from the pitcher's box on the part of Edith Rosenquest who pitched a no-hit-no-run game.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN CEASE FIRING TODAY

By United Press
TOKYO, Aug. 11.—Japanese and Russian troops, who for 31 days faced each other as enemies on the Siberian frontier, stopped their undeclared war at noon today by virtue of an agreement between their governments.
Advices said that promptly at the armistice hour Japanese buglers sounded the "cease fire" and that the order was relayed to men in advanced posts by officers' whistles and word of mouth.
Japan and Soviet Russia ceased firing today in their Siberian frontier conflict and ended the greatest immediate threat of a new world war.
The trace left opposing armies holding front line trenches within a few hundred feet of each other. Some Russians were in Manchukuo territory and some Japanese in trenches on a hill claimed by Moscow.
Both sides made concessions during negotiations at Moscow, where it was decided that Russia should have equal representation with the Japan-Manchukuo combination on a commission which will attempt to define the frontier.
There remained acute danger of new clashes on the disputed frontier because of intense feeling between the opposing troops after several major battles.
At Hankow in China the Chinese reported that their troops continued to force Japanese back in fighting 100 miles below the capital.
Japanese are said to have sent 25,000 fresh troops into the area, which was flooded in many places.
In Europe the Siberian truce was important in the diplomatic game to prevent a general war explosion in either Spain or Czechoslovakia.
Russia is in an important European role, as a friend of the Spanish loyalists and a guarantor of Czech independence.
The significance of this was emphasized a few hours after the Siberian truce by Great Britain's sudden warning to Italy that continued intervention in the Spanish Civil War would endanger the new friendship between Britain and Italy.

Matchsticks, Cotton, Pans, Gas, and Belts

Japan's matches are going to be shorter, hereafter—shorter by exactly 29 one-thousandths of an inch. Furthermore, Japanese housewives are going to have to get along without iron frying pans; cotton clothing will no longer be on sale, and Japanese motorists will be able to buy no more than two gallons of gasoline a day.

These odd little items are part of a new win-the-war drive. Japan gets most of her raw materials from abroad, and subduing the wily Chinaman leaves little cash for outside purchases. So the pennies have to be pinched. Shortening the matchsticks, for instance, will mean a saving of some $290,000 a year.

All of this comes under the general heading of tightening one's belt.

That's an easy phrase to use—tightening the belt. It creates a not-unpleasant vision of a dauntless athlete settling down to a long cross-country race. What we don't see, until we stop to think about it, is the great mass of patient, uncomplaining people enduring discomforts and major privations, putting up with a lower standard of living, permitting themselves to be shut off from the good things of life.

Yet that is precisely what it does mean. It is a part of war, of the "drive for empire" that ambitious nations indulge in.

During the last 20 years men have come to accept the idea that any one nation can prosper only at the expense of its neighbors. It must have raw materials, colonies, room for expansion, trade outlets, markets; it can get them only by taking them from someone else. Consequently its people must make great sacrifices in preparation for the struggle—at the end of which, of course, they will be rewarded by an abundance of the good things they have had to go without.

This theory might make sense if the good things of this world were strictly limited. But they aren't.

As a matter of fact, they are embarrassing by their abundance. The world burns coffee, grain, and other foodstuffs, shuts down mines, lets factories lie idle, limits the production of its fields and its forests—and then doggedly goes ahead and "tightens its belt," does without things, and looks ahead to the day when military triumph will make these things available once more.

Some day people will look back on this present era as a time of collective lunacy. They will find it hard to believe that stories like this one out of Japan could really have been true.

But there will be plenty of wars and rumors of wars before that day comes.

Taster of Soap Likes His Work

By United Press
MILWAUKEE—John Hanser has had his mouth washed with soap daily for 40 years, and he has grown to like it. Unlike youngsters who have their mouths washed when they say naughty words, Hanser puts the soap into his mouth himself and gets paid for it. Hanser is a soap taster by profession. He tastes it to determine its alkali and fat content. Along with three other men who work at "freak" jobs, he told of his work at a Kiwanis club meeting. "You can get a taste for soap just as you can for spinach or anything else," Hanser said. "It's always fun to blow bubbles." John Gaar showed the Kiwanians how to be a human worm. With a special "gun," he explained, he makes worm holes in manufactured "antiques." Lionel Sorrell, 21, spends about six months of every year roller skating for a living. Each work day from May to early November he don't skates about once an hour for a short "spin." His job is testing roller skates for a firm which manufactures them here. He says he averages about 1,000 miles of skating each season. The job makes him a little "seasick" and jittery from dodging automobiles, he admitted. Joseph Egerer said he had blasted the old theory of success. He told the Kiwanians he had begun at the top about 21 years ago and has been working downward ever since. He is a well digger.

Play Spot Entrepreneur Makes Bonanza of Back Yard

Jimmy Fede, Newark, N. J., lad shown ministering to several of his younger patrons, is coming these days as a playground proprietor. Jimmy charges his 25 customers 10 cents each for the right to play in his back yard, and throws in a snack of hot corn, bologna and cheese sandwiches, and no roughhouse stuff goes in Jimmy's resort (his ma frowns on it), so he teaches the boys to make the girls bring their sewing. Jimmy says rising food costs may force him to increase the price to 15 cents, in which case he will add meat balls and spaghetti to the menu.

Yesterday, on sudden inspiration Kinks invites two strangers to try the Pennington-Parker Restorium—his aunt's house.

CHAPTER IV

SALLY PENNINGTON gaped at him. Fortunately she was too embarrassed for speech just at that moment. The elderly woman eyed Kinks, who was feeling as Caesar must have felt on the opposite bank of the Rubicon.

"The Pennington-Parker Restorium?" she repeated. "I never heard of it."

"No," said Kinks. "You couldn't have. It—it only opened today. You'll be the first—ah—patrons."

The old gentleman behind the wheel spoke for the first time.

"It wouldn't do any harm to have a look at the place, Mother," he said.

"Now, Papa," said the woman, in a hush-hush tone. Then she addressed Kinks again: "What are your rates?"

"Six dollars per day," flashed Sally.

The woman in the car took time out for thought.

"Very well," she said at length. "Mr. Harkness and I will look at it. And I hope you have electricity. Mr. Harkness likes to putter with electricity."

"There is electricity," Sally told her.

"All right," said Mrs. Harkness. "How do we get there?"

"Just follow our car," said Kinks grandly.

"Now you've done it," said Sally, as she headed the ancient Ford back toward Mrs. Preston's place. "What on earth possessed you?"

"Feed 'em, sleep 'em and let 'em putter with the electricity. At six bucks a day per person. Why, in about 50 days we'll have earned the mortgage interest. Parker's bright idea saves old homestead."

"What do you think of that?" "I think it's nuts," said Sally. "The mortgage is due in two weeks. And even if we did this mad thing, the money wouldn't be all clear profit."

"Something else will turn up," said Kinks confidently. "Just like the Harknesses did."

MRS. PRESTON'S house was as charming inside as out, save for the presence of a superfluous mounted animal head in the living room. While Sally, dithering slightly, showed the bedrooms to the Harknesses, Kinks inspected the collection of mounted specimens, so strangely at odds with the antique furniture and tasteful curtains.

There was an elk's head, complete with antlers, over the fireplace. And gazing through to the dining room Kinks perceived a speckled trout condemned to gaze for Eternity upon a varnished board.

"My Lord," he murmured. "Who let these in?"

"Well," she said, "we're in the soup up to our necks. The Harknesses are crazy about the place."

"Swell," said Kinks. "Look Sally—Miss Pennington, do you mind if I say that I'm getting quite a kick out of being in business with you?"

"Very nice of you, I'm sure, Kin—Mr. Parker," said Sally. "Let's take a hurdle," suggested Kinks, "and make it Sally and Kinks."

"All right. But I still think you're insane, Kinks. I don't know the first thing about running a hotel or a sanatorium or whatever this place is turning out to be."

"Confidentially," said Kinks, "I don't either. But I'll try anything once."

"And what Mrs. Clipstack is going to say, I can't think. She'll probably throw a fit. She does once in a while."

"Lead me to her," said Kinks. "I'll take Mrs. C. like Grant took Richmond."

Mrs. Clipstack was white-haired, red-checked and built on the same general plan as the Pennsylvania stationer. She radiated a kind of comfortable, flat-footed solidity.

But she was deaf as the well-known post.

"This is Mr. Parker, Mrs. Clipstack," said Sally, raising her voice.

Mrs. Clipstack put her hands on her hips and her eyes gave Kinks a thorough going over. Then she removed a hand from a hip and cupped it behind her ear.

"Eh?" she said. "I said," shouted Sally, "that this is MR. PARKER."

"What say?" said Mrs. Clipstack. "PARKER?" shrieked Sally. "Tough going just here, isn't it?" murmured Kinks.

"Parker, hoy?" Intelligence swept over the Clipstackian visage. "Then—then he's Mrs. Preston's nephew?"

Sally nodded. "Well, young man," said Mrs. Clipstack severely, "I hope you ain't no improvident scapegrace like your father was."

KINKS looked blank for a second. "My father? Oh, I get it. She's heard that from my aunt. Tell her I'm not a scapegrace, will you, Sally?"

"Tell her yourself," said Sally. "My throat won't work any more."

Kinks told her, at the top of his lungs. He also beamed upon her. But Mrs. Clipstack looked skeptical.

"Who broke my winder?" she demanded, at last. Sally pointed to Kinks.

"There!" said Mrs. Clipstack, triumphantly. "I suspicioned it all along. He is a scapegrace."

"You'll have to square yourself with her for that window," Sally laughed, when they were back in the living room. "You can go into Winstock tomorrow, find a glazier and pay for the work, too, and right now, I've got a job for you. Out you go and bring in the Harknesses' luggage."

"Who, me?" said Kinks. "Yes, you. What do you think you're going to do, just pose around here?"

"Okay, Mrs. Legree," said Kinks and departed.

When he returned laden with luggage Sally was at the phone in the hall. She hung up as he was crossing the living room.

"Was that somebody else inquiring our rates?" Kinks said jokingly.

"Don't be silly," said Sally. "That was Wilton Ames."

"Wilton Ames? Who the devil is Wilton Ames?"

"Oh, nobody very much," said Sally negligently. "Just the man I'm probably going to marry."

Poverty Report On Youths Is Made By a University

MONTREAL—Malnutrition, unsanitary living conditions and irregular domestic arrangements are gravely menacing the present and future health of unemployed youth here, the McGill University department of social research reveals in a statistical study on nutrition.

The survey was made by Dr. Leonard Marsh, director of the department, in collaboration with Dean Grant Fleming of the Faculty of Medicine and Dr. C. F. Blackler, formerly social research assistant at McGill.

The report declares that 50 per cent of the unemployed youth of Montreal is undernourished and urges a fuller investigation into the effects of poverty upon youth.

"Growing boys need adequate food if they are to maintain growth as well as vigor, while the effects of undernourishment are likely to have more serious repercussions during youth than its occurrence later in life," the report states.

"Using the same standards as for the adults, the nutritional status of 53 per cent of the boys was judged to be below average while nearly a third were classed as poor or definitely malnourished."

The report states that not only was there definite malnourishment found but also other detrimental factors in a large proportion of the youth of unemployed families. Among the other factors, "most important is the fact that poverty means overcrowding, which in turn frequently means loss of sleep, unsanitary living conditions and irregular domestic arrangements."

"Unsatisfactory housing, fatigue and malnutrition interact on each other and all of these on the general state of health," the report adds. "It is clear that a fuller inquiry into these important aspects of juvenile life and labor is badly needed."

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The LaFollette committee, through which labor spies have been introduced to the public for the first time, dug up a couple the other day and put them on the stand.

Scanning the committee room crowd, you can't spot spies from the rest. You exempt Mrs. LaFollette and other women, since steel spies are men. Also Vice-President C. M. White, of Republican Steel, who chews gum, and a retinue, and a score of newspapermen and photographers and others you know.

Chairman LaFollette, white-clad, unburned, bespectacled and wearing in lapel the circled cross emblem of the new LaFollette political party (does anyone remember the name?), looks over the crowd.

Then he calls Harold F. Vargo, who promptly admits such aliases as Ira Albert and Richard Brooks. Vargo is a tall, slim, darty-eyed young fellow probably in his late twenties. His hair is plastered back, and he wears a pencil-striped blue suit, fancy-figure blue shirt and white wash tie.

Yes, indeed, he was employed at the Republic plant in Youngstown in 1935-37 as Ira Albert, joined the union and organized workers. The boys elected him financial secretary and he kept track of all records and dues for a lodge of 1800 to 1900 members.

LaFollette calls other leaders of the union lodge, Charlie Fagan, boyish-faced, swarthy Irishman who was fired before the strike, and Ed Valesky, soft-voiced, swavy-haired Pole, once a steel inspector and others. Yes, rumors had come that someone was "turning in" names of new union members, who were being fired in different parts of the plant. Albert alone had the names of dues-payers. Albert, without suffering, spent much time away from work at meetings, at union headquarters.

Albert would say, referring to Republic cops, "let's go up and clean 'em out." Explained Fagan: "A good union man never says that. . . . We took steps to eliminate this gentleman."

Suddenly LaFollette pops an affidavit from the lady with whom Vargo previously lived in Buffalo. They were "getting along very well" when Vargo became discontented with $25 a week; became a Republic guard and went to Youngstown. "That's what I told her," snorted Vargo, denying Republic employment in Buffalo, but admitting under questioning he had gone to drive a cab during a Cleveland taxi strike.

Without warning, LaFollette demanded to know all strike-breaking and undercover jobs on which Vargo had worked. Vargo, dropping a pose of innocence, revealed a series. Burly Chief Jim Williams of Republic police had sent him to Youngstown. (It had been "out on the grapevine" that Jim Williams could use a few men.)

Republican Police Captain Earl Butler gave him a gun and told him to "keep his eyes open."

The story of Vargo ended as Valesky, after asserting the man had tried to get himself and others to chip in for bomb expenses, told how the group had been arrested and beaten up at the police station with the exception of "Albert." Vargo said the victims got what was coming to them.

PHILADELPHIA.—Gibson, I would say that Tony Galento will have to tag John Henry Lewis and tag him well—to win their scheduled 15-round fight in Municipal Stadium here, July 26.

The barrel-shaped Galento is rough and strong, makes good use of his elbows, and is a right-angled left hooker, but he figures to be outspurred by the clever and resourceful Negro.

There are scars around Galento's eyes, so there is danger of his being cut in that locality. . . . and stopped. But he has knocked out his last five rivals, and finished Nathan Mann quicker than did Joe Louis. He maintains a pace better than one would suspect.

Previous opponents of Galento could not resist the temptation of punching his keg-like body. This turned out to be a mistake, for the rolls of fat that make him slower than Gus Mancuso seem to act as shock absorbers.

It is about the head that he appears to be the more vulnerable. As related in the foregoing, parking his authoritative left amid Lewis' whiskers is Galento's principal hope. The signor's chance of doing this will be improved if it is true that the light-heavyweight champion's underpinning isn't as firm as it once was.

LEWIS' leg trouble, if any, scarcely can be traced to his age. The Arizonian is only 24, according to the records, but he has been one of our busiest and more business-like workmen for seven years.

Lewis can be clipped. Isadore Gastanaga, who also has a wicked hook, proved that in October, when he stopped a Greenlee's meal ticket in early heat. . . . gave him a sound shelling as the result.

Lewis came out of that engagement more highly recommended than ever, however. He made it clear that he knew what to do on the floor and that he was thoroughly game. It was just two months later that the heavy Gastanaga paid for the liberties he had taken.

Fight hungry Philadelphia evidently intends to make the Lewis-Galento party a big one. It is safe to say that the gladiators will draw $100,000, although Promoter Herman Taylor insists that the advance sale and interest indicate a $150,000 gate.

PROVIDED the Lewis-Galento shindy is a satisfactory one, an unusual situation will be created no matter who wins. Both are daffy to tackle Max Baer in September.

A Lewis victory would put another young Negro's breath hot on the back of Joe Louis' neck.

In that case, Louis might find it difficult to draw the color line. A triumph for Galento would leave as the outstanding challenger for the world heavyweight championship a saloonkeeper who trains on amber fluid, uses wine bottles as Indian clubs, and smokes big, black cigars for conditioning purposes.

Not even John L. Sullivan could have walked into Tony Galento's Jersey joint, and offered to lick any man in the house without being called.

Galento would have taken a poke at him, anyway.

He'll take a poke at John Henry Lewis, too.

EVEN a fish can have its salad days. So can sausage and good red meats. In a delightful book called "Salads and Dressings" by the irrepressible crowns, the varied life of the salad and pungent herbs unfolds itself.

Here are three of the three hundred recipes.

Swedish Fish Salad. Carefully flake any firm cooked fish, add an equal bulk of cooked shrimps, and half the quantity of cooked young peas, sprinkle with minced tarragon or parsley and dress with the following sauce.

Sauce Two hard-cooked egg yolks, 1 raw egg yolk, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup whipped cream, salt and pepper, 1/4 cup oil.

Press cooked egg yolks through sieve, season, mix with raw egg yolk and mix with milk and mix with lemon juice. Then fold in cream. Mix with fish, garnish with chopped egg whites, sliced leeks, wedges of lemon and lettuce leaves.

Salami Salad One cup finely diced salami, 2 cups shredded cabbage, 1/4 cup

Tomorrow's Menu

LUNCHEON: Salami salad, wholewheat bread, baked apples, tea, milk.

DINNER: Clear tomato soup, Swedish fish salad, hard rolls, boiled potatoes, lattice blackberry pie, coffee, milk.

grated cheese, 3/4 cup French dressing. Mix salami and cabbage. Add cheese to dressing, mix with salami and cabbage and let stand 30 minutes. Sliced radishes may be added if desired. Arrange on crisp lettuce.

Beef Salad Shred left-over boiled or baked beef into strips. Marinate for 1 hour in French dressing brightened with tabasco sauce. Mix with shredded lettuce, sprinkle with French dressing and garnish the dish with slices of tomato, green pepper rings and onion slices.

The use of herbs is an old-fashioned habit with a modern enthusiasm. Better join the fun.

Newlyweds Go On Bicycling Tour

CLEVELAND—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Runyan pedaled along on a bicycle honeymoon.

Runyan, 29, of suburban Lakewood, O., and the former Miss Helen Patterson, 25, of Plain City, O., were married in Plain City. They then strapped a suitcase on the rear of the bridegroom's racing bicycle and turned their wheels toward Washington.

They decided on a bicycle honeymoon after riding around Sylvan, O., this spring.

Runyan said that on their numerous bicycle jaunts they had averaged from 30 to 40 miles a day.

Runyan coaches football in Sylvan high school. His wife teaches Latin and French in the same school.

They have three months of vacation. In that time they expect to pedal 2,500 miles.

On a two-hour stretch they can attain a speed of 14 miles an hour, but they will keep their speed down to 10 miles an hour on a longer trip, the bridegroom said.

The cast of Humphrey Dodd's "Fence on Earth" was waiting for the "picture" curtain—waiting for the applause, would never come—for in "A" Box lay Bennett Hayden, munitions manufacturer, heading to death, while pandemonium broke loose in the orchestra seats. HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
