Army of 'Pavement Boys,' a Challenge to Democracy

Say what you please about the dictators, you cannot accuse them of neglecting the problem of idle youth.

Their solution for the problem may look weird and unholo, from many civilized point of view; but at least they realize that the problem exists, and they try to do something about it—which, very often, is more than you can say for our enlightened democracy.

Herbert Hoover touched on this point in an address before sponsors of the Boys' Club of Milwaukee the other day.

"The boy problem of America is the 'pavement boy,' the boy of the congested area, with no adequate occupation between school hours and bed time," he remarked. "There are 3,000,000 boys in this class who are completely lacking in opportunity for constructive joy. They are chiefly in need of occupational direction, an intelligent effort to find their bent and help direct them into the line of work for which they are fitted."

And then he remarked on the contrast between the way our democracy lets this problem slide and the way the dictatorships tackle it.

"The authoritarian governments of Europe start with the children of 7 to 9 years, to make Fascists or Communists of them," he said. "If we are going to make them able citizens of a democracy, we must start as early, building their individual characters and their sense of responsibility."

Probably one of the greatest distinguishing features of a free society is the fact that it does let certain problems slide. A democracy tends to feel that the cure can often be worse than the disease, so it doesn't do a lot of things which the dictatorships do, and in many cases this is all to the good. But the youth problem is something else again.

All the things that have been printed in recent years about gangsters, kidnapers and commercialized crime ought to show us that we can pay a fearful price for letting these "pavement boys" Hoover speaks of grow up without any guidance. The underworld gets its recruits from these boys; if society doesn't let those lads feel that there is a place for them, the underworld will.

But that isn't all. Those European strong arm squads which took the dictators to power were recruited in precisely the same way. The mere presence of any country of a floating mass of discontented, placeless young men is a standing invitation to the unscrupulous demagogue to collect a following and make trouble.

Indeed, it is more than that: it is a challenge to democracy itself. Democracy's greatest asset is its army of youth, stepping forward year by year to enter the ranks of adult citizens. If it fails to conserve that asset is inevitably in for trouble.

Commissioner of Agriculture Not Job Is Once Was

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN.—The office of State Commissioner of Agriculture has had so many duties transferred to other branches of the state government through the years that its current appropriation is $208,000 a year, or less than $1,000 for each county of the state.

Farm experiment stations are directed by A. & M. College, and much of the advisory aid to farmers has been made a part of the activities of the college. A separate livestock sanitary commission with a $635,484 annual appropriation looks after cattle interests.

Formerly, the agricultural commissioner was a member of the state racing commission and supervised the distribution of breeding stock. Repeal of the pari-mutuel racing act ended that part of his duties.

In handling the state's huge cotton crop, the department has little besides admonitory influence. Crop statistics are gathered by the federal government for cotton and other crops, so no attempt is made to duplicate that work. Federal contact in the cotton acreage plan is handled largely through county agents, who in turn are in contact with A. & M. College.

Enforcement of agricultural laws is left to the department. This throws upon it the duty of inspecting citrus and other crops likely to be damaged by pests. A horticultural inspection and quarantine division handles this work, including a steady combat against the spread of the pink boll worm in cotton areas.

A markets and warehouse division looks after market news and inspects warehouses. A weights and measures division has 12 inspectors, three of whom are assigned to butterfat classification and one to utilities. Seed testing is the special work of another division of the department, and there are separate divisions to look after pecan culture and cooperative dam building on small streams.

Most of the department's staff members must have special training. The force includes entomologists, nursery inspectors, a floral inspector, seed analysts and pecan experts.

The commissioner receives a salary of $4,200 a year.

Dust Storms Take More Topsoil Than Mississippi Flood

By United Press
AMARILLO, Texas.—Scientists have determined that dust storms annually are robbing the land of 1,000 times the amount of topsoil carried away by floods of the Mississippi River during a year's time.

H. H. Fennell, director of the soil conservation service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, made that report from studies of wind erosion of the Great Southern Plains which have been conducted at the Panhandle A. & M. College at Godwell, Okla. Fennell is in charge of the work in region 6, which embodies the area worst hit by dust storms.

"Fortunately, dust storms can be checked and the people of the affected area are aroused to the necessity of concerted action in combating this menace," Fennell said.

"By careful conservation of moisture for crop production and proper utilization of the vegetative cover thus produced to protect the land, wind erosion can be brought under control rapidly except in areas where severe drought continues."

"There have been fewer storms and less erosive damage this year except in areas of extended drought and where there was no concerted effort made to conserve available moisture to produce protective vegetation," Fennell pointed out. "Although most of the wind erosion area experienced one of the worst dust storms on record during the April 6-7 blizzard."

Records at the Goodwell experiment station showed there were 117 dust storms in 1937 as compared with 73 in 1936, and an average of 68 annually from 1933 to 1937, inclusive. Scientists making a study of the severity of wind erosion found that the average content of dust in 29 of the 1937 blows which were considered of major proportions was 33 milligrams per cubic foot of air three measured feet above the ground. Those storms averaged 23 miles per hour in velocity and 10 hours in duration.

The U. S. weather bureau at Amarillo, after studying the dust storms, classified them into three types. There are severe "black dusters," usually coming with high velocity winds which cover a territory of 600 miles long to a width of 7,500 feet. The "dusters" may be so spectacular as to cover an area 900 miles long. The third type of the bureau is the storm covering an area of 100 miles and frequently where vegetation is lacking. They are due chiefly to winds.

By comparing the dust at various areas covered by the storms, scientists stated that a severe storm in an area of 7,000,000 tons of soil or the equivalent of soil removed from a severe "black duster" erodes 175,000 square miles port more than 200 of soil.

NEW YORK.—About to promote what promises to be the first genuine million-dollar prize fight in 11 years—the return meeting between Joe Louis and Max Schmeling at Yankee Stadium, June 22—Michael Strauss Jacobs declares that he is fed up with boxing and would like to step out.

Jacobs, who brought the game out of the doldrums when the Madison Square Garden Corporation and others gave up, and who so quickly qualified as a real successor of Tex Rickard, confesses that he has a bad case of nerves. Jacobs says that he would sell what practically amounts to a monopoly in the beak-busting business for a million, but admits that he would take less.

Uncle Mike's tangible ring assets are leases on the Garden, the Garden Bowl in Queens, the New York Hippodrome, and the two New York baseball parks, and contracts with every headline fighter.

With New York tied up, together with Louis, Schmeling, Max Baer, Tommy Farr, Tony Gatto, Henry Armstrong, Lou Ambers, and some more, Jacobs practically could be prosecuted under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law as a one-man combination in the restraint of trade.

JACOBS wasn't around Rickard all those years for nothing, or perhaps it was the other way around.

Jacobs, who made a million as a Broadway ticket broker, entered the promotional field openly five years ago reluctantly.

But he stepped out in front when the New York Free Milk Fund for Babies could not make satisfactory arrangements with the Garden. He took Barney Ross and Billy Petrolle to the Bronx

Coliseum, drew $36,000, and turned 'em away.

Jacobs quickly fastened such a grip on the dodge that he moved into the Garden on a two-year lease last September.

The Garden admitted that it could not make boxing show a profit, but Jacobs paid the corporation $80,000 for 16 shows, and cleaned up more than $100,000 for himself. He peddled the radio rights for $50,000 and the pictures for $30,000, so really had no rent at all. "Them fellers didn't know what they had," he says of this deal. And the Garden now seeks a five-year renewal.

JACOBS guarantees the New York bill parks two shows a season and the Garden Bowl four. The rental is 10 per cent of the net. Messrs. Ruppert and Stoneham easily will collect $150,000 this summer, and the Garden $50,000 for the use of its bowl.

It costs Jacobs $1500 a week to operate the Hippodrome, which he took over before entering the Garden in order to have a place to develop outdoor attractions.

Naturally, Jacobs' biggest asset is his contract on the world heavyweight champion. That is supposed to be worth a million alone, but the biggest asset to Jacobs' Twentieth Century Sporting Club is Mike Jacobs himself.

Anybody knowing Jacobs, and having a million to spare, gladly would give it for the man's interests if Uncle Mike's services were included.

But Jacobs, who is in his 59th year and who has been hustling since he was 8, wants to get away from it all.

He wants to get back to that petunia patch in Red Bank.

"There's The doorbell again"

Suppose daily to your door came the butcher, the grocer, the clothier, the furrier, the furniture man, and every other merchant with whom you deal? What a tedium of doorbell answering that would mean!

It would be even more impractical for you to visit daily all these stores to find out what they have to offer and the price.

And yet you need those merchants' service quite as much as they need your patronage. Contact between seller and consumer is essential in the supplying of human needs. Before a sale can be closed the goods must be offered. Every day, through the advertising columns of this newspaper, the merchants of this city come to your home with their choicest wares. Easily, quickly, you get the news of all that is worth while in the market-places of the world.

They are not strangers at the door, but merchants you know and trust. You are always surer of high quality and fair price when you buy an article advertised by a reputable firm.

This Man, Joe Murray

BY WILLIAM CORCORAN Copyright, 1938, by William Corcoran; NEA Service, Inc.

CASE OF CHARACTERS
JOE MURRAY—lived new lease, new jobs, new girls. MELBA—fell in love—hard—case. FERRIS HOLLOW—found love and kept it.

Joe was glad to be with her and not alone. But in the reaches of the night there came a loneliness that he could not fathom, that was new and unaccountable and cold, like a wind from the north with the tidings of winter.

It was almost a premonition.

ONE day Joe came home in a mood of expansive, reckless gaiety. He tossed the lunch box on the kitchen table. "You can put that up in moth balls and start supporting your family, babe. I'm one of the leisure classes. Make it, one of the leisure masses."

Terry was home ahead of him and already busy; she turned quickly from the lamb chops sizzling juicily on the stove. "You mean the job? Laid off?"

"They gave me my time this morning." Beneath the gaiety was a certain secret bewilderment which the reckless sought to hide. "I took my time and told them to put my job up the nearest chimney. I could get a job. I could get a better job before the whistle blew again. There don't seem to be any jobs. I went looking, but the whistle will blow without me tomorrow."

She kissed him. If there was any distress in her it did not show; she kissed him. "Poor darling. Give him time! You've worked every day since we got married. You'll find a job."

"Yeah? And I'll find somebody already working at it. Baby, they're slipping one up on us. The automobile contracts have run out at the plant; that's why the lay-off. They say there'll be no renewal. Most of the plant will be laid off; it started last week. There ain't that many jobs in the metal trades in town to give us all work."

"There'll be work always for the good ones."

He grinned. "You think I'm prett' good, don't you?"

"I know it."

He laughed. "If it wasn't for the price of food I'd make you quit and stay home with me."

"Oh! she said. "And be together all the time, every minute?"

"Be together!" he said, looking at her. He kissed her, and they were together for an instant, hungrily, always hungrily and joyously. Then she broke away with a cry and ran to the stove to attend to a small of burning.

He watched her. If he had her efficiency, he'd be a "good one" for whom there are always jobs!

Neck Fracture of 37 Years Ago Is Revealed at Last

By United Press
MONTEUR FALLS, N. Y.—William B. Schoonover, 49, of Elmira, has discovered after 37 years that he had a broken neck.

Schoonover may never have known of the fracture if his automobile had not crashed into a concrete culvert. In the accident, his tongue was nearly severed, requiring 13 stitches.

Before being released from the hospital, Schoonover was X-rayed to determine whether any injuries had been overlooked. The pictures revealed the fractured neck of years ago.

Schoonover told his physician that he remembered when he was a 12-year-old boy he fell from a hay load. Although the neck had pained him after the accident, he said, he was not taken to a hospital nor did he receive any medical aid.

GORDON STANLEY COCHRANE is having the last laugh. When Mickey Walker included Gerad Walker in the six-player deal with the White Sox last winter, the only thing that saved his neck was Michigan's football coach along about the same time. When it looked as if Don Ross was going to do a little better than replace Marvin Owen at third base, this crack by a Detroit fan was typical of the fire fanned at Mickey Cochrane following the December meetings.

"What if he does make good?" asked the fibbert. "He'll only wind up with Cousin Jimmy Dykes in Chicago."

But Vernon Kennedy was the bloke Cochrane wanted, and he has saved the situation from a Detroit angle with world-subjective victories. The Tigers would have gone into a complete nose dive without the Vernon.

And Eddie Walker, while his arm lacks the strength of Joe DiMaggio, is a better pitcher than Go Walker, and is outlasting the Mississippi.

HENRY ARMSTRONG, hurricane hammerer that he is, is not the murderous hitter his record makes him out to be.

No one will ever try to say that the Barney Ross he pelted the other night was the Barney Ross of two or more years ago. That was apparent as early as the fourth round. Still, Armstrong is only what he is, knock Barney out, but Johnny Goodman says he's never got the hang of one and that's the real reason for his poor career.

Probably the lower scoring since 1930 is due to the knack which professionals like Pharos, Cooney, Reynolds, Horton and Spiden have with their timbers, but Johnny Goodman says they're never got the hang of one and that's the real reason for his poor career.

The average American golfer would feel rather stupid without a staple wedge, but Goodman would not. He comes at Town and Go to get the job done.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox

HUNGRY, hot and cross? Then try this seafood cocktail and all will be forgiven.

Seafood Cocktail
(Serves 4)

One cup crabmeat, 1 cup cooked shrimp, 2 hard-boiled eggs, medium-sized head of lettuce, salt and pepper, French dressing, 1 bunch watercress.

Flake the crabmeat, cut up the shrimp and the hard-boiled eggs to chop half the head of lettuce. Put all these ingredients together, add the seasoning and enough French dressing to moisten throughout, and mix thoroughly.

Set bowl in refrigerator, and allow the salad to marinate for at least 1 hour, for thorough marination is the secret of its success. Serve on crisp leaves of the remaining lettuce, and garnish with watercress.

As I sat in a well-known New York restaurant recently waiting for a stuffed devilled lobster, the proprietor expounded his lobster lore. Betty Lutz in it.

"There's a knack which comes with experience in selecting a good live lobster," he said. "I can tell a good lobster by the weight and feel of it in my hand."

Fine Lobster Firm, Heavy

"A good lobster feels firmy and more weighty in proportion to his size. There's a shallowness to the feel of a poor lobster. That is because his flesh has absorbed too much water—and is not solid. The rest of one of these poorer lobsters will shrivel greatly when cooked and there will remain only a fraction of the meat one expects to find when the shell is opened. And what there is will be rather dry and stringy."

"The lobster should be alive when cooking is started," he insisted. "The most usual way of cooking lobster in the house is to boil it. It should be placed in salted water (1 tablespoon salt to each quart water). Use enough water to cover the lobster entirely."

"Cover the pot and cook over a slow fire—the water kept just above simmering—for 10 to 15 minutes, depending upon the size of the lobster. Remove the lobster from the water and place on its back to cool."

"The body of the lobster should be cut down the middle so the meat can be removed easily. The claws are cracked and the meat removed from them with picks."

But there was the dish I had been waiting for.

Stuffed Devilled Lobster
(Serves 4)

Two large lobsters, 3 mushrooms, 1 small onion, English mustard (to taste), 1 pony glass white grape juice, 2 tablespoons white sauce.

Boil the lobsters, cut in half, and save the shells. Chop up the onion very fine and the mushrooms coarsely. Season with mustard. Simmer in grape juice for 5 to 10 minutes. Chop up the lobster meat in small pieces. Add the cream sauce, and the onion mixture. Mix all thoroughly, stuff into the shells. Bake until brown in oven. If you prefer the lobsters to have a glazed appearance, cover with a sauce made up of half white cream and half Hollandaise sauce, before baking in oven.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Just about the time that the whole family has chicken pox and the landlord is about to foreclose the mortgage is no time at all for papa and mama to be throwing all the available utensils at each other and for the kids to go experimenting with papa's shotgun.

There may be those who will flout that theory, as applied to the rather critical economic situation which now besets the United States.

Nevertheless, there is a strong group scattered between Washington, New York and points north, south, east and west which believes that business conditions are going from bad to worse and that the most sensible thing for Mr. Roosevelt to do under the circumstances is to call a conference of the outstanding leaders in government, industry and labor whose combined prestige would command respect and whose joint recommendations might inspire widespread confidence in the country's future.

That group of industrialists, labor leaders, brain trusters and politicians is united on at least one point: This is no time for the American people to be having family quarrels.

It may be over-optimistic to assume that such an assortment of lions, lambs, tigers and tom-cats can lie down together and produce a solution or even a partial cure for the country's present economic bellyache. But you can't prove that, unless the stunt is tried.

Weeks ago a group led by John L. Lewis, Owen D. Young and Tom Lamons of the Morgan firm—a group of labor leaders, industrialists—announce and brain-

Fort Worth Team Takes Beating In Game at Eastland

The North Side Independents of the Fort Worth Girls' Softball League took a 14 to 8 beating by the Royal Blues team Tuesday night at the Eastland Fire Department field.

Both of the Blue's pitchers were wild at times, giving 8 bases on balls and allowed 8 hits all told, but a 12-hit attack aided by errors by the visitors put them at the front all the way.

The Thursday night schedule is a double header girls' game. The Dairymaids will play Abilene the first game while the Blues will have the Graham girls for their opponents in the night cap.

NEW YORK—For those who want romance, just press the button and turn on the orchid light. Or, if it's getting late and you want your guests to leave, switch on the green light—they'll go.

At least, that's what Thomas S. Kelly, New York lighting engineer, says.

Green light, Kelly explains, has a depressing effect on guests; yellow light raises the spirits; pale orchid inspires romance; while pale blue, being light and refreshing, promotes brain work.

WASHINGTON NEWS FROM CONGRESSMAN CLYDE L. GARRETT

ADJOURNMENT. Tentative time for adjournment has not been set as yet but most of the members feel that by the end of this week we will either be through or in sight of adjournment. Several important measures are being finished as rapidly as possible and action will be rushed on them. The last minute rush has put a load on everyone here.

WALSH-HEALEY BILL The House Committee on the Judiciary has approved by a vote of 12 to 7 the Walsh-Healey bill denying government business to companies that violate the Labor Relations Act.

RADIO BROADCASTING. George C. Payne, a member of the Federal Communications commission, has asked the House committee on rules to pave the way for house action on a resolution for a special committee of the House to investigate monopoly in radio broadcasting. He charged that the radio broadcasting companies, through lobbyists, have tried to influence the FCC.

INVESTIGATIONS. While the committee investigating TVA is contemplating extensive hearings in Tennessee in July, the Senate committee investigating lobbying activities is waiting for more funds to continue its investigation. A preliminary report covering eleven months stated that due to "rapidly changing conditions," it recommended no legislation.

JUDICIARY. Senator O'Mahoney's resolution authorizing a study of monopolistic practices has been revised to remove threat of execution control, by the Senate Judiciary Committee considering it. An amendment to remove authority given the President to allocate $500,000 proposed for study by executive departments, and substitute a study by a committee jointly representing the Senate, House, Justice and Commerce Department, SEC and FTC, was approved by the Committee.

SOIL FERTILITY A large group of people feel that the President is right in advising Congress that it should give attention to a study of the phosphate resources of the country. They believe that it is important that phosphate deposits be developed and conserved for the benefit of American agriculture. Fertilizers are becoming more and more important for replenishing exhausted farm lands and the country will some day be dependent upon phosphates and other contributing elements to promote proper growth. Opponents of such a program of conservation, state that the available supply is abundant and conservation is far from necessary now, as the U. S. has great supplies and the amount is enough to last centuries.

RAILROADS Chairman Splawn, of the I. C. C., believes that financial troubles of the railroads will be solved by increased business rather than by legislation. A House subcommittee on Judiciary is considering a bill to speed up railway reorganization procedure.

WALLACE TO INCREASE USE OF FARM SURPLUSES Secretary Henry A. Wallace announced that in view of the existing surpluses of many farm commodities he has requested the executive committee of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to cooperate with the State and local relief organizations and similar agencies in determining the extent of unneeded food and clothing among people in relief. Twin disasters occurring within the last few months have Modern devices open new fields to culinary art—even for skilled chefs. 3. How'd you like to "unlax" in a chair like this modern Radio Clubber. It has a broadcast receiver, telephone, cigar lighter, humidifier, beverage bar, bridge table, etc.—all conveniences for an all-day stay. 4. Here's West Texas' modern hotel—the WORTH in Fort Worth. On the highway to and from all points west, it dispenses the peculiar brand of hospitality that regular folks like—toothsome food, all modern conveniences, including silent air conditioning—with ingratiating and appealing simplicity.

5. Now, from all quarters of the compass come modern air conditioned streamliners of the rails—into Fort Worth—these miracles of our wonder age. 6. But we'll always have the "refreshing beauty and rough glamour of the western plains. Home on the Range and all the other lasting traditions. 7. There's new interest in breakfast where air conditioning adds to comfort. 8. The joy of "dining out" is greatly increased in this air conditioned room at the WORTH Hotel. Superb food is the first of Manager Jack Farrell's requirements for his guests. 9. If you've never seen what makes the wheels go 'round in scientific cooling a modern hotel—here it is. This is a typical compressor which makes resort weather on summer's hottest days.

Seeking New Ceiling Loring Day, Southern California pole vaulter, is listed as favorite in his specialty at the National Collegiate track and field meet at Minneapolis, June 17-18. Day, who has cleared 14 feet 7 inches this year, missed 15 feet only by the thickness of his jersey recently.

Doorman Was Once Driver For King

LONDON—George Ladbroke, former chauffeur of the Duke of Windsor and the man who drove Wallis Warfield across France before the abdication, now earns his living by opening doors of cars and taxis at a Mayfair restaurant. In better days Ladbroke lived with his wife and four children in a six-room flat on the first floor of one of the quietest parts of Buckingham Palace, but now they live in a small flat in the suburb of Kennington. Ladbroke's present wage is 62 cents a week, less 39 cents for health and unemployment insurances, leaving a total of 22 cents a week. But he makes more than $15 a week in tips, and the Treasury pays him a pension of $10 a week for his services to the duke. "I was with the duke for 18 years," he said. "When I left him after the abdication you would have thought it would have been easy enough for me to get another job. I had about the best reference anybody could have, but not a bit of it. "Last summer I went abroad with some Americans, driving them around the continent. After being with the Duke I naturally knew the continent well. The job lasted 11 weeks and that's the only driving job I've had since December, 1936. "I suppose I could have got a chauffeurs' job if I had accepted about $15 a week. I have my high ideas, but that's not enough for me, with all my experience. "So when I was offered this job as a doorman I accepted it. I earn more than I could as a chauffeur, although I should like to get back to driving again with some nice people. "The Duke of Windsor is god-

Seated at Last After 18 Months

After patiently waiting for months, Representative Arthur B. Jenks, Democrat of Hampshire, above, finally got his seat in Congress when the House voted to unseat Representative Jenks, publican, who occupied the seat on a claim that 34 ballots had been lost. But it was worth the wait, for Representative Jenks' $14,160 in back pay.

Scissors and Clippers Carried With Regret

LAWRENCE, Mass.—Tortolano's defense of the 15 owned swimming pool caught the hair of his hair. When 16-year-old Astro was cut to three youths stomp the walls of the pool, they reported him. While two held the boys, a third cut his hair with scissors and clippers he had conveniently caught the "barber" and assistants.

Two policemen were assigned to catch the "barber" and assistants. father to three of my boys used to have many a chat with them in the old days. But it has changed, though it's no grumbling."
