Elaborate plans to make this the biggest rodeo ever attempted in Ranger, or in any town of near its size, have been completed and practically everything is in readiness for the four shows. One show will be offered in most of the events, making it possible for winners to take home both money and merchandise of value.

PEACE GETS SETBACKS IN TWO COUNTRIES

Hope for an early end to the China and Spanish wars faded today and weakened prospects for stabilization of European peace.

Desperate loyalist resistance on the Spanish front blunted the insurgent offensive against Valencia.

In China the spreading floodwaters of the Yellow river and the rising waters of the Yangtze continued to mire the Japanese military machine advancing on Hankow.

It was estimated that 50,000-60,000 persons would be made homeless by the flood.

But despite the Japanese setback by the floods the Chinese military position was greatly weakened.

Elsewhere: Tokyo—Grave diplomatic tension between Japan and Soviet Russia increased when it was reported that 30 Soviet frontier guards attacked 20 Manchukuo patrol guards, killing one.

When Is a Constituent Not a Constituent?

An odd sidelight on the way representative government sometimes works—or fails to work—in America was furnished the other day in the capitol building of the state of Ohio.

Ohio has a "relief crisis" on its hands; has had it, off and on, for a long time. In its great industrial cities scores of thousands of people are destitute, and there is no more money to spend on them.

So the other day the speaker of the state House of Representatives called an unusual conference at the capitol. It was attended by representatives of the legislature, the governor of the state—and all of the leading lobbyists.

"Despairing of the possibility that the legislature would pass any program as long as powerful lobbies were opposing revenue-raising bills, Uible (the speaker) called the lobbyists themselves into session."

These lobbyists included a group known as the Inter-Organization Conference, a business lobby which is said to be "in virtual control" of the State Senate; the Township Trustees Association, which has exercised vast control over the House; the school lobby, the State Federation of Labor.

Now if this action does not come close to confession that the people's elected representatives have abdicated their functions and have, turned their consciences over to the lobbyists, it is hard to see just what it does mean.

Certainly no legislature that felt its own sovereignty and recognized its clear duty to its constituents would fumble helplessly with a dire problem for months and then turn meekly to the representatives of special interests with the humble request that it be informed what sort of bill it might be permitted to pass.

Yet this is no scandalously uncommon situation. In lesser degree the same sort of thing has happened, over and over again, in many other state capitals. The "invisible government" that reformers have been yelping about for so long is no isolated growth peculiar to Ohio.

Instead, this sort of thing is part of the picture of American politics. Our elected representatives have grown more sensitive to the appeals and commands of the pressure groups than to the requests of the voters. And in that fact you have a large part of the explanation for the inefficiency and unresponsiveness of American state governments.

MAJOR COMPLETION LACKING FOR DISTRICT IN OIL WEEK

There was no major completion drilling in this immediate part of West Central Texas, although interest followed closely on progress of several interesting projects.

In Eastland county, Hayner, Reeves and Rose No. 1 P. C. Larkin, three and a half miles northwest of Rising Star, section 40, block 2, was having a bridge drilled over 35 feet from the bottom, which was reported as approximately 3,098 feet. An unconfirmed report stated oil had risen several hundred feet in the test.

Four miles north of Putnam, in Callahan county, prospects were encouraging for a Caddo lime producer in the Wittmer Oil and Gas Properties No. 1 R. D. Williams, section 2269, T. E. & L. survey, which was to receive acidization after setting of 6 1/2-inch at 3,470 feet. Observers believed the well was good for 25 barrels daily without stimulation.

Estimate was 75 barrels of oil and 500,000 feet of gas in the Willard Rich No. 1 Andrews, southwestern part of Stephens county, 16 miles north of Cisco, in which oil rose over 1,000 feet despite balling. Pay was from the Lake and total depth around 3,668 feet. Location is in section 39, block 7, T. & P. survey.

Dorothy Oil company No. 1 Mrs. J. L. Thompson, one and one-fourth miles from Eastland west, in the east half of the southeast quarter, section 29, block 4, H. & T. C. survey, was being drilled to 700 feet.

Hickok Producing and Development company No. 1 G. C. Cleveland (it has been called the No. 4 Cleveland) although the firm in its official application to the Railroad Commission designated it as No. 1), eight miles northwest of Cisco, a 4,200-foot project, was drilling past 375 feet. It is in 490 feet from the south line, 660 feet from the east line and 1,160 feet from the north line of the 100-acre lease, Eastland county. Also it is 1,000 feet north of No. 3 Cleveland, recently completed for 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas in the Lake sand.

J. F. Baker No. 2 N. T. Mulroy, section 1, William Ahrenback survey, five miles northwest of Rising Star, a 3,200 foot project, was drilling at 375 feet. Location is in Eastland county.

W. J. Dobbs No. 1 Greer, Eastland county test two and a half miles south of Carbon, J. E. Hardy survey, was shut down at total depth of 800 feet.

Lone Star Gas company No. 1 E. H. Brooks, section 54, block 7, T. & P. survey, 800 feet from the same firm's No. 5 R. W. Brooks, a gasser, was drilling at 600 feet, Stephens county.

In Comanche county, R. D. Compton was shut down at 400 feet on the No. 1 Griffin, block 2, Comanche county school lands, nine miles south of Comanche.

In Palo Pinto county, north of Gordon, W. K. Gordon No. 3 Cornelia Crocker, John Bird survey, was dry and abandoned at 3,717 feet and was to be plugged.

In the same county, two and a half miles north of Strawn, Palo Pinto Oil and Gas corporation was

Need for Repair Is Told By Sikes At F. H. A. Meeting

There are approximately 200 pieces of property in Eastland that are in need of repair, R. E. Sikes, mortgage conference representative of the state Federal Housing Administration office at Dallas, estimated Saturday afternoon at a meeting of members of Eastland's better housing committee and others at the Eastland National Bank.

The meeting was to further plans for interest of the government program in Eastland. It was brought out that $30,000 in F. H. A. loans were handled by the bank in 1934. The bank has also qualified under the present program.

Sikes stated that the program was designed to stimulate business and that if businessmen would modernize their stores their appearance would be enhanced and in many cases business would increase.

He reported great interest in improving businesses at Stephenville, where he recently visited. Albert Taylor, chairman of the better housing committee, appointed T. E. Richardson, V. O. Hatcher and Stewart Doss as members of the committee. Other members appointed previously were W. C. Campbell, Mrs. W. S. Poe, Frank Crowell and R. L. Perkins, Sr.

At the meeting were Sikes, Campbell, Hatcher, Perkins, Miss Florence Perkins, Grady Pipkin, Richardson, Taylor and Earl Bunder.

taxes now are necessary and that he will oppose, as Lieutenant Governor, any moves in that direction. Mr. Brooks will speak here before July 23rd, Hammond said.

Brooks' outstanding proposition was that the old-age pension should be paid in full to all meeting the constitutional requirements. He asserted this could be done by a $10,000,000 saving in operating expenses of the state government; the abolition of the Liquor Board and the abolition of the Old Age Assistance Committee, which would mean an additional $3,000,000. He explained that liquor enforcement should be returned to the hands of local officials and the investigation and passing upon pension applications to the various county judges with the warrants issued by the state comptroller.

Another outstanding proposal in Brooks' platform was that the license tax on automobiles should be abolished and in its place a nominal registration fee should be substituted with the drivers license feature retained. The candidate's position is that this would not hamper the construction program of the Highway Department. He pointed out that increasing revenues from the gasoline tax rapidly are retiring the highway bonded indebtedness, and that the increased use of gasoline will take care of the demands for new roads and for maintenance.

Brooks also opposes tampering with the constitution and the creation of a unicameral legislature. He charges it would be far easier under this system for special interests to dominate legislation, than it is in a bicameral body.

The candidate's slogan is, "I Hate Taxes," and he said no new

Buick Will Sponsor Louis Fight Airing Over Large Hookup

FLINT, Mich., June 18.—Sponsoring one of the largest sports broadcasts ever staged, which includes 146 stations of the red and blue networks of the National Broadcasting Company, including stations in Canada and Honolulu, the nationwide Buick dealer organization is preparing for the Louis-Schmeling fight, June 22.

This is the fifth broadcast of a heavyweight championship fight broadcast by the Buick division of General Motors. As in the past, Buick dealers will establish "listening posts" in their showrooms and prominent places in their communities, and will otherwise identify their local businesses with the international broadcast.

Dealers' windows throughout the country are now being decorated with large 38x50-inch window posters calling attention to the broadcast. This poster is in four colors and shows a huge boxing glove on which is printed information concerning the fight, and Buick's participation. More than 3,500 of these posters have been supplied to the dealers.

At the same time, attention will be called to the "listening posts" throughout the country by easel cards designed to be placed in a prominent position in the dealers' showrooms and hotel lobbies and the like where the radio program will be tuned in.

More than 300,000 small window stickers in the shape of a boxing glove are being distributed by Buick dealers to their customers, and a novelty magic paper has been supplied in quantities of 250,000. When this paper is dipped in water the Buick slogan appears in the blank space as "the smartest place to put your money."

With a total of 116 stations, Buick officials believe this is the largest sponsored broadcast ever staged for a major sports event. The largest previous broadcast sponsored by Buick included 115 stations of the red and blue N.B.C. networks, when the Louis-Bradock fight was broadcast from Chicago.

Interest in the fight is at high pitch, according to reports received by W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager, from the dealer organization, and the executive believes that the event on June 22 will have one of the largest radio audiences on record.

Sharing Service With Christ

Text: Mark 16:1-8, 11-16, 19, 27

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D., Editor of Advance

FROM the tragedy of Calvary we turn to the triumph of the open tomb. From the despair and gloom of the disappointed and discouraged disciples, we turn to the revival of faith and hope, and the consciousness that the Master who had gone to the cross was living and not dead.

The glory of His resurrection, like the glory of His birth and the glory of that sad hour when His mother stood by the cross, is shared by women. What a remarkable place they occupy in all the beautiful story of the Master's life and death and resurrection—and all this coming out of a time when women had essentially an inferior social place and where, in general, they had little recognition. It is through the faith and courage of the women who went to the tomb and found it open that the disciples are rallied and brought into new faith and service.

And now that Jesus reveals Himself anew to those who had left all and followed Him, He gives them a deep and great commission. He no longer tells them to go into the villages of Galilee and Judea, but He gives them a great and world-wide commission.

There is a vision and purpose that even the discovery of new continents only expands. He said to the disciples, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation."

There have been great idealisms in the world, imperialism of might and power, the imperialism of Greece, the imperialism of Rome, the imperialism of empires; but here is the imperialism of love, service, salvation, an imperialism that contemplates the reaching of the whole world and all creatures with the good news of God, and with the salvation which is able to transform cursing blindness through lifting from sin into righteousness.

Here on this large and stately note we leave the master's studies in the life and sayings of Jesus, as found in the Book of Mark. It is the climax of all our study and the sense, also, it is no climax when we attain a peak in our we see beyond larger peak conquer.

From these studies in the Christ, we turn back to the history of the early years of Israel. It was the heroic prophetic life of Israel and great leaders that prepared the world for the coming of the Messiah. In the study of the Old Testament we find the seed and foundation of all that is in the New.

The Old Testament scriptures were the scriptures that Jesus knew, and in which he was trained in that devout home Nazareth in which he grew increasing in wisdom, and favor with God and man.

CHAPTER XVII

Terry sent him money out of what had been saved instantly she heard from him. It was railroad fare, in case he lacked it. Come home! Come home, come home this minute to Terry!

He went around with the money in his pocket, thinking, not answering. What he was thinking you might know without being told. Sinister thoughts, dangerous thoughts. Both of them jobless. Their home, finished. He backed home again, back to the old home, a burden and a drain on them.

She returning to her home, to the grim servitude it was. He would "call on her," visit her in that hostile, triumphant household, while she begrudged him the air he breathed there.

No! He would not! Once that had a meaning. Once he came bringing something; he had a strength and he shared it. There was a danger, and he averted it. There was a small gay needful one, and he had willingly enough done for her what there was to do. There was no more any measure of his uselessness and his vain conceit.

Joe put the money, excepting five dollars, into an envelope with a note saying he was heading west to no known destination, and he wrote Terry's name and address on the envelope and mailed it. Then he went down to the railroad yards in the dusk and waited. He waited an hour, and swung aboard an empty box car pulling out in a freight train heading west.

It was that night Terry arrived at his boarding house, to find him gone. . . .

And yet another time the Murrys at home were to hear from their Joe from all parts of the nation. Infrequently, meagerly, word came from him, rarely with any real news, never with an address to reply to. He wrote merely to assure them he was alive, fairly well, still going, dutifully. He never made mention of Terry.

How he lived no man can tell, even those who have done it themselves. It is one of those small miracles of existence. He found a vast company over the land performing the miracle daily, even as he. He learned from them quickly what little he did not know.

The way of the yards and jungles a tiny fire in a gully or under a culvert in the rain with a battered pot boiling . . . scraps of food garnered and begged and pilfered . . . the company of cast-offs of every degree through the night, huddled, with newspapers stuffed in the clothes, close to the blaze. In the morning a slow freight trundling through, or a long trek on the highway, with few speeding motorists risking a lift.

THE way of the cities: the charities, bitter as gall to a man who had walked where he willed in his strength, and was weak now with hunger . . . the streets, where hard faces rebuffed so awkward a plea for a cigaret, a meal . . . the agencies, where spiders revealed in the dust and not even a pick and shovel staff could take on any more for as much as a dollar a day.

It was not easy to keep body and soul together, with the cards stacked against you.

Once on the national highway in a central state Joe approached a roadside gas station and lunch stand just about dusk. He had pulled out of the city behind him early in the afternoon; it was an important city, and the dusk was a grayness streaked with the streaming light of incessant traffic, cars that whirled upon one blindly and were gone in a blow of wind and fumes and humming tires on concrete.

The city had been cold to him; it did not matter. No place mattered. The country was cold to a man too, but a man could try. Rebuffs did not matter; they bounced off and a man went on.

Joe braaced the restaurant keeper for something to eat. It was a woman, an elderly woman, gray-haired and busy and thin, with the look of one who has raised her children and seen them go, and now bides her time with her patient husband. They were farming people; they ran the stand and the station between tending the fields and the stock.

JOE stood in the doorway of the tiny shack housing the restaurant and spoke his ritual, and he was surprised at its reception. The woman straightened up from the stove, the old pot-bellied stove on which was lavished for mere heat lengths of beautiful native oak and hickory. She looked at Joe quickly, almost guiltily in all seeming, and she told him to come in, to sit down, near the heat, to wait and she'd find something for him.

Joe sat down. He was oddly embarrassed. More oddly, the woman seemed embarrassed. She was brusque, slashing around the little place, talking about the weather and poor conditions, rattling dishes. There was a feeling in the room . . . a curious feeling like a presence that you could not place.

"There!" the old woman told him, plumping down a deep dish of stew savory and full of nourishment. "I guess you can make out on that."

"I guess I can," said Joe in a certain tone. "I'm mighty grateful."

She made an indefinite sound, and he fell to eating without delay. She sat down in a rocking chair near the fire and watched him. He looked at her once or twice, and was again embarrassed. She watched him eat. There was something, and he did not know what it was.

"I suppose you have a lot of fellows asking for a meal?" Joe said by way both of appreciation and conversation.

"Fellows?" she said, and her breath kind of caught. "Yes. And girls too." Her eyes looked away and she stared at the glowing stove with a certain bleakness. "They're always coming, and I've fed so many of them. I can't feed them all. It ain't humanly possible. They come and I turn them away. I harden my heart and I turn them away."

Joe looked at her, wondering. She got up without saying anything more and went into the other room to her cook stove, where she shook down the fire vigorously and put on coal and shoveled ashes.

He sat there in the warmth, thinking, watching the gray mist.

The old woman came back presently and asked him if he'd have more, but he said no, he'd had plenty and was grateful. She gave him a sack of tobacco and cigaret papers, and she smiled. He thanked her, wishing he could say something more. Then he went on. He saw her watching him from the window as he went up the road.

He went on, alone.

"OUT OUR WAY" - By Williams

BY HARRY GRAYSON
 Sports Editor, NEA Service

FLOYD MARION ROBERTS, winner of the Indianapolis 500-mile race, may not be the greatest automobile racing driver who ever climbed into a tin lizzie, but nobody ever will outgame the one-time North Dakota farmer.

It was only two years ago come July that a couple of cars ran completely over the one in which Roberts was riding through a thick cloud of dust on a dirt track in Reading, Pa.

They gave Roberts up for dead. The wreck cracked a vertebra in his back, broke a leg and six ribs, among other things. Certainly, the round and ruddy-faced chap would never drive again.

But Roberts walked out of the hospital on crutches within two weeks and schemed about greater things on the roaring road during the eight months which he convalesced.

"I love this game," he beams. "I'd drive for nothing. I actually did for the better part of 22 years, as a matter of fact. The Indianapolis race has just given me my first important money in the business."

ROBERTS split $40,000 with Lou Moore for when he drove, in coming down in front on the Hoosier bricks. He hopes to make $100,000 one way or another before he is finished. There are endorsements, retainers from accessory companies, and such.

But to get back to Roberts' courage on the racing strips: Just previous to the crack-up in Reading, a rock broke his goggles and lodged glass in one eye early in a race at Ross Speedway, Chicago. It was under such a handicap that Roberts pulled Rex Mays to such an extent that the Indianapolis driver lapped the field twice in a 50-mile race. They staged a blacked finish.

big bone in his arm while ing in a bicycle race for eight days before the Indianapolis. He kept the paint on to himself, had the arm braces with leather, and the miles before he was flagged in 13th place.

While born and raised farm, Roberts came into naturally. His father was and gas engineer and and Floyd learned about as a child.

Floyd raced neighborhood bicycles as a kid, and the race motorcycles at North country fairs at the age of 12. Roberts first dreamed of dianapolis conquest when graded to southern California in 1920.

HE built his own car in 1934 was runner-up in Mays for the West Coast championship.

Roberts was considered track hick when he first Indianapolis in 1935, but 15 laps of practice he 118,673 for 25 miles in gas and sat in the front row in race in which he finished seventh in 1936, and was placed when forced out of by lack of gas. The he limited to 37 1/2 gallons.

It was after that race the Mays, the only three-time of the event, remarked, gentlemen, I've won one an economy run. I'd like back and win one more.

Roberts, who is 38, in 117.20 miles an hour in new record, drove a job which he says he had stepped up to 123 miles the dirt track product credited to his glorious 500,000 and 575,000.

clare in Zion the work of the Lord our God . . . He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and ath stretched out the heavy by His understanding" (Jeremiah 51:10, 15).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is but one creator and one creation. This creation consists of the unfolding of spiritual ideas and their identities, which are embraced in the infinite Mind and forever reflected" (page 502).

Vacation Camps Set In Forests

By United Press
 COLUMBUS, Ohio. — Development of model vacation camps in national forests to furnish low-cost vacations to low-income families was envisioned here by Leslie S. Bean, Milwaukee, assistant chief forester for the Great Lakes states.

Bean and two assistants spent 10 days in southeastern Ohio surveying potential camp sites in Ohio's newly created Wayne National Forest, authorized in 1935.

The model camps, complete with cabins, assembly and dining halls, recreational facilities and adjacent lakes and streams, would relieve the tension of "the machine age" for thousands of workers, Bean said.

Help for Low-Salaried

"A person earning $14 or $16 a week who is lucky enough to get time off for a vacation usually lacks the money to do anything in the way of a real vacation," he explained.

"The forest service would like to help these people enjoy real vacations in forest camps, which would accommodate them in groups such as labor unions, churches, and scouting units. On an organization basis, the cost would be nominal," he added.

Such "organization" camps are being opened this summer in northern Wisconsin and Michigan, he said.

Bean sees the camps as a factor in bettering labor relations between employer and employe. He said the "bosses and workers of an entire store or factory" could move into the camps for a week-end or week or longer and enjoy vacation pleasures.

Dam Being Built

In Ohio, the forest service, aided by Civilian Conservation Corps labor, will have completed by next fall a $120,000 concrete-earth dam on Storms Creek, 12 miles north of Ironton and the Ohio River.

The dam, to be known as Vesuvius dam after a 19th century iron smelting furnace at that site, eventually will back up a lake two miles in length. Around the lake, plans call for construction of a

WHEN summer doldrums threaten your party, make fudge. A pitcher of iced tart lemonade and a platter of smooth fudge, is a combination certain to make even the fireflies feel happier. For a safe and sane fudge party you might try this new method.

Butterscotch Fudge
 (1 1/4 pounds)

One package butterscotch arrowroot pudding, 2 cups sugar, 2-3 cup milk, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla extract.

Put butterscotch pudding, sugar and milk into sauce pan. Cook until mixture reaches 234 degrees F., or forms a medium ball in cold water. Stir occasionally while cooking to prevent sticking.

Remove from fire. Cool until lukewarm. Add butter and vanilla. Beat until creamy and thick. Pour into buttered pan. Cut into squares. One-half cup chopped nuts may be added before beating.

If you like chocolate better, then try this one.

Chocolate Fudge
 (1 1/8 pounds)

One package chocolate arrowroot pudding, 1 1/2 cups sugar, 2-3 cup milk, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla extract.

Put chocolate pudding, sugar and milk into a sauce pan. Cook until mixture reaches 234 degrees F., or forms a medium ball in cold water. Stir occasionally while cooking to prevent sticking.

On a "simply divine" maybe this is the answer.

Divinity Fudge
 (1 1/4 pounds)

Two cups granulated teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup syrup, 1-2 cup water, 2 1/2-3 cup broken walnut, teaspoon vanilla extract, spoon almond extract.

Boil sugar, salt, corn water together until syrup a hard ball in cold water.

Remove from heat and minutes. Then pour slowly stiffly beaten egg whites constantly. Continue beat until mixture looks dull and stiff enough to hold its shape when dropped from a spoon. Add cup nut meats, vanilla. Pour into well-greased (6 by 10 inches). Cut into squares. Decorate each piece with walnut.
