"The Yearling" by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, the author of "South Moon Under," is a book of the Month Club Selection.

Political Announcements

The Eastland Telegram is authorized to publish the following announcements of candidates for public offices, subject to the action of the Democratic primaries:

- For Representative, 106th Dist. (Eastland County) P. L. (Lewis) Crossley. Cecil A. Lotief. For District Clerk: Euell D. Bond. John White. Claude (Curley) Maynard.

It is with the Baxters, one of these hammock-country families, that The Yearling is concerned. One year of their lives is spanned in the book—a year brim full of even and incident, of drama, conflict, tragedy, humor and beauty.

There are vivid characters in the story—the Forresters, an unscrupulous, lawless tribe; wise and winning Grandma Hutto; old Slewfoot, the wily bear, whose pursuit and death take on the high courage and daring of the quest for legendary monster—but the book belongs to the Baxters, and to Jody.

"Nobody's in Town"

Two short novels in one complete book form by Edna Ferber, the author of the six novels betraying America, Come and Get It, Show Boat, American Beauty, So Big, The Girls, Cimarron.

Trees Die at the Top, the second, an acid and moving study in contrasts, asks pointedly the bitter question: we are, as a nation, worthy of the magnificent and hard-won heritage which our pioneer past has given us? For we are shown now the pioneer spirit, the spirit which made America, that pushed her frontiers to the western ocean, has faded—the tree is dying at the top.

Eastland girl teams broke even in a two-game bill Thursday night at the Fire Department field.

In the second game Edith Rosenquest, starting her first game of the season, pitched five innings of no-hit, no-run ball and then retired in favor of Foster, who finished the game, the score being 2 for Graham and 10 for the Royal Blues.

A sensational leaping one-hand catch by Doris Lawrence was the fielding feature of the night play.

Fight Goes On to Keep Down Dread Spotted Fever

HAMILTON, Mont.—Study of Rocky Mountain spotted fever will be facilitated by addition next year of a third unit, costing $25,000, to the U. S. public health service laboratories here, officials have announced.

Thirty-five years ago the Rocky Mountain wood tick was recognized only as a pest, not as a menace. Today the insect, dermatocentor andersoni stiles, is recognized as the carrier of spotted fever, a disease once attributed to polluted water.

Scientists in this Bitter Root valley laboratory now know the carrier and manufacture a preventive vaccine to minimize infection possibilities. In addition to studying spotted fever, however, research workers in the $400,000 plant here study and experiment with tularemia, relapsing fever, bubonic plague, Colorado tick fever and tick paralysis.

Let Discredit Be Given Where Discredit Is Due

Probably it would be hard to find an American who is not in complete sympathy with the protests the government has made recently against aerial bombing of populous cities. No matter what excuses may be advanced, that kind of bombing is a crime against humanity—and every American knows it.

Yet it is extremely important for us to realize just who the enemy is, when we make these protests.

It would be the worst kind of folly for us to let these bombing outrages persuade us that the Japanese people (for example), or the residents of rebel-controlled Spain, or the great mass of Italians and Germans, are bad and vicious and cruel and inhumane.

Those are people like ourselves. Some of them are good sorts and some of them are not so good. Taken by and large they are neither much better nor much worse than we are. As individual human beings they like the idea of bombing women and children no better than we like it.

The real enemy is the militarist—the army man who has succumbed to the idea that no price is too high to pay for victory, who feels that any conceivable method of beating down one's foe is legitimate if it works. And that gentleman is not the exclusive possession of any country. He can be found everywhere.

If you hate these bombing raids (as you undoubtedly do) that man is your enemy—whether he wears the uniform of the Japanese, the Germans, the Spanish... or the Americans.

He is your enemy because he has no conception of what civilization means. He is willing to use in warfare weapons which mean that the entire world is the loser, whoever gains the immediate victory. He is so ignorant about the things which make life worth living that he turns mankind deliberately back to the dark ages of earliest barbarism. He is blood brother to the old Assyrian monarchs who used to boast about the pile of mutilated corpses they erected outside of conquered cities.

And it is important to get his identity fixed, for two reasons.

First, there is no sense in letting our indignation at the bombing outrages set up in us an antagonism to some specific nation. The road to war is built on just such antagonisms. Once you believe that some particular people are cruel and conscienceless, you are practically ready to fight them.

Second, the militarist exists because we let him exist. When we shrug our shoulders at some bit of war-time barbarism and say, "Well—that's war, and it can't be helped," we hold up his hand. The only way to stop him is to denounce him and his philosophy, in season and out of season—to denounce him, and not the particular nation he happens at the moment to be working for.

Only in that way can we stop this frightful growth of savagery.

'What'd You Bring Back for Me, Uncle Joe?'

he mention the fact that the minority are interfering with the affairs of government, endeavoring to overthrow it so they may join Germany in subduing the native Czechs, and the fact that those people are but striving to protect themselves. Hitler does not even have this excuse for persecuting the Jews and yet he will brook no outside interference; then why should he consider a country a menace to world peace simply because it is fighting for its rights? It is no secret to the world that Czechoslovakia is Hitler's next selected victim for conquest. Even less in his speech admitted as much. He said: "Seldom has the fate of a people been played with so lightly as in the last eventful weeks in whose limelight stands a state which exists only owing to the sham of Versailles, and thanks to sham, has been able to throw the world into confusion." Germany evidently sees no reason for her existence at all.

One is led to wonder if a philosophy that makes the state everything can be entirely satisfying to the majority of ordinary German people. Such a government is patterned after ancient Sparta. Individual men exist only for the "state" and on account of the "state"; whatever of rights may pertain to them are derived solely from the concessions of the state. And what is the state? Judging from the radical dictum the state is Hitler. In logic it might read: All Nazi are responsible to the leader; Hitler is the leader; therefore all are responsible to Hitler. Since individual men exist solely for the state; since they are responsible only to Hitler, then he must be the state.

How then, we ask ourselves, is it possible for one man to gain such control over a nation, and more remarkable still since his own party is reported as being in the minority even in Germany? The answer is simple. When Hitler came into prominence Germany was in a bad fix. There was a scarcity of jobs, strikes were rampant and morality at low ebb. He put men to work, paid them a living wage, if they lived frugally and made it possible for them to go on a vacation ever so often. Germany began to assume its old place in the world and the people liked it.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

DINNER is a formal business at the great English universities. The Fellows of a college, in their robes, sit at high table in the great hall, and the students sit below them at long tables agleam with sterling silver. Women are not invited, but my husband was guest at Jesus College, Cambridge University, and gave me this picture.

All present stood until grace in Latin was read sonorously by an undergraduate. The first course of the dinner was lentil soup, hot and pungent. Next came boiled turbot with a smooth lobster sauce. (The English can't understand why Americans don't eat more fish.)

For the main course, the learned Fellows had the choice of braised filet of beef or roast duck, together with potatoes, cauliflower and saute tomatoes.

Below, at the undergraduate tables, the fare was more simple. But beginning with the president of the Boat Club, all the way round the great hall to the humblest student, young British manhood in academic gowns seemed to be enjoying its dinner.

Several of the fellows at "high table" had done research study at American universities. They lamented the fact that the American know so little about the delicate English bilberry. As they spoke, the butlers brought in hot bilberry tarts with whipped cream. There was also lemon and orange water ices, and the report is that even ranking English

Efforts to settle a strike at a eastern carpet factory are getting nowhere. The management feel that the strikers' viewpoint is warped, and all the latter will do is grumble, "Woof!"

Rambling With The Rambler

BY WAYNE WALLACE

Adolf Hitler bids fair to go down with the greatest scourges of the human race, Genghis Kahn, Attila and Nero, was recently predicted of the German dictator.

Yet what else can be expected from a man who sets himself up as a God and tramples the rights of others under his feet. A man who advocates the radical dictum, "There is no law but the law of the land; there are no laws from above or from beyond the border. All are responsible to the leader, and he is responsible only to his God." His God evidently referring to his own selfish desires.

Hitler and the Nazi German philosophers have concocted a false doctrine on racism and are trying to instill their pet theories in the minds of the German people. Here they find a fertile field since this doctrine teaches that the human races so differ among themselves that the lowest of them differs more from the highest in the human stock than it goes from the highest type of the brute creation, of course, the Teutonic race being listed on top. Other races are listed according to the opposition they present to the Nazi and their plans of conquest. It is for this reason that even when the Nazi Germans form the minority of a country in which they live, they believe the government should be put in their hands. The conquest of Austria and the present difficulty with Czechoslovakia furnish good examples of this.

The classification of the Jew race must be close to the bottom of the list, if it does not occupy that position. Because the Jews are inter-nationalist they are not wanted by a government that is extremely nationalistic, the claim being that they have caused social unrest by their extreme liberalism and have played a leading part in international disturbances. Such differences in opinion leaves a gap that allows no attempt of reconciliation as far as the Nazi are concerned and so the Semitic race is persecuted. This anti-Semitism hatred is not confined to Germany alone, in fact it has swept across eastern Europe, but the attack upon them is not as bitter and cruel as it is in Germany. It has simply become a mania in this country encouraged and nurtured by Hitler, Gobbits and Goering—Third Reich stewards.

Nor would other races be exempted from such persecution if the opportunity presented itself. Under the leadership of Hitler, Nazi Germany would rule the world if she could. Her philosophy is based on the principle that the end of education is to cultivate the character of the race and to inflame the soul with a burning love of its own race as its highest good. If other nations stand in the way then annihilate them. Such is the danger that faces the Czechs for attempting to suppress the Nazi Germany minority in that country.

Nor will Germany be to blame if world peace is disrupted over the nerve to proclaim. In a recent speech, Rudolf Hess, general representative of Hitler, accused Czechoslovakia of being a menace to the peace of Europe. Concerning the German minority in that country he said: "Minorities have been deprived of rights, terrorized and ill treated. With increasing horror non-Czech nationals are being struck, clubbed or shot down repeatedly only because they are not Czechs." Thus he would delude the German people into believing that members of their race are being persecuted for no reason at all. Not once does

WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON.—So much of the new tax law is arguable, or not generally understood, that few laymen knew just how right when Senator Pat Harrison blasted President Roosevelt's claims of the act as made in his Arthurday speech.

Lawyers' adding big taxpayers to pay as little as legally possible wish Roosevelt had vetoed the bill. They fear the deflationary effect of big new corporate savings. And they wonder why Roosevelt waited until the tax bill passed both Houses before publicly expressing himself.

SENATOR ALBEN BARKLEY of Kentucky, after a full session as majority leader, has made a discovery and an admission.

"We went along this afternoon with practically no attendance," he said during debate on the recovery-relief bill. "There is no way of keeping senators here either in the daytime or the nighttime."

A FEATURED article about James Roosevelt's spectacular success as an insurance salesman will appear in a national weekly magazine around the end of this month.

It will be revealed that President Roosevelt, when governor of New York, once castigated "political insurance men" and relatives of public officials who sold insurance.

THE Federal Bureau of Investigation is nursing a hot report on Nazi activities in America which may or may not see daylight. Although near-violations rather than actual violations of federal law are alleged, G-Men have learned much about the movement's funds, plans and tie-up with Berlin.

They also found that many patriotic Americans had joined up simply because they liked to goose-step, sing and associate with others of German descent.

Top Treasury experts, most of whom are private tax consultants, are of the opinion that the tax revision gives the small gains taxpayer 50 per cent and the biggest gains taxpayer a maximum of 80 per cent.

DONALD BUDGE is the leader in singles, and probably in doubles with Gene Mako. There's question about that.

That leaves the remaining places on the 1938 American Cup team open to Sidney B. Wood, Jr., and Wilmer Allison.

The younger candidates are Billy Riggs, Joseph E. Hunt, and Elwood T. Oak.

Wood has shown in other years that he is capable of everything on tennis court.

On his game, this seasoned performer who was a star at 15, might prove the outstanding star against the Australians or whoever may be the challengers.

Wood has a gift for out-thinking opponents, for bringing off the unexpected. Until Budge came along full stride, Bill Tilden insisted that the erstwhile darling of Seaside was the finest of the American lot.

Wood was the youngest player ever to win a major championship when he was All-England champion in 1931 at the age of 19. He was ranked by all critics in the world's first 10 in spite of giving less than half of the time to the same that the others do, as well as being the youngest player so ranked of the time.

The bracket Sidney B. Wood, Jr., with Allison and John Van Ryn as opponents who have passed their mark is idiotic.

Wood has entered major tournaments and he has the urge.

And the second singles player, Donald Budge will be named solely on merit.

REGARDLESS of what happens within the next several weeks, the New York Yankees and the club the others will be trying to beat in the American League all the way to the October wire. When Cleveland, Washington, Boston, or Detroit loses, and the Ruppert Rifles are repelled as well, the managers of the aforementioned clubs breathe easier. When it's the other way around, they're tough.

"The strongest team," says Joe Cronin of the Red Sox, "has been the Yankees."

"But there's been one encouraging sign; the Yankees, like every other team in the league, have looked pretty bad on the road. If some of the western teams coming into Yankee Stadium can knock them off, the race will look very much like a typical National League affair, with four or five teams involved."

"This year the American has been very much of a home league. Every team has done better in its own park than on the road. Look at Cleveland. That outfit didn't make much of an impression in the east. Everybody said, 'The same old Indians.' But when they got back home they looked like world beaters."

"Cleveland looked like the second best club we've faced."

"Detroit? Well, when we took them on Greenberg and York were still in a slump."

"Cleveland looked better because it was getting much more effective pitching."

EDDIE HARVEY, brother of Charley and a veteran handler of fighters, calls Henry Armstrong the most marvelous miltman in the matter of stamina.

"Armstrong went more than 15 rounds against Barney Ross," says Eddie Harvey, "and punched every second of the way. He went 20 rounds. He went five in the dressing room just before he climbed into the ring, and at top speed."

The only way to stop Henry Armstrong is to have him arrested.

Socialite June Audrey Kuhn, above, will become the autumn bride of George (Bob) Crosby, noted "swing" band leader and brother of Bing Crosby. The engagement of the crooner's brother and the Chicago girl was announced nine days after Crosby obtained a divorce from his first wife on a desertion charge.

Plea of Poverty Is Too Much for Bandit
ST. LOUIS—A man stepped out of an automobile at Al Ahlers' filling station, thrust his hand in his pocket, and announced: "This is a stickup!"
"I'm a poor man, and this is only a small station," said Ahlers. "I don't do much business here. I've only got about $6 in my name."
"Is that all you got?" asked the bandit.
"Yes, every cent."
"Well, keep it."

This Man, Joe Murray

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOE MURRAY—liked new places, new jobs, new girls.
HELEN—fell in love—hard—once.
TERRY MALLOW—found love—and kept it!

Yesterday, facing the crisis of unemployment, Joe decides to leave for work in the shipyards, but only over Terry's tearful protests.

CHAPTER XVI

JOE had made for the door but Terry flew there before him. "I'll be good," she said in a small choked voice, fighting for control. "I'll stop. Don't leave me alone the last chance I've got with you."

He looked at her. His face was grim, and he was suffering. He looked at her, and then he threw down his hat. He did not say anything; he just stayed there. She did not say anything; she set about preparing their dinner. She regained control, and she ate with him in no appetite but with a quiet, bleakly bland despair.

Late that night she said beside him, into his ear, "Don't be mad at me if I say something. I want to say... will you take me with you?"

It was out of the question, he told her. She knew all the reasons.

"Then I won't have you any more?" she said. "No more here close to me? All alone... here? Nobody to amuse Terry, tell Terry what to do, make love to Terry?"

He did not speak. She crept on his shoulder and cried, very quietly, trying not to arouse him. The sobs died slowly and she was still. Her hands on his shoulder began to clutch him hard; the nails were sharp and cruel. She made a sound, a chaotic, primordial sound of passionate despair, and she kissed him. Taut with the pain of those sharp nails in his flesh he returned the kiss. They were together, in the terrible imminence of parting...

And so Joe Murray took to the road again. Out of one town into another; out of one day into the next. Life had rolled backward, wiping out a wife and home, wiping out even what he had possessed before either: the certainty of work and the freedom of the nation. When he rode to Port Lansing—riding, by the way, on a diversity of conveyances that chance sent along the national highway between—he no longer blew, adrift and lightly; he traveled on a set, grim pilgrimage. He tore up roots and traveled, carrying with him the pain of that.

It was a good job, as jobs go. The shipyard was an immense place. Hundreds worked there, a small regiment; but yet it looked lean and hungry, for not long since they had streamed in of mornings in an army, 10,000 of them. There was a dry dock, and then a wet dock, and acres of great gaunt shops. The dry dock was working, there were two ships in the wet dock, but the ship ways, 10 of them, loomed empty and silent.

There was no building, and Joe was lucky and knew it. How long lucky, he couldn't tell. Men of a hundred trades stood about the gates mornings when he came to work, haunting the closed employment office. He worked and drew good money and sent a large portion of it back to Terry every week. They must save what they could; the future was unknowable.

Joe was alone; he lived in a boarding house on a mean street, the cheapest could be found, where his fellows were a raffish, uncouth lot who would have made him one of them if they could, but they could not, for Joe in his turn could not meet them in their chosen ground, which was drinking and women and then more drinking, so long as there was money for it. He walked, and he went to motion pictures, and he read, and he sat thinking. And he was alone.

Terry wrote to him often, sometimes day after day. She had one refrain: she missed him, missed him. She worked steadily, and that was nice, but when she came home alone at night, that was terrible. Yet she was careful not to complain. She kept as busy as she could. She called on his family, she went home with the girls from the mill, she even called a few times at her own old home. She had found a city school where adults could attend at night and she was enrolled. She was learning English literature and French. Not, she said, that she had any use for French or expected to become a bookworm or could hope to be wiser than her Joe, but you never could tell, some day maybe when their babies were growing up she could help them... had she ever told him, they were going to go to college?

Joe read these things, and his heart was empty, and he wrote matter-of-fact replies about the shipyard and the town and commended her for her industry and suggested things for her to do and told her to stick it out, she'd come right side up. And he wrote down at the end always that he loved her and missed her and they'd make out somehow. Whereupon he put down his pen in a kind of empty bitterness.

THEN came a letter from her, full of courage and appeal, in which she told him of the lay-off at the mill. She had lost her job! Some of the oldest girls remained, but most of the mill was out. She did not throw herself on him in panic, but discussed immediately her adjustments and plans. She could find something if she looked hard; she didn't need much money, and girls were still hired around because they were cheap. In fact a girl could get a job most anywhere. She had listened to them, and she knew.

She could even, couldn't she, get a job in Port Lansing... and they could be together?

That was not like her; she would, ordinarily, have incontinently come. But she was afraid of him, of that grimness, of that change.

Joe wrote an immediate reply in which he said no, impossible! Then he tore up the letter and did not write another for two days. But when he wrote he still said no, it couldn't be done. It was too risky, too far from home where there was no least hope to fall back on in extremity. His job was still far too chancy. He missed her, but he couldn't allow it.

She thought he was overfearful, lacking in confidence in her. She thought he was really young. She argued, daintily and beguilingly, replying.

But Joe was right. The powers were too strong against her. The week after the shut-down of the mill, the shipyard announced complete suspension. The entire small regiment was turned out, so that the day following, the closed employment office was for the first time in months not haunted by a solitary soul. Joe Murray was turned out with them, and he thanked his old buddy for the lift while it lasted, and went home and sat by his boarding house window and watched the sun go down, down slowly into darkness in the west.

It looked like a sun that was going down forever.

Search For First Title-Insurance

By United Press

PHILADELPHIA. — The first title-insurance policy ever issued was drawn up here more than 60 years ago by the Land Title Bank and Trust company here.

The firm has been seeking the original document, issued June 24, 1876, to Mart'n Morris, an autocrat of the company's first president, Joshua H. Morris, for the past two years, but it has not been found.

The federal tax and also made full contributions to the Texas Unemployment Compensation fund. In such cases the commissioner emphasized the taxpayers affected have four years from the date the federal tax was paid to file their claims for refund.

Such claims will be considered for allowance provided the contributions to the Texas Unemployment Compensation fund have been made on or before July 26, 1938. Where refunds are made under the relief provisions of the act, the law provides that no interest shall be allowed.

Federal Revenue Act Explained By Commissioner

AUSTIN. — The attention of Texas employers liable for unemployment compensation taxes on their 1936 payrolls was directed today by Orville S. Carpenter, chairman-director of the Texas Unemployment Compensation Commission, to a statement yesterday by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering concerning the recently enacted Federal Revenue Act.

"Commissioner Helvering has called attention to the provisions of the recently enacted revenue act of 1938," Carpenter said, "which allows the 90 per cent credit against the federal tax if the state tax is paid before July 26, 1938, and also authorizes refunds in cases where the tax has been paid previously but too late to enable the taxpayer to obtain the 90 per cent credit."

"There are still over 100 known persons and firms in the state who have not yet paid their 1936 state unemployment taxes," Carpenter said. "These employers are particularly reminded that this section applies to them and that they now have an opportunity to pay the state tax and obtain credit against the federal tax."

Carpenter said that all known firms and persons who may be entitled to a refund of federal taxes paid by them have been advised by personal letters from the commission.

In his statement from Washington, Commissioner Helvering explained that the relief provisions contained in the revenue act of 1938 are applicable only to the calendar year 1936.

"In a great many instances employers of eight or more who were denied the 90 per cent credit have filed claims for abatement or refund. In other cases the Bureau of Internal Revenue has information which will permit the prompt adjustment of the returns," Helvering stated.

EASTLAND, TEXAS

Newspaper Ads Bring Tourists To Mississippi

DALLAS — The quickly-proved success of a newspaper advertising campaign by the state of Mississippi on its new north-south paved highway, says a report of the All-South Development Council, contains a valuable tip for Texas in its cultivation of the highly-remunerative tourist industry.

An expenditure of $6,199 last December and January by the Mississippi Advertising commission, state-owned and state operated, was returned 80-fold through increase in gasoline tax receipts alone, the commission reported. These receipts for the first quarter of 1938 were $473,070 above those for the same period of 1937.

That the benefits were not confined to the actual state coffers alone is indicated in the fact that

In a state as large as Texas, stimulation of the office could profitably be within the state as well as attracting outside visitors port noted.

Undoubtedly there will carry-over of tourist to the state, by word-of-mouth, but with competition the states growing each year for this as well as for new industry, a program designed to keep this "tourist" flowing into the state is necessary.
