Fossils Proving Strange Creatures Roamed In Texas

CANYON, Texas—Strange creatures roamed the Texas Panhandle 1,000,000 years ago. Fossils and specimens taken from silt beds in Randall and Donley counties in the plains region by explorers from West Texas State College have added considerably to scientists' knowledge of the section in its younger days.

Queer reptiles that looked something like crocodiles and have been given the high-sounding name of Phytosawia lived in the meandering river valleys and grew to be 25 feet or longer. Plodding through the region, also, were enormous land turtles, some of which were as much as four feet in diameter and probably weighed around 300 or 400 pounds.

Prof. C. Stuart Johnston of the college. It belongs to a new genus and has a plug shaped head which has given it the name "Bismachelys," or, in plain English, "plug turtle."

First-Sight Love, Long Engagements Prove a Handicap

PASADENA, Cal.—A survey of 800 married couples would indicate that love at first sight is a serious handicap to a happy marriage, according to Dr. Paul Popehoe, director of the Los Angeles County Institute of Family Relations.

The next most serious handicap, it would seem from his report, is where the engagement period runs too long.

Of the 800 marriages included in the survey, 374 admittedly were unhappy couples and 436 were enjoying a measure of happiness. The deductions made from the survey would indicate that on the average the happiest couples are those that wait two years before engagement and then another year before marrying.

On the other hand, the unhappy couples investigated showed that they had known each other for only about 20 months before engagement and then seven and a half months before marriage.

The more happier couple were those who were acquainted for 28 months before becoming engaged and then who waited for a year or more before marrying.

Nearly 20 per cent were acquainted for more than five years before they became engaged.

Marriages on the spur of the moment without any engagement occurred eight times as often among the unhappy couples as among those that turned out better.

These were not marriages at sight, for the couples had known each other for a year or two, but had merely made up their minds suddenly to get married. There were 140 unhappy couples in this no-engagement group.

Fifty of the unhappy couples reported love at first sight and, although they waited from one to 11 months before marriage, the "love at first sight and lived hap-

Proudly taking the role of mother in real life, Eleanor King, star of the motion picture "Birth of a Baby," is pictured above as she presents her recently born son for his camera debut in a New York hospital. Army Blueprint For War Drawn

NEW ORLEANS.—Two Louisiana officers have completed a plan to put wartime mobilization on a "neighborhood basis."

They believe, and military experts who have discussed the plan with them agree, that men can be trained, equipped and shoved into the front lines 60 days ahead of any World War record.

Brig. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, adjutant-general of Louisiana, and Col. Oswald S. McNeese, former state adjutant general now on duty in Washington, figured out the new method of mobilization. They would divide the state into 204 areas. In the old war department plan, Louisiana was divided into 11 recruiting centers.

When the nation declared war, the governor of the state would issue orders, and civic clubs, patriotic organizations, and other groups would go into action, signing recruits. It would eliminate, the plan's authors believe, some of the friction that appears when the War Department "sends strange sergeants and strange men into strange towns among strangers to hang out a sign and put up a flag and wait for people to volunteer."

A visiting group of officers discussed the plan in detail here for 10 days. Col. Harry C. Kramer of Washington, spokesman for the officers, said it was the first time such a plan had been received by the War Department and it "stands highest in favor of any such plan."

"Louisiana led the nation as the first state to prepare and submit such a plan," Kramer said. "The War Department and Gen. Malin Craig as chief of staff, were tremendously impressed with it. We expect its adoption soon. It is ready to work today in many of the 48 states."

"Long exposure to high temperature is recognized as the cause of cancer," said. "This fool fad of naked all summer is bound to trouble."

Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Rochester, N. Y.

P. L. (LEWIS) CROSSLEY For REPRESENTATIVE 106th District

When I announced as a candidate for Representative for the 106th District, I stated that I would, from time to time, make known my views as regards this important office, and I now take this means of letting the people know my views on the more important problems and issues of our government.

ECONOMY & TAXATION

The old problem of taxation has been a most vexing one almost since time immemorial, and those who have studied the matter seriously, unquestionably have come to the conclusion that the saturation point has been reached, and that there must be some way found to relieve the people of this ever growing burden, to the end that our government become more responsive to the interests of the people generally and the incessant raids on the tax dollar and public treasury be stopped. I have stated that I do not believe more taxes are necessary and until it can be shown that we cannot conserve the funds we now have I shall not favor the levying of more taxes, and to this end I submit the following as a good start towards relieving this ever growing and unpleasant burden.

Texas has more than 100 boards, bureaus and commissions, many of which I believe could be eliminated or consolidated to the end that duplication insofar as is possible be eliminated and permit more effective co-ordination in their many functions. Before we may expect to reap the full benefits of real and true economy in Texas, we must set up a positive system of fiscal control through effective budgeting. In my opinion we need a budget director who will be responsible to the Governor and to the people of the state and the State Auditor should be appointed by joint committee of the legislature instead of by the Governor. The system of special funds and permitting many boards and bureaus to collect their own taxes, fees, etc., and spend them according to their own desires and in such a manner as it is not possible for the state to properly portray the financial condition of the state to the people and tax payers is indeed very treacherous and should be stopped. This system in Texas has become so enlarged and expanded that our government is completely out of the people's control and until our government structure is reorganized we may expect it to continue to grow and enlarge.

Governor Byrd of Virginia found a situation there very much like our own. The government was operating through 100 separate agencies, with duplication, lack of responsibility and resultant wastage. By eliminating, consolidating and co-ordinating, the 100 were reduced to 12 departments, with a centralized tax collecting agency, strict budgeting and auditing system and centralized purchasing and as a result more than $8,000,000.00 per year was saved to the people. In comparison the saving in Texas should be much greater, if such a system could be inaugurated. One has only to read the Auditor's report which is an indictment of the reckless manner in which the tax payers' money is being handled to see that our system needs to be revised in many places. I quote the following from his report: "Fiscal control comes through effective budgeting, and in the opinion of your state auditor, increased taxation may be expected that could be avoided by such action without the impairment of governmental services." It is indicated that from six to ten million dollars could be saved to the people by inaugurating a system of this kind. The Senate Finance Committee, in recent session, stated that salaries in the higher brackets should be reduced from 15% to 20%, and that all departments should be substantially cut back from last year's appropriations, travel bills should be reduced, useless jobs eliminated, and overlapping boards and bureaus should be consolidated and that they hoped to save $10,000,000.00 in this manner.

A recent survey from the Comptroller's office indicates that many millions more money will be collected this year than last, which should break down all argument for increased taxes. Certainly if these things can be done there is no good reason or occasion for the small home owner or tax payer to feel that taxes should continue to be raised when the people's income is going the other way.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

There are many ills and injustices in the way Old Age Assistance is being handled and its very nature indicates that there will continue to be many ills and injustices. However, I believe that much of this can be eliminated and in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.00 per year in cost of administration saved by delegating the power of investigation, application and all preliminary work to the Commissioners' Courts of the counties. This, when matched by the Federal Government, would give an approximate additional $2,000,000.00 to the old people.

ADJUSTING STATE TAXES

I favor a law permitting the Commissioners' Court to adjust and settle state taxes. There are many times when the adjustment of state taxes are necessary in order that justice be done, and yet there is no recourse for the tax payer under present laws, when it develops that renditions were out of line. Boom day and prosperous time assessments in many instances were far more than the property was worth, yet the state will not accept payment of taxes nor permit adjustments below the original assessments.

MUTUAL ASSESSMENT INSURANCE

I favor strict laws governing and regulating Mutual Assessment Insurance Companies. Having been in the insurance business, I am familiar with the many injustices and pitfalls incident to this type of insurance. It is sold principally to the old folks, and to those who, for many reasons, cannot purchase Old Line Legal Reserve Insurance, and by reason of the very lax laws governing such insurance we have records where policies have been settled for practically nothing, mortuary funds

ANTI-NEPOTISM LAWS SCHOOLS

I am opposed to legislators, heads of departments, employees in the various departments, boards and commissions hiring their kinsmen on state jobs and the practice of swapping out in this respect in the various departments of our state government and I favor strengthening our laws to take care of this bad practice, and a Civil Service law governing employees. I believe this will have a tendency to give us better qualified and more efficient employees, thereby increasing the efficiency of our state government and will tend to decrease the costs of same.

That great Texas patriot and scholar, Lamar, once said: "Cultivated mind is the guardian genius of democracy, and while guided and controlled by virtue is the noblest attribute of man. It is the only dictator that freemen acknowledge and the only security that freemen desire." A more recent Texas educator aptly says that the real assets of Texas are not contained in her rolling plains, fertile farming lands, fine stock or oil wells, but in the children that are reared within her vast domain. I stand wholeheartedly for our entire educational system but I am more particularly concerned in our public rural school system for the many reasons that must be apparent to everyone. I therefore believe that the scholastic per capita apportionment should not be less than it now is, $22.00, and that the state should relieve the schools and teachers of the cost of bus transportation, thereby permitting longer school terms, benefiting both pupils and teachers.

TEACHER RETIREMENT, BLIND, DEPENDENT & NEGLECTED CHILDREN

When the people in voting by so great a majority provided by constitutional amendment for teachers' retirement, needy blind and dependent and neglected children, certainly everyone must recognize that it is a mandate that must be enforced. No one would dare question the christian duty and wisdom of providing for the needy blind and dependent and neglected children. It is estimated by eminent authority that at least $5,000,000.00 is being paid annually to teachers who, by reason of age and lack of proper equipment are not properly qualified to teach our children. It is also estimated that around $2,000,000.00 is all that will be required annually for this fund. If this be true, the tax payers of Texas are losing around $3,000,000.00 annually in not providing the necessary funds.

ONE-HOUSE LEGISLATURE

I am opposed to the one-house legislature for reasons too numerous to mention, but chiefly because there are at least 150 counties in Texas that will never again have a voice in the government of our state, it will permit the larger counties and cities of Texas to dominate, takes the government away from the people and is a step towards dictatorship, is a veritable paradise for the lobbyist and has proven more costly, etc.

BONDED ROAD INDEBTEDNESS

By the Board of County and District Road Indebtedness, there is impounded at the present time around $9,000,000.00. This money is provided by a levy of one cent on every gallon of gasoline that is sold, and for the purpose of retiring the bonded road indebtedness of those counties that pioneered in road building. Roads built in the early days of Eastland County have long since ceased to be Eastland County's roads. They are traveled by tourists from every state in the Union, and by citizens from every section of Texas. Fair thinking people have long recognized the fact that the state should pay said bonded indebtedness. I therefore, favor diverting this money so impounded to the counties entitled to participate therein to retire said bonded indebtedness, or the board retiring enough of said indebtedness on a pro-rata basis so as to reduce the amount impounded to an emergency balance of $1,000,000.00, or a reasonable amount. The bonded indebtedness is decreasing and the fund is increasing and it is estimated that in another 10 years a Balance of $20,000,000.00 will have been impounded. Several attempts have been made to divert this money to the General Fund which would certainly be a tragedy and an injustice to those counties for which the fund was created. THE STATE OF TEXAS OWES EASTLAND COUNTY, BY REASON OF HER PARTICIPATION IN THIS FUND, MORE THAN $200,000.00.

CONCLUSION

When the people of Texas become convinced that we cannot, during the next 20 years, as we have during the past 20 years, let our state expenses increase 670%, while taxable values are increasing only 43% and our population only 38%, and elect enough economically minded men to the legislature to effect economy, then and then only will the people obtain the desired relief. I sincerely believe that if the recommendations of the State Auditor, the Senate Finance Committee and the statement of practically every candidate running for high state office are followed, together with new money now being collected and unappropriated, that new taxes will not be needed, and that we will have ample funds to take care of old age assistance, teacher retirement, blind and dependent and neglected children and the program in general as outlined herein, and I shall not favor more taxes until it can be shown that we cannot conserve the funds we now have.

Based upon my record as a public servant and my qualifications I earnestly solicit your support at the polls on July 23rd. Respectfully submitted, P. L. (LEWIS) CROSSLEY.

Teaching the Young Idea How to Lose a Degree

For an interesting sidelight on adult standards of morality in this country, consider the case of Robert Greenless Pearson, who is about to be graduated from the University of Kansas.

Pearson is a crack student, but he is going to fail of election to Phi Beta Kappa, the honorary high-scholarship fraternity, because he wrote a magazine article admitting that he had been ghost-writing for lazy or unbrilliant students who couldn't pass their exams without help.

In his magazine article, Pearson told how he furnished papers for a large number of students, some of them at other colleges. He did a good job of it, too, guaranteeing his clients that no work bought from him would receive lower than a "B" grade.

"The moral and ethical standing of my occupation has not yet been carefully worked out," he wrote, "mainly because my occupation is not supposed to exist. I am one of a widespread and rapidly growing body of campus ghost-writers, students making money for themselves by pounding out papers for those who are willing to pay for them."

All of this may look like a problem in campus morality, not adult morality. But the campus is seldom original, in matters like this, and it must be pointed out that the ghost-writer was invented and made a prominent part of our American scheme of things by full-grown men, not by college boys.

The practice apparently began harmlessly enough, some years ago, when professional athletes were persuaded to indite their memoirs or their comments on the passing scene for newspaper and magazine readers. Not one champion in a dozen could do much more than write his own name, but skilled writers were furnished to do the work; and before long the ghost-writer was an integral part of the world of professional sport.

Then the practice was picked up by loftier people.

Politicians whose intellectual accomplishments consisted of a pleasant smile and a phenomenal ability to remember people's names discovered that it was simpler to hire some bright young man to write a speech than to write it one's self. Politicians who really could write their own stuff if they had time, followed suit. Even presidents have been known to hire ghosts, at times.

Captains of industry did likewise—which did make for better after-dinner speeches, in some instances. Explorers fell into line, and produced books with phenomenal facility. Movie stars went for the gag. And so, presently, the ghost-writer became an essential figure in American life.

Which brings us back at last to our collegian.

If what he did was wrong, the whole business of ghost-writing has a flaw in it somewhere. He merely copied his elders, and lived in college the kind of life they were living in the adult world. And if anystones are to be cast at him, the flinging ought to be done by people who are themselves reasonably free from the same kind of sin.

WHAT OUTFIT, BUDDY?

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox
SEA Service Staff Writer

KITCHEN slavery on Sunday is out of date. Huge meals that keep the women of the house in the hot kitchen all morning while the men idle about don't make much sense in the American picture of equality.

Try a Sunday dinner like this one, and you'll approve of the idea that Sunday should be a day of rest and companionship for all the family.

Begin with a clear, fresh-vegetable soup. Pile as many greens and vegetables as you can get into a large pot. Sprinkle with salt, add just enough water to moisten and simmer. Strain the refreshing liquor and serve very hot with strips of oven-dried toast.

The dessert of old-fashioned strawberry shortcake calls for hot baking powder biscuits. These bake in only about 12 minutes. Run them into the oven during the last 10 minutes of the casserole's cooking. Serve some with dinner. Keep the others warm for the dessert. Split, butter and fill with fresh strawberries, cut in half and slightly sugared. Serve with lightly whipped cream.

For the main dish, use this 3-in-1 combination of meat, potatoes and vegetables. It takes only one hour to cook and greatly reduces Sunday drudgery without reducing the good eating menu expect on Sunday.

Cut fat from chops, sprinkle them with 1-4 teaspoon salt, and few grains pepper, and brown slightly on both sides. Arrange the chops around the sides of a shallow glass casserole, 2-quart size. In the center, place the scraped new potatoes and shelled peas. Add water, sprinkle with salt and put bits of butter over the top. Cover the dish and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) for about one hour or until vegetables are tender.

"SUMMER IS ICUMEN IN"

So sang the Anglo-Saxon bard. And whatever you may think of his spelling, your heart must echo his joy as June again brings Summer in.

Memorial Day marked the real beginning of Summer for most of us. A glad season—and there are so many things nowadays to make it more enjoyable!

Take foods as a single item. On the household pages of this newspaper you will find advertisements of mouth-watering summer delicacies by the score. Fresh fruits and berries as they appear in the markets. Succulent new vegetables. Crisp ready-to-eat cereals. Cool, dainty, hot-weather salads. Delicious ice-box desserts. Bubbly drinks to fill tinkling, moisture-beaded glasses.

Yes, Summer is a delightful time of year if you appreciate the good things that come with warm weather. And if you read the advertisements day by day they'll bring you news of all that's new and desirable in the fine art of Summer living.

This Man, Joe Murray

BY WILLIAM CORCORAN Copyright, 1938, by William Corcoran; NEA Service, Inc.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOE MURRAY—liked new places, new jobs, new girls.
HELEN—fell in love—
TERRY MALLOW—found love owned Sept 11

Yesterday, Terry comes into Joe's life, tells him she loves him. That by must not leave. Yet Joe cannot forget Helen, recalls one night with anguish that he really loved her!

CHAPTER X
MURRAY put down the iron and came over to Joe's and put her hand on his head, drawing it against her side and holding it there. He was stiff and unbending, but she did not mind. She stood there, holding him. They were silent, mother and son, but there was a current of something through them, one to the other, a strong current. It could be the stand up, and buck the tides of life and death.

"Life goes on, Joe," she said. "It's got to go on."
 "Yes," he said. "I don't know if it's not for us to say."
 She went back to the ironing. She began to put up the work or tonight. After a moment she said, "What about Terry Mallow, Joe?"

"I don't know."
 "I want you to be happy," she said. "You do whatever you think best. But don't let yourself be forced into anything that's not to your own unmistakable liking. You're a man now, and you've got to be strong."
 And with that enigmatic advice the conversation ended.

FINE About Terry Mallow, as Joe insisted . . . he did not know! What would be the square thing, the fair thing? He could not tell. His thoughts were halting, but he felt sure enough in his mind. She needed him, still needed him. LUNCHEON some degree—but did she need him as much as she dreamed, and was she mistaking simple need for the blinding demands of love?

He did not know.
TERRY MALLOW herself knew all she cared to know. She was not drifting; she was working very determinedly around her objective, like a very busy lady picking weaving a myriad tenuous threads to hold it finally fast. No single thread was stronger than a puff of wind, but all together they were stronger than a hurricane.

"I'm so happy when you're round," she might complacently tell him. There were no maidenly reserves, no alternating boldness and shyness; it was as if she had never heard of them. "I feel safe. I never thought there could be such a comfortable feeling in here." She took his hand and placed it on her heart. "Feel it go? It goes so good when we're together, and it skips and misses a little when you go away until you come back. Happy, darling?"

He smiled. "Of course."
 Contentedly she sighed. "I'm glad. I never knew what it meant to be happy. I don't ever want to forget . . . ever."
 And another tenuous thread would fasten itself upon him.

He knew well that she was merely a child. That, in his own way, he saw clearly, with its implications. That she was desperate for escape from the bondage of her former life. That in her gentle, disarming way she was utterly unscrupulous about anything she wanted very badly. That in her oblivious innocence she had differentiated between Tommy Withers and himself only at his own arrogant insistence. What if he had never interferred? He asked her.

"But I could never love him like this, darling!" she said instantly. "He's not like you. You're a man, you're bigger in every way. He'd never have understood me the way you do. Nobody could manage me like you. He was only another boy. You knew lots of girls, didn't you, before you met me?"

And Joe thought: How child-like! And he thought: Childlike my eye; it's cunning as sin! And looking at her, his patience expired, and he kissed the back of her neck, and she quivered with laughter and squirmed around and threw her arms around him tightly.

AND then, like as not, after an interval, a silent close interval, Joe would get abruptly to his feet, out of her arms and say brusquely, "Come on. Let's get out of here. We'll go see a picture."

And obediently, with that curious blandly airy air, she would get her things and come along to see a picture. And she would behave herself pleasantly and decorously until he bade her goodnight the last thing, and then she would hold him tightly and make him kiss her long and hard, a little brutally and tenderly, darkly and hungrily, sending him off shaken and swearing to himself in the night.

It was Joe Murray who was weak, who had never been before, and who knew no way at all to understand it.

CAMPUS HAS 1st GIRL EDITOR
 By United Press
 CORVALLIS, Oregon.—A girl will edit a major campus publication for the first time in the history of Oregon State College. Miss Lois Williams, Corvallis, was appointed editor of the 1939 year-book.

"I've got to talk to you," she said. "Before you come to the house again."
 "What's up?"
 He led the way to a confectionery store, where he ordered sodas in a booth.

"There was another fight home," Terry told him.
 "You?"
 "Me and the family."
 Joe glanced at her throat and neck where her white skin ran down inside the dress, and her eyes dropped as she read that glance.

"They didn't hit me," she told him. "I stopped them. I scared them."
 He grinned slowly. "Good for you, kid! How did you do it?"
 Her eyes pleaded. "I said you would come there and raise hell if they hit me again. I said you would punch my father."

THE grin faded; thought went licketty-split in a dozen directions, exploring the consequences of that. "For Pete's sake, Terry! Me?"
 "Who else, darling? You're all I've got. And they're afraid of you. They're afraid you will clip my father on the jaw."
 Joe snorted and stared and suddenly burst into laughter of pure delight. He felt like the knight in armor of the fairy tales, rescuing embattled princesses by fantastic clips on the jaw.

"What was the fight about?" he asked.
 "You," she said blandly.
 "Me?" He took a breath. "Go on. I can stand it."
 It was a little difficult. But it came all at once. They saw me kissing you goodnight and they said things. About you. About me. I just couldn't endure it any more and I told them to go take a dive off the sidewalk. I told them they didn't know Dewey got back from Manila yet. I told them a lot of things. I told them they aren't hit me any more because you wouldn't stand for it."
 He watched her shrewdly. "Is that all you told them?"
 "No," she said in a low tone. "What else?"
 She put out a scared, pleading hand. "I had to tell them, Joe. You don't know. I said we were going to be married. I had to say it or they'd have done worse things."

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY HARRY GRAYSON
 Sports Editor, NEA Service
JOE MCCARTHY still believes Detroit is the club New York will have to beat in the American League.
 The manager of the Yankees rates the hopped-up Cleveland Indians ahead of the Boston Red Sox.
 "Detroit," says McCarthy, "has too much power to stay down where it is."
 "That wallop is going to assert itself before long, and it will be the Tigers we will be battling once we get going and the race gets hot."
 "The Indians have good pitching. They are going to be tough, too. Bob Feller is better than he was. He looks like a fine pitcher now. And behind him, Cleveland has a capable pitching staff and a husky punch."
 "Bob Grove is off to a great start for Boston, but it isn't in the books for him to go on that way. Wait until the weather gets warmer, and the heat begins to take things out of him—when he is going to need more rest."
 "Where will the Red Sox be for pitchers then? They haven't got the fellows behind him to keep up. I don't think they'll be as dangerous when the race settles down as they appear now."
 "The same thing goes for Washington."
 McCarthy contends that no club has had a real opportunity to show to advantage, least of all the Ruppert Rifics, who had nine double-headers piled up on them before they knew it. They grew tired of sitting around on their western trip.
 "We haven't had a chance to start yet," explains Marse Joe. "If our pitchers only get the chance to get straightened out quickly, you'll see that we get better pitching, and more of it, than we have ever had."
 "But everybody has needed work. The weather has stymied us."
 It also gave Doc Painter an opportunity to doctor up some of the Yankee patients, not the least of whom has been Catcher Bill Dickey, who has just shaken off an attack of flu.

A BURSTING condition in his left forearm, which makes it almost impossible for him to throw an authoritative hook, prompts Petye Sarron to call it a ring career after 15 years.
 Sarron, who is 30, has plenty. He must be worth $75,000. He also admits that he has had plenty. He had little besides courage and ruggedness, but got to be world featherweight champion. He rose from the status of a destitute Birmingham newsboy. He saw the cockeyed world. And his faculties are intact.
 Sarron's ailment is similar to the one that harasses Dizzy Dean, save that in the pitcher's case the trouble is in the shoulder.

SARRON has been suffering from it since he lifted the 126-pound title from Freddie Miller in Washington two years ago. Surgeons tell him that steady scraping of the bones has filled the area around them with particles like buckshot.
 The veteran intends to have the arm sliced and the bones scraped at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, after which he will devote his time and attention to a business other than beak busting.

Kindness to Bees Repaid by Death

NEW ORLEANS. — Hundreds of golden honey bees died because they stung those who tried to be kind to them. The bees set up housekeeping on a trolley wire on Canal street, the city's busiest thoroughfare. For three hours they paid no attention to power company employees who attempted to remove them. Street cars lowered their trolleys and coasted under the nest. The employees, who were assured the bees could be coaxed into a sack, chose this peaceful method. They retreated with swelling faces, hands and arms. Abandoning their gentle tactics, they soaked the sack in gasoline, tied it to a pole and then set fire to the swarm.

The government is going to pension worn-out mules, and the lucky beasts aren't even required to remember a social security number.

Old Textbooks Are Collected as Hobby

PITTSBURGH—A strange hobby is that followed by Dr. John A. Nietz, associate professor of education at the University of Pittsburgh. He collects old school textbooks. Nietz started his collection back in 1925. He now has 1,500 textbooks—the largest private collection in the country. He does not consider a textbook "old" until it has been published at least 50 years.

"The philosophy behind this hobby," explains Dr. Nietz, "is that by looking into the textbooks of the past I can reconstruct the educational system of early American schools, and thus get a more correct view of how our educational methods started."

He plans soon to write a book about old school texts. Among his collection are 30 McGuffey elementary readers and one of the first Latin textbooks used in America—a copy of Lily's "Latin Grammar" dated 1721. The first edition of this publication appeared in 1527 and, according to Dr. Nietz, was the book which Henry VIII ordered made the official Latin for England.
