

CONGRESS, IN FINAL PHASE

MOVES ON BILLS

By United Press
 WASHINGTON, June 16.—The Congress today entered its final phase when the Senate acted on the House method of allotting $12,000,000 parity payments for wheat, attached to an amendment to the $3,753,000,000 re-bill. Senate action brought the measure close to congressional approval. Senate agreed to a compromise providing $700,000 for rural electrification administration and sent the measure to the House for concurrence in this. The bill will then go to the House.

Senate also joined the President's veto of a bill to extend the 1940, low interest rate on federal land bank and bank commissioner loans to 1941. Mr. Roosevelt objected to the bill as an 18-cent burden on the Treasury. He was supported by the Senate, which provided that the Treasury will receive $100,000,000 for 1938, $150,000,000 for 1939, and $200,000,000 for 1940.

TRAIN PLUNGES INTO FLOOD; TWO MISSING

WELLINGTON, Texas, June 16.—Two crew members were missing today after a freight engine on the Fort Worth & Denver railroad's North Plains line plunged through a flood-damaged bridge on the Red River's Salt Fork a few miles north of here.

Those missing, apparently drowned, were Engineer M. V. Briggs and Fireman C. E. Burton, both of Childress. Head brakeman Dick Brown of Childress was rescued and taken to a Shamrock hospital.

Rescue crews still searched for the missing men almost 12 hours after the engine tumbled into the rain-swollen creek. The engine was submerged.

The freight, en route from Childress to Pampa, reached the bridge at 3:45 a. m., a short time after a southbound freight had passed. Officials assumed that the weakened bridge gave way before the pounding of flood-driven driftwood.

Heavy rains fell throughout the area. Fort Worth & Denver trains were forced to detour from Amarillo to Childress, because of track washed out on a 12-mile stretch in Donley county.

The Industrial Machine as a Scapegoat

Start a discussion of the unemployment problem—anywhere, with anyone, at any time—and you are certain to be talking about technological unemployment before you get through.

The machines that can do man's work better, faster, and more efficiently than he can do it himself have had a lot of publicity, and they are spectacular in their own right. It is obvious and natural to assume that these machines have taken away jobs—that are, therefore, responsible for a large part of our unemployment.

But there is another side to it. At a recent meeting of the American Engineering Council in Philadelphia, Prof. Leo Wolman of Columbia University showed how technological progress can prevent unemployment at the same time that it causes it.

The three American industries which have undergone the least technological changes since the World War, said Prof. Wolman, are coal mining, building construction and railroading. That means, in simpler language, that there has been less displacement of men by machinery in these industries than in any others.

Yet it was precisely these three industries, he continued, which recovered the least between the depth of the depression and the peak of recovery last year; it was also these three industries which suffered the greatest unemployment during that same period.

All of which compels one to re-examine this question of technological unemployment.

Prof. Wolman's figures make it seem fairly obvious that—over the long pull, at least—labor-saving machinery does not permanently displace labor. It may for short periods, of course; but in the long run, it apparently stimulates the industry involved, and industry generally, enough to take up the slack.

Conversely, the worker's job is not safe-guarded if his industry steers clear of technological advances. For the price of good health in this modern industrial community includes a searching, unflinching attention to all possible avenues through which work may be done and goods produced at lower and lower unit costs. The worker gains little through the retention of old handicraft methods of work, if the very retention of these methods helps to sink his industry deeper into the depression.

It seems fairly clear that the real villain in the piece is not technology at all.

We might more profitably hunt for it among the intangibles—among the fear and suspicion which interrupt foreign trade, among the myriad national and international currents which produce fear in place of confidence, among the prejudices and blindnesses which keep men from getting along with one another harmoniously.

By blaming the machine we are simply doing a poor job of trying to cover up our shortcomings.

Suppose daily to your door came the butcher, the grocer, the clothier, the furrier, the furniture man, and every other merchant with whom you deal? What a tedium of doorbell answering that would mean!

It would be even more impractical for you to visit daily all these stores to find out what they have to offer and the price.

And yet you need those merchants' service quite as much as they need your patronage. Contact between seller and consumer is essential in the supplying of human needs. Before a sale can be closed the goods must be offered. Every day, through the advertising columns of this newspaper, the merchants of this city come to your home with their choicest wares. Easily, quickly, you get the news of all that is worth while in the market-places of the world.

They are not strangers at the door, but merchants you know and trust. You are always surer of high quality and fair price when you buy an article advertised by a reputable firm.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOE MURRAY—liked new phone, new job, new girls.
HELEN—felt in love—hard—
MURRAY MALLOW—found love and kept it!

Yesterday, Reveres came to the Murray home! Joe loses his job, there is talk of closing the mill, and the Murray hopes fade away.

CHAPTER XV
JOE was grim these days, and Terry was silent. Her bland gaiety was impotent against this. Joe went out each day when Terry departed for work, and if he had nothing definite to attempt, he walked with her to the streetcar. He would have sat beside her in silence all the way to the mill if the carfare were not an extravagance. He was waiting for her when she alighted from the car at night, and they walked home together. When they arrived home he went furiously to work, either lightening or entirely relieving every task. He did not stay to do the work alone because he did not spend a minute alone there all the day.

He walked, walked, all the day. He went to the employment offices of the plants, where the "No Men Wanted" signs were waiting, leaning at him. He lay in waiting for bosses he knew and accosted them cheerily, uttering a set formula and hearing a set reply. He ranged mean streets downtown, eyeing people at work hungrily, resentfully, hatefully.

His mind was in the grip of a slow and morbid fever which showed only in the quiet grimness of his eyes. Terry looked at him and was frightened more at his eyes than all the menace of their plight. This was something she could not cope with either, could not beguile him out of; not all her witchery could prevail against that grim stolidity.

Once when Joe was walking on the street a small but shiny and brand new roadster drew up at the curb just ahead and the driver got out to run into a house. He recognized Joe and waited. It was Tommy Withers, a bit older, sure of himself, prosperous looking, jaunty even in Joe Murray's sight after avoiding him so long. It was his big moment.

"How do you like the new gondola, Joe?"
Joe looked at him a moment, then looked at the car. "Nice. Where did you get it?"
Withers was waiting for the question. "Just bought it."
"H'm," said Joe.
"Lined up a job at the new broadcasting station plant on Marshall street. Maintenance work. Steady; same old wage scale. You picked the wrong trade, fellow."
"You're an electrician?"
"Always was."
"Huh! Lucky break; not the trade," said Joe. "Glad somebody's getting it."
"Thanks!" And before going inside Withers added, "How's the missus?"
"Good!" said Joe, and walked on.

A SMALL incident, but significant. Small incidents make big thoughts, if not always right thoughts. Withers, whom Joe had once beaten ignominiously, waiting jauntily to show off before Joe, to patronize him. To patronize Joe, Murray. Joe grimly, glumly, taking it, and though saying very little irresistibly impressed, depressed. And then walking, walking. This man, Joe Murray.

He walked by night too. Not in the streets, on his lean legs, in corporeal reality, but in the mind, during the reaches of the night when Terry slept soundly in weariness beside him and there was no weariness to drug Joe. He walked far, alone. He walked even where he had no right, he knew, but far off things beckoned now, in a way which was an enchantment he could not withstand.

And when he had gone far, a certain distance, he was not alone any longer. So much had things changed, even to that extent; what was gone had returned. There was a sound of music and a familiar smell of earth in spring. There was many things: there was joy of working and sleeping and eating and loving, there was a genial, lusty and untroubled laughter, there was a light voice, a glint of sun, a perfume, a peace.

Helen! Polack! ...
Once in the darkness he wept, silently. This man, Joe Murray.

THERE came an afternoon when, as he met Terry at the streetcar, there was a tension on Joe and a determination. She was quick to read him, quicker day by day. She hurried to join him and caught his arm, looking at him.

"You've got something to tell? News? Good news?"
"Wait till we get up the house," he said.
"Tell me. I can't wait."

Much interest was shown by Brownwood citizens in the Archery contest held for Scouts of the Central Section Saturday afternoon, by the side of the Lyric theatre. Following are the names of the winners and prizes won: Jack Collie, troop 3, first place, one week at Camp Billy Gibbons; David Belvin, troop 16, second place, official Scout ax; Roland Graves, troop 43, third place, Scout knife; Glenn Pouncey, troop 16, fourth place, first aid kit; Phillip Shaw, troop 2, fifth place, official Scout belt; Jack McCulley, troop 2, sixth place, official neckerchief; Ray Morgan, troop 2, neckerchief slide. The contest was sponsored by the Lyric Theatre, and prizes were furnished by Lew Bray, Lyric manager.

Scouters from Blanket, Bang, Zephyr, Rising Star, Mullin, Pioneer and Sipe Springs are to be guests of the Cross Cut Scouters at a Pow-Wow to be held there Monday evening, June 20th. In connection with these monthly meetings a training course is being given. The "Introductory Course" was finished in April, and the course now being taught is "Elements of Part Two."

Camp Billy Gibbons
To those who have never been to Camp Billy Gibbons, they will find one of the best camp sites in this part of the state. The camp is located in the hill country on Gibbons' 45,000 acre ranch, 15 miles south of the village of Richland Springs, at the mouth of Brady Creek on the San Saba River. This is one of the beauty spots of the country and one of much tradition—there you may find Indian paintings of long ago pictured on two different bluffs. History has it that this was one of the famous Indian camp grounds—and listen, Scout, you just don't know how grand the "bath tub" spring is until you have given it a tryout.

SPORT GLANCES . . . . By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service
NEW YORK—Henry Armstrong's feat of thoroughly pummeling Barney Ross will seem greater 10 years from now than today. Armstrong always will be the featherweight champion who won the welterweight title.
The broad-chested St. Louis Negro technically now has a claim to three titles, inasmuch as Ross did not lose the lightweight leadership in the ring. Barney simply vacated the 135-pound throne to make possible his three highly profitable engagements with Jimmy McLarnin.
Armstrong much prefers things as they are, however. He can make good use of Lou Ambers and will be an odds-on favorite over the recognized lightweight foe at Yankee Stadium in July.
Beating Ambers would make Armstrong the first fighter since Bob Fitzsimmons to hold three world championships.
Hammering Henry isn't the first feather ruler to repel a boss of the welters, however. Abe Attell beat Buddy Ryan in Chicago years ago. The difference was that honest Abe got nothing more than a newspaper decision, which didn't make it official.

A TELLE scaled just 119 pounds when he bested Ryan, who came in with a 23-pound bulge at 142.
What should have been stressed before the Armstrong-Ross scrap was the pasting the Chicago entrant took in repelling Cefterino Garcia last September, his protracted layoff, loss of interest in fighting, and his marriage.
"He couldn't have been expected to go on forever," explained Ross' managers, as they informed the press that it was the kid's last fight. After what happened to Barney, this appeared to be an altogether unnecessary announcement.

WASHINGTON LETTER
BY RODNEY DOUBER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Numerous guests at the Soviet embassy the other night wished they had been totting candid cameras.
There, in white ties and long coat-tails, were Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the Supreme Court and Justice Hugo L. Black, engaged in earnest—and cordial—conversation. Between them, listening in, was Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who led the successful fight against the Roosevelt Supreme Court plan last year.
One man who could have used a camera to good advantage had he been there was Congressman Maury Maverick of Texas, whose opponent in this year's Democratic primary already is campaigning against him on the issue that Maverick has been a guest at the Russian embassy. To disqualify from public office men guilty of that offense would depopulate Washington of nearly all its big shots, Republicans and Democrats alike.

EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, congresswoman, appeared conspicuously in a newspaper recently shown here. Entering the theater to see herself in action, she found she had come a few minutes too late. A full-length feature picture starring Ginger Rogers, not Edith, flashed on the screen. Uninterested, Mrs. Rogers departed.
Seeking to stem the flow of Japanese goods into this country, Mrs. Rogers has collected—and indignantly displays—some 20 or more souvenir articles sold in Washington stores, metallic reproductions of the Capitol, White House, Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument and so on—all marked "Made in Japan."
Mrs. Rogers tells how an American manufacturer sold cheaply because air bubbles had accidentally appeared in them. Japanese, she says, reproduced the glass with the bubbles faithfully copied—at a still lower price.
So far, it appears, Mrs. Rogers hasn't heard that the Japanese lanterns assembled for a big White House party recently were also "Made in Japan."

Cornell Names Ph.D. Grad to High Post

ITHACA, N. Y.—Dr. Charles E. Palm has been appointed head of the department of entomology at Cornell University to succeed Prof. O. A. Johannsen, who retires July 1.

Not yet 30 years old, Dr. Palm is the fourth and youngest man to head the department which has been operating for 60 years. A graduate of the University of Arkansas, Dr. Palm earned the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Cornell University, where he served as an assistant both in entomology and biology. He spent two summers working on the control of cabbage and cauliflower worms at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva.

In his extension work, Dr. Palm became familiar with the insect problems of potato, vegetable and fruit growers throughout the state. The young entomologist was born on a cotton farm in Texas. His family moved to a fruit and vegetable farm at Rogers, Ark., when he was 2. It was on this farm, watching his father spray the crops, that Palm obtained his first knowledge of insects. Since

Extra Charge On Handset Phones Is to Be Halted

The 15-cent monthly charge for handset telephone service in Eastland will be limited to 12 months for each subscriber, instead of 24. E. Hooks, manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in this area announced today.

Approximately 50 Eastland handset telephone users will receive a reduction of 15 cents a month effective with their July telephone bills, and 50 in addition will receive the reduction within the coming year.

Subscribers who have paid the handset charge for twelve months or longer will have the 15-cent charge eliminated immediately. Those who have had handsets for less than 12 months will have the 15-cent charge deducted from their bills at the end of the 12th month.

"The handset was first introduced in 1927," Mr. Hooks said. "A charge was established to permit an orderly introduction of the instrument and to prevent premature retirement of serviceable desk telephones. More than half of the handsets now in service in Eastland do not carry the additional charge, and by the end of July, due to this reduction, more than three-fourths will not pay a handset charge."

then he has been a keen student of nature and his ability to carry on and direct entomological research has made him an authority in his field.

Four men were sentenced to death in Russia the other day. Nothing new ever happens in that country.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers believe nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.
Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
An excess of acids or poisons in your blood when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatism, pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 47 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 million ill-kidneyed folks flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Women Face Mirror 12 Days Out of Year

LONDON.—The average woman spends a year of her life in front of the mirror, an expert employed by a British cosmetic firm estimates.
In the morning, he explains, the average girl spends at least a quarter of an hour in front of her mirror, combing her hair, and powdering her face. Before she gets into her usual work, she usually spends longer, she says, 20 minutes. To this he adds another 10 minutes for the constant glances she makes at a mirror in the office.

That totals up to three-quarters of an hour a day, or about a year.
