Japan's Armies Race a River of Gold

One way to get an idea whether Japan will finally whip China is to follow the troop movements as reported in the daily papers. Another way is to keep an eye on the gold movements, which are ever so much less spectacular. Armies move to the accomplishment of crashing guns, and go to the field of action with a certain amount of fanfare and drumbeating, even in this day of mechanized fighting. Gold moves quickly, like a thief in the night, and only a few people bother to trace its course as recorded on the financial pages. But in the end it can be the more important of the two.

Not long ago John T. Flynn noted the heavy drain of gold Japan has been suffering recently, and pointed out that in 15 months the country had been obliged to send $346,000,000 of gold to the United States. A little later a New York Times writer remarked that the figure had risen to $352,000,000.

These figures can mean but one thing: that Japan is going broke at a rapid pace. The best estimates have it that her gold reserve now is no higher than $261,000,000. Her foreign markets are steadily dwindling; meanwhile the tremendously expensive war in China forces her to keep on buying goods abroad—cotton, oil, iron, munitions, and so on. She can no longer pay for these goods with her own exports. The gold supply with which she can pay is fast vanishing.

Which means, obviously, that Japan's fate rests on the outcome of a race between her armies and her gold supply. If the armies can win a complete and final victory before bankruptcy arrives, well and good; if they cannot, Japan faces utter ruin. And if the ruin comes it will not come from the rout of Japanese troops in the field but from that slow, inexorable, silent trickling-away of yellow metal.

All of this, of course, is Japan's worry, not ours—except that it emphasizes an important little fact which we sometimes forget.

Despite all of the thimble-rigging and phengling which most great governments have indulged in, in the field of economics, it does seem to be true that there are a few fundamental economic laws that in the long run have got to be obeyed. The oldest, simplest, and most-often-forgotten of them all would seem to be, simply, that if you spend beyond your income, and keep on doing it long enough, you wind up in a disaster.

There are all kinds of expedients by which the evil day can be postponed, of course. Some of them work beautifully—for a time. But the reckoning has to be paid sooner or later. And if you can't pay it when the time comes, you are in for an exceedingly unpleasant experience.

THE FUN-LOVING ROVER BOYS

Company I and the Third Army Games

By The Company Clerk CAMP BULLIS, Texas, Aug. 7.—Just a few memoirs from the company clerk to let our friends and loved ones back home know that the boys in Company I are enjoying army life to the fullest. After a rather uneventful trip from Ranger, we detained at Viva (a wide place in the road 16 miles north of San Antonio) at 6 a. m. this morning. However, one little incident, which reflected the first blood spilled in this war, occurred while our troop train was rounding a curve near Weatherford, when Private Joseph Aaron was thrown against the company ice box and bursted a blood vessel. No sooner had we detrained than First Sergeant "Fuzz" Thomas called "Fall In," and we were off for another adventure. About two miles of hiking in single file on either side of the road to allow the supply and artillery trucks to pass brought us to our quarters in the southeastern portion of Camp Bullis. Our two weeks training was to start, so naturally the first order from Captain Fletcher was to police the area of our company quarters, erect the tents, and fill the bedsacks (mattresses) with hay which had been provided for the purpose. In view of the fact that approximately 13,000 men are quartered in this camp alone a system of arrangement and organization was very essential to the training of the men. It is a veritable beehive of soldiers, almost as far as one can see. Dinner right on the dot and prepared to a nicety by Chief Cook Bill Rainwater, erstwhile baker for Schooley at Ranger, together with Assistant Cooks "Stubbie" Aaron, Mace Oyler and Jessie Minter. Leaves were granted to a few of Company I men during the afternoon and evening to see the bright lights of San Antonio. However, the majority remained in camp.

The first day in camp passed only too soon. After the echoes of sing-songs from across the camp, to the tune of "K-K-Katy," "There's A Long, Long Trail A-Winding" and the Field Artillery song, the Ranger boys of Company I obeyed the call of taps, and tucked away in their bunks to pleasant dreams. Monday, Aug. 8.—First call at 5:15; reveille at 5:45; chow at 6:15; and then to the drill field along with the balance of the 142nd Infantry Regiment to receive instruction in flag maneuvers. Attached to our company for training purposes for the duration of the field maneuvers are the following reserve officers: Captain C. Weber and Lieutenants Longshore and McDonald. These men have been quite helpful to Captain Fletcher and to the men of our company since they are well trained in war tactics. Lieutenant Longshore, due to his World War experience, is especially helpful to us. Came those evening "bull sessions" around quarters, with myriads of yarns which not even the lowest rookie believed; soldiers strolling about camp; a "runner" now and then with orders from the major to the captain; intermittent trips back and forth to the canteen, a Comanche whoop now and then, and at last—taps. Tuesday, Aug. 9.—Company I, together with the balance of our regiment, arose well before daylight, was served with the customary ham and eggs and that good black army coffee, was off at 7 a. m. under full pack and rifle on a six-mile hike to attack Hill No. 1106, which was reported by S-2 to be held by the enemy (the Browns). With the assistance of the three machine gun companies of our regiment, we captured our objective and returned at 11:30 a. m. The regiment left again (in trucks this time) on a ten-mile hike and arrived at Hill No. 1103 at 6:30 p. m., for outpost duty. In order to prevent the enemy air force from detecting or seriously interfering with our movements, our trucks left out at three-minute intervals and consequently were about a mile or so

Judge to Speak On Reforms In Prisons

By United Press HOUSTON—Judge Langston G. King, crusader for Texas penal reforms, has been invited to speak on jail problems before the American Prison Association meeting at St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 2-7. Judge King discussed the same subject when the association met here in 1934, and he spoke of adult probation at the next convention, in Atlanta, Ga. The invitation to the St. Paul meeting was extended by Roy E. Flannagan, Richmond, Va., chairman of the committee on jails. Judge King said he would accept. Other than serving on our post duty, the most of our men spent their first night out, hidden from the stars only by the cover of "pup tents" which were a part of the pack. After this bit of marching, both by truck and about the bunks on Mother Earth felt fine, and taps at 9:30 p. m. was music to our ears. Wednesday, Aug. 10.—We were all glad to reach camp again at 8:30 a. m. this morning, only glad for a rest and the opportunity to police up in preparation for the divisional parade for the benefits of Governors Allred of Texas and Marland of Oklahoma, and Governor-elect O'Daniel of Texas. And what a parade! "I'll never forget it," said Private Harry Ewart, who lives on Mesquite street in Ranger. The march started at 2:30 p. m., and not until 6:30 did it stop. Infantry, cavalry, artillery (both light and heavy), machine gun companies, anti-aircraft, engineers, and everything that is used in a modern army, occupied the line of march. And was Governor-elect O'Daniel proud of "his boys"? "I didn't know Texas had that many soldiers," he said in his address of welcome. A soap manufacturer believes that soap may be used in cases of the future to increase their fluffiness. "Just for that, young man, you're going to have your mouth washed out with a piece of angel-food!"

PREVIEW OF A SEASON

By the calendar it's still Summer . . . but it's Autumn by the advertisements! They're starting now with exciting bulletins from the fashion front, news of special fur and furniture sales, and clever ideas for home decoration.

Turn the pages! So those are the hats we'll wear this Fall! Here's a chance to select your winter coat—of fur, or fur-trimmed—at a great saving. There are items of interest to September brides and grooms looking for unusual values in furnishings for the new home. Right alongside is a description of the latest in window hangings that would lure Mother from her preoccupation with the children's school wardrobes.

Look ahead to Autumn for a reason of thrilling activity . . . and look to your favorite newspaper's advertising columns for a foretaste of coming fashions in clothes, and housefurnishings and entertaining. Buy, when you're ready, from the merchants who, through their printed messages, have kept you posted, guided you to values, and saved you money. Read the advertisements . . . and be ready for Fall.

GROWING LIKE A WEED . . . But Not Filling Out

TRY DELICIOUS QUAKER OATS AND SEE THE DIFFERENCE!

HOW grand to see them growing up! But how important that they keep building plenty of firm flesh as their little bodies "stretch out." Millions of parents have learned this pleasant way to help nature in its work! Start each day with wholesome, delicious Quaker Oats! Oatmeal, you see, is the richest of all whole grain foods in proteins, the vital food elements so necessary to firm muscles and strong sturdy bodies. It's richer too in iron for blood, in phosphorus for teeth and bones, and in important Vitamin B, than other thrifty cereals. Persons of all ages should have Vitamin B, supplied to them every day to help combat nervousness, indigestion, constipation and lack of appetite. Growing children particularly need the things this better kind of breakfast gives them . . . to "fill them out" with firm flesh and sturdy muscles. It's most economical, and you can have a delicious Quaker Oats breakfast for your whole family ready in only 2 1/2 minutes!
