

ARNOLD URGES OIL BE MADE NEW UTILITY

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold hinted today that he would ask congress to declare the oil industry a public utility.

Arnold compared the present trend for regulation of monopolies with that of 1933 when "we were forced to take control of the financing and marketing of securities."

As head of the department of justice's anti-trust division, he blamed industrial price-fixing agreements and coercion for "gradually changing this country into an industrial autocracy."

Using the oil industry as an example he charged major oil companies with standing between the independent companies and their markets.

By United Press

Matthews said he knew the congress was a communist front organization, because he aided in organizing it while working for the communist party.

White is president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Matthews also charged that hundreds of communists worked their way into federal jobs in a gigantic "plot" to gain control of the Democratic party.

FULL PENSIONS PROMISED IN O'DANIEL TALK

By United Press
FORT WORTH, Aug. 20.—Payment of old age assistance "in full" early in 1939 was predicted by W. Lee O'Daniel today in a radio talk urging support for his "preferred" slate of six candidates in run-off elections for state offices.

"By the citizens working with me," said the democratic nominee for governor, "I firmly believe we will be paying the old age pension in full early in 1939."

Failure to present a solid front in state offices, he warned, might wreck the entire program because "no progress is ever made in a house divided against itself."

During the press conference preceding his talk O'Daniel was asked if old age assistance would come first on his legislative program. The answer was an emphatic "yes sir."

Maximum pension possible under existing laws is $30 per month on a basis of need for those past 65 years of age.

Many persons who exercise "snap judgment" in opposing O'Daniel's endorsement are "switching back to the standards after more sober and thoughtful consideration" he said.

One Union, Divisible by Its Friends

The man who remarked that he could take care of his enemies if someone would just protect him from his friends might well have been a member of a labor union, 1938 model. For labor is having its biggest trouble right now with its own chosen leaders.

The split between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization is, of course the most obvious example. Even more damaging, however, in some respects, is the row which is currently tearing the United Auto Workers apart.

This appears to be a civil war in the high command. One group accuses the other of being Communist-dominated and inspired; that group retorts that the opposition is led by "Lovestonites," an offshot faction of the original Communist party which is in sworn opposition to Stalinist leadership.

All of this may be stimulating and invigorating to the leaders involved, but it can't be very welcome news to the ordinary workers.

A labor union is first and last a collective bargaining agency for its members. It is the instrument through which they deal with their employer on something like the basis of equality which prevailed in the small, man-to-man dealings of the shops of a century ago. The one thing the rank and file has a right to demand of its leaders is that they be as efficient as possible in conducting those dealings.

But a leadership which is split wide open over doctrinal disputes about which the rank and file cares little is hardly in shape to bargain efficiently. In this particular instance, it is demonstrating that the "red scare" which has been raised in connection with the auto union in the past has a substantial basis in fact; further, it is practically inviting any employer who is so minded to drive as hard a bargain as he cares to drive—or, for that matter, to refuse to bargain at all.

Labor has made tremendous advances in the last few years. These have come largely because people have at last realized that everybody gets along better when peaceful, orderly bargaining exists—bargaining in which both sides recognize their responsibilities not only to those whom they directly represent but to society as a whole. For America, after all, is still sold on the idea that capital and labor are traveling in the same direction and will get there faster by co-operating than by quarreling.

That is why this auto union squabble is so distressing. It helps no one; it hurts most of all the people whom the squabblers are supposed to represent.

An actress is quoted as saying the moving picture people should stick to one type. That startled us, too, but it turned out she was talking about roles.

ARBUCKLE IS OUTSTANDING IN W. F. WIN

By Wendell Siebert

A determined bunch of Rookies from Wichita Falls slapped a 2-0 win in the record books Friday night to set the Royal Blues of Eastland back for their first defeat of the Regional A. S. A. A. tournament and keep themselves in the running for the crown. In short, the whole story was too much Arbuckle, the all state shortstop who got three for three. It was Arbuckle who started things rolling for the Rookies in the 2nd inning when he lined one out into left field, then Leath hit safely with Arbuckle going to third. Dekker, the All State catcher smacked a high one out to Hale in the short field and Arbuckle scored from third basing giving the Rookies a lead that they never relinquished.

In the seventh inning the Rookies tallied again when Hartman the first hitter got on first by an error by Horn after Baggett had made a nice stop and a good peg, then Ready singled and Meddlin followed by getting on loading the bases. Then All State Arbuckle lived up to her name when she burned one through E. Rosenquest in the pitchers box and Hartman scored for the second tally. In this same inning the Blues executed a dazzling triple play that retired the side. Leath hit to Rosenquest, Rosenquest to Horn cut Arbuckle down and Horn to Baggett clipped Meddlin into the out column for the third out.

The Blues got their best chance of the evening to score in the third inning, when Edith Rosenquest, the first hitter, singled and on an error by Ready stretched it to a triple. It was Rosenquest on third, Hale hitting, and none away, Hale grounded to Meddlin on third and Rosenquest attempting to score on the play was thrown out together in a cave for 33 days to make tests came out with the announcement they couldn't agree on their findings. It doesn't take that much living together for a lot of people to find they can't agree on anything.

Eli: Responsibility for Others

Text: 1 Samuel 3:11-14; 4:12-18

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

ELI, the high priest—to whom Hannah, the godly mother, brought her little son, Samuel, that he might be brought up in the service of the temple—stands as a sad and sorry figure in Scriptures and in history. The sadness, too, is that he is a type of a large number of well-intentioned but inefficient and suffering parents.

Eli was apparently a good man. Nothing is recorded against his own personal integrity and uprightness. So far as we can judge, also, he was a faithful priest. Yet he failed in one of the most essential things, and the failure indicated a crucial weakness of character that did not show any actual moral delinquency.

He lacked the power, insight, or will to train and discipline his own sons. The record puts it very plainly and flatly, "His sons did bring a curse upon themselves, and he restrained them not."

The story is an illustration of how the wayward and evil-doing children can bring tragedy to themselves and to their parents.

The evil in these sons of Eli was deep and flagrant. Moreover, it ought to be noticed in dealing with this lesson that the evil of these sons of Eli was very much like the evil in many perverse young people today.

THEY flouted the idea of moral discipline. In their eyes there was no such thing as purity. They were all for natural instinct and indulgence. They did not restrain themselves, as Eli did not restrain them. Moreover, they chose the very environment of the temple where their father ministered for their vile deeds. It was essentially the type of unrestrained and so-called "self-expression" that many people are advocating and practicing today in defiance and contempt for both of social convention and the moral code. The thing could not but end badly, and we may be perfectly sure that similar things will end badly today.

These sons of Eli were dishonest grafters as well as moral reprobates. When you get laxity, dishonesty, or grafting in church or state, it is not long until church and state become weakened and ready to totter with the corruption. The personal goodness of men like Eli, who permit wrong, is not sufficient to save the situation.

The tragedy in this case was not all personal. Israel was surrounded by enemies. The Philistines came against the Israelites, and when the Israelites were put to flight, they hoped that they might find safety and victory by bringing the Ark of the Covenant into the battle.

It is an old story for men to turn to some magic of religion when they have neglected moral duties and moral character. The Ark was carried into the battle by the rascally sons of Eli—Hophni and Phinehas. It was a dark and terrible day for Israel. The Israelites were completely overwhelmed.

The Ark of the Covenant was captured, and when the news came to Eli, the old man was so overcome that he fell backward, breaking his neck, and died. He had judged Israel for 40 years, but a well-intentioned record had been blackened and ruined by his weakness.

The moral and the lesson are surely very applicable to today.

Yesterday, the Amers...
CHAPTER XII

"I COULD kill Spencer Ames," Sally said venomously, as she headed the car out of Winstock.

Miss Clara Fenimore

"Seems to me he could," said Kinks. "Didn't old Kenworthy say he just about owns that bank?"

"Wilton was decent about it, anyhow," said Sally.

"He made an impassioned plea, all right," Kinks admitted. "But listen, beautiful, don't you go getting any wild notions in your head. I positively forbid you to marry Wilton Ames no matter how expert he becomes at bawling out his father."

"Marry?" exclaimed Sally. "Good heavens, I'm too busy to marry anybody. If you or Wilton want to get married, you'd better find some girl who isn't trying to run a cockeyed hotel."

An alien car stood in the driveway as they approached the Restorium. And on the porch, in conversation with Mr. Harkness, sat a tall, thin female whose pale-gold hair, threaded here and there with gray, flourished in wild abandon about her head.

"Well," began Sally, "you don't need..."

"What's he making so much fuss about?" said Kinks. "I mislaid my tobacco pouch this morning, but you haven't heard me squawk."

"Et tu, Brute?" said Sally. "It seems to be a day for losing things. Mrs. Clipstack can't find her potato peeler."

They had been down to the river and were now approaching the house across the back lawn.

"How's the Fenimore liking the place?" Kinks asked.

Sally laughed. "She says her nerves are better already. She's gone off in her car, happy as a lark."

KINKS' reply was cut short by the sudden appearance of Mr. Bull Griffin. A look of alarm dominated Mr. Griffin's rook-ribbed countenance.

"Hey," he said agitatedly. "I've lost me red."

"Your what?" said Sally. "Me gat, me iron."

"What on earth," she demanded, "is the man talking about?"

"He's lost his gun," Kinks translated.

"Dat's it," said Bull. "Me gun I leave it in me coat, an' me an Spaldini goes fer a walk an' now it's gone."

"Well," began Sally, "you don't need..."

She stopped abruptly. A second-story window had opened. The head of Mrs. Clipstack was thrust out.

"Miss Pennington," called Mrs. Clipstack in a portentous voice "can you and Mr. Parker come here a minute?"

Sally and Kinks hurried up stairs. Mrs. Clipstack stood in the room recently assigned to Miss Clara Fenimore. One hand was raising a corner of the mattress off the bed. The other pointed to a collection of articles lying on the springs. And the Clipstickian face wore a severe expression.

"I don't know what's goin' on in this house," said Mrs. Clipstack. "I was doin' this room an' look what I found!"

Kinks and Sally looked. Huddled together on the bed spring were three spools of silk, an ash tray, a small china ornament from the living room mantelpiece, Mrs. Clipstack's potato peeler, Kinks' tobacco pouch, Mr. Harkness' pliers, and Bull Griffin's revolver.

Sally put a hand to her head. "My Lord," she exclaimed. "What is the woman? A junk collector?"

Kinks saw light suddenly. "No," he said. "Unless I'm waff, she's a kleptomaniac."

the nature of the place," said Miss Fenimore. "I am not in need of medical attention. All that I want is relaxation and no one to bother me."

"All right," said Sally briskly. "I do have a room that I think you'd like. Would you care to see it?"

Miss Fenimore arose. It was apparent at once that she was the kind of woman who sheds things. She shed now in a heterogeneous shower.

In good order the book, the magazine, the cigaret case, the handbag, and Wolfgang, the dachshund, descended to the porch. Kinks, gallantly, retrieved all but Wolfgang.

"Well," he said to Mr. Harkness, as Sally and Miss Fenimore departed, "there's another one. I hope you don't mind the mixed company around here."

MR. HARKNESS made no reply. He was gazing wolfishly after Wolfgang, the dachshund. Kinks, perceiving his trend of thought, respected it with silence. It was obvious that Mr. Harkness was considering Wolfgang as a subject for electrification.

On the following day a major tragedy occurred. Mr. Harkness lost his pliers.

Up to that point the business of installing batteries in the various mounted animal heads had been progressing by leaps and bounds. Now, however, it was suddenly suspended. And the electrical genius moaned about dolefully, searching everywhere, and constantly getting under the feet of Sally and Mrs. Clipstack.

"If that little man asks me if I've seen his pliers just once more," Sally told Kinks, exasperatedly, "I'm going to take him across my knee. He's pestered me to death."

the waves as they came into shore. After the swim we went back to camp and ate supper. Mr. L. L. Johnson, State Boys' Club Agent had charge of the program for that night, and he had each boy to get up and tell what he had done in his county for the protection and conservation of wildlife.

R. E. Callender, extension service, wildlife specialist, followed Mr. Johnson, and discussed "What 4-H members can do to make the wildlife program more effective."

We went to bed early that night so as to be prepared for a big day Thursday.

At 5:30 in the morning we were up and off to the bay for a thirty minute swim. Breakfast at six o'clock. After breakfast all of the boys were called together for a group of talks on the following subjects: "Wildlife Helps in Wildlife Conservation," and a Wildlife tour. Noon is here and our first fish dinner.

Soon after dinner Mr. Barnhart took us down to Mrs. Jack Hagar's home, and she showed us how to prepare the skins of birds so that we might use them in our 4-H Club exhibits and for county and community fairs. At 2:30 we left for the Arkansas game preserve about fifty miles from where we were camped. This was the most interesting things of the camp.

We arrived back in camp about six-thirty, ate supper, and then went down to the beach for a boat ride. We watched a picture show after we got back on the subject, "Wildlife."

Again we went to bed early that night, and were up the next morning at five o'clock and down to the bay for a good swim. Breakfast at six o'clock, and then the group was off for a morning's fishing. We got a lot of bites but very few fish. We went back to camp about ten o'clock, and went down to the bay with Mr. Callender to do some mullet fishing with a net. Noon is here and another good fish dinner with iced watermelon to top it all with. The afternoon was spent in a one hour rest period, and then two hours in listening to specialist discuss wildlife subjects.

We had another good meal at 6 o'clock, and then for an hour of floundering, which was great sport. After a swim we came back to camp and enjoyed recreational games and a picture show for the next two hours.

Saturday morning we were taken over to St. Joseph's Island, so we could see the Gulf of Mexico. After arriving on the island, we walked over to the South side to see the Gulf of Mexico and spent two hours in picking up sea shells to bring back home.

We arrived back at camp at noon, and then our final fish dinner. After an hour's rest we heard more wildlife subjects discussed. We then made a written report of the things we had enjoyed most while attending the camp.

We got up at five o'clock the next morning, had breakfast at five thirty and then loaded up and left for home. We arrived home about five o'clock Sunday afternoon.

YOUTH TAKES TO AIR

SAN ANTONIO. — Sam Wolff celebrated his 16th birthday by beginning a series of flying lessons. Four days later, the youth, one of the youngest pilots in Texas, made his first solo flight. His progress since has been rapid.

MAJOR league owners are enthusiastic about the school system that is being worked out in Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, and San Francisco. They know early instruction makes for better players.

"We try to teach the boys the proper batting stride, so they'll be set for slow pitching as well as fast," explains an instructor.

Chicagoans declare that from last year's school they've got a half dozen hometown boys who'll go into professional ball when they finish high school.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES
Sunday school, 9:45 a. m.
Morning worship, 11 a. m.
Wednesday, testimonial service, 8 p. m.

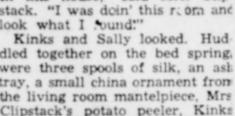

Public cordially invited. "Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 21.

The Golden Text is: "Behold, God is mighty, and despoiseth not any; he is mighty in strength and wisdom" (Job 36:5).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" (Romans 11:33).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine metaphysics, as revealed to spiritual understanding, shows clearly that all is Mind, and that Mind is God, omnipotence, omnipresence, omniscience, —that is, all power, all presence, all Science. Hence all is in reality the manifestation of Mind" (page 275).

CHURCHES

CHURCH OF GOD

Robert E. Bowden, Pastor
All services at the usual hour today. Sunday school 10 o'clock; Morning worship at 11 o'clock; Young People's Hour at 7:15; And the evening sermon at 8 o'clock. Our mid week prayer service was well attended last Wednesday night. The congregation gave the pastor and family a "pounding." Wednesday night, which was greatly appreciated. A goodly number of the local congregation attended the meeting at Gorman last Sunday, which cut our attendance record down considerably. We sincerely hope that every one will be on the job today. All who are not attending Sunday school elsewhere we cordially invite you to meet with us. "We will do you good." Think this over, in Mark 2:3-12. We find a poor man afflicted with the dreaded disease of paralysis, carried to Jesus by four friends. He was both converted and cured at the hands of the Master. But what of his four friends. What part did they play in bringing Salvation and Healing to this unfortunate man? My friend, let me urge that more of us be serving as these four men did. The greatest joys, thrills, and pleasures that we can enjoy in this life, comes when we accept the humble service of doing things for those of our neighbors who are in need. Many are without Salvation, and if we can and, we can, bring them to Jesus. He will send them on their way rejoicing. But what will happen if we don't do our part? Think it over friend.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR AN IDEAL INVESTMENT?

During the past five years we have sold many homes to people in Eastland on the proposition that everyone should own their own home, if nothing else. Since the first of the year, however, we have not only sold real estate for home use, but also as an investment. It pays a high yield, and it is safe and sound.

High rents and the constant scarcity of homes and apartment houses lend added incentive to investments of this kind. There has never been a safer investment than that offered thru home financing.

To those who have idle funds to invest, we recommend Eastland real estate. We have some bargains listed now that will pay the investor from 8 to 20%. We welcome the opportunity to show you what we have.
