Eastland Citizens Get Absolutely Pure Water

CHEMIST SAYS FAUCET WATER ENTIRELY SAFE

Only Taste Means Nothing Soon Will Disappear. Analysis Shows Purity Of Water.

Eastland Lake water as supplied to water consumers in the city through the water mains is pure and wholesome, and the taste of wood that has been noticed in the last week or so is nothing to do with its purity, according to Helman Rosenthal, director of the Dallas laboratories. Eastland's consultant chemist, Rosenthal specializes in the analysis and treatment of water for municipal and industrial uses and has been employed by the City of Eastland for several years to make monthly analyses of water taken from Lake Eastland and from the water mains in several parts of the city. The report on the water analysis, whatever recommendations seem necessary. Under date August 16, Mr. Rosenthal made the following report:

O. H. Tatum, City Manager, Eastland, Texas:

My recent visit to Eastland, and that the water is developed a rather woody taste as a peculiar turbid appearance. I made certain changes in the treatment of the water which clear up the water considerably after the treatment of lake with the copper sulfate. The taste will disappear in three or four days. I can assure the citizenship of Eastland that the water is absolutely pure, and no one need have any fear of using the water that comes from the faucet. While the raw water is badly colored, the tap water is considerably better than the Government standard for pure water. I am herewith enclosing copy analysis of samples of the water and you may readily see while the raw water contains 9,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter and confirms B.C.O. (faecal organisms) in the settled water contains only 20 bacteria per centimeter, and no Coli organism. I will give this letter publicity because of the fact that people usually feel hesitant in drinking water that tastes bad. Very sincerely yours,

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST WIDOW IS ALLEGED

Gas Company At Gorman Is Sued By Mrs. W. C. Roy Who Asks $10,000 Damages.

Suit was filed today in the 88th district court by Mrs. W. C. Roy of Gorman against the Central Texas Natural Gas Company, having its headquarters in Gorman, and W. C. Calvert of Independence, Kansas, stockholder in and president of the company, for service, the plaintiff asking damages in the sum of $10,000, for alleged injury to health, feelings and comfort, and an additional $5 for actual money loss. The plaintiff alleges that she rented a house in Gorman and application to have gas supplied for her heating and cooking, at a cost of 40 cents per 1,000 feet, signing the application and making a deposit of $5 and being promised the gas would be turned on at once. It was not turned on, this being in March, 1927, the plaintiff and her three minor children suffered severely from the cold and neighbors were aroused to sympathy and arranged to have them cared for at a nearby hotel. Upon protesting at the office the plaintiff says she was told by Monty Williams, the manager, that the company was now caring for all the widows it could take care of and must have some additional assurance from her that the gas bill would be paid before the gas was turned on.

After several days this additional assurance of payment was arranged and the plaintiff obtained the gas she desired, but the allegations complain of a discrimination against widows being made by the defendant company, said to be a joint stock association, and that the defendant was "unhurt and unfair towards plaintiff who had become a widow without any cause of her own."

Gruesome Murder of "Flaming Torch" Girl Is Charged

By United Press.
NACOGDOCHES, Aug. 17.—Three sets of tracks led to the woods from which Bertha Mae Spencer, 26, fled a flaming torch on August 7, Ranger Glover charged today. Scuffling at a theory of suicide, Glover reviewed the clues which he believes point to a gruesome murder. An autopsy conducted by Dr. A. A. Nelson at the request of county attorney Albert Thomas revealed that although almost every square inch of the girl's body was burned to a crisp her face was untouched by the flames. Glover believed Bertha Mae's face and neck were covered with some sort of a cloth used in a preliminary attempt at strangulation. A half empty can of kerosene found near the place where the girl's clothing became ignited strengthened this theory. Strips of clothing which dropped from the girl's body were saturated with oil.

Death Of Veteran Southern Editor Recalls His Courageous Act Which Discredited Duelling In Dixie Land

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. Capt. William Rule, for more than fifty years editor of the Knoxville Journal, died here July 26 following an operation for appendicitis. Capt. William Rule, a Republican and former officer in the Union army, who for more than half a century edited a newspaper in the Democratic South, first attracted nation-wide attention in 1873, when he refused to fight a duel, characterizing such a method of settling disputes as "heathenish" and "cowardly."

Shortly after his newspaper had published a criticism of two institutions of which, Maj. Moses J. Wicks of Memphis was the head, Captain Rule received an order to retract his statements. This he refused to do, but advised the major the columns of his paper were open to any statement Wicks might care to make. Whereupon Major Wicks wrote Captain Rule, asking him to meet him at Dalton, Ga. Instead of doing this, the editor on the date named in the note for the meeting published in his paper a letter he had sent to the major. This step generally is believed to have had a great influence in discrediting duelling in the South.

"With such an affair I refuse to have any connection," he wrote. "I recognize no heathenish so-called code of honor. I am opposed to duelling for the reason that it is contrary to the spirit of the enlightened age in which we live. I am opposed to it because it is contrary to the laws of my country, the law of humanity, and the law of God."

"You might take my life or I might take yours, and yet not a single feature of the publication complained of would be changed by the results. If that publication were false, it would be false still; if it were true, it would remain true; hence nothing could be gained by either of us losing his life in the manner proposed. "I do not purpose to leave the country, but will continue to pursue my legitimate business, going wherever and whenever that business calls me. While I do not recognize the so-called code of honor, I wish you to distinctly understand that I recognize the right of self-defense. I do not court, but on the contrary avoid,

HIGH WATERS THREATEN LIFE AND PROPERTY

Georgia and North Carolina Report Losses Touching Million Dollars and Several Lives.

By United Press.
ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 17.—Precarious condition was reported through several sections of Georgia and North Carolina today as flood-swollen rivers swept over their banks and pounded against already weakened dams. Already the midsummer storm, including both rain and wind, has resulted in a death list of three and property damage of more than $1,000,000 in the two states. Numerous small communities were isolated by high waters and there was some suffering.

North Carolina seemed suffering worse from high waters today. A tornado struck Hoke county late yesterday causing one death and 18 injuries. Property was badly damaged. Street car service was disrupted in Asheville, while smaller cities around the popular resort were in danger from high water. Three streams running bank-high are threatening residences in the low section and the people were abandoning their homes as the high water was getting closer.

GOLFERS OF EASTLAND TO BE THE HOSTS

All West Texas Invited To Engage In Golf Play Here. Thirteen Costly Prizes Offered.

Members of the thirty-five clubs in the West Texas Golf Association have been asked to send their representative golfers to participate in an international golf tournament which is to be held in Eastland on the links of the Eastland Golf and Country Club on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, September 1, 2 and 3, the concluding day being Labor Day, consequently a holiday. It is expected that upwards of one hundred golfers will be here to engage in the tournament.

An enthusiastic meeting of the club's governing board was held this morning in the roof garden of the Connelley Hotel, and arrangements for the golf tournament were agreed to with unanimity.

Getting the Money
It was agreed to finance it in several ways, for the prizes, thirteen in all and perhaps a few extra, are likely to be costly and therefore much to be desired and striven for. The three finance spouts will be:

An assessment of $5 against each member of the Eastland Gold and Country Club.
Requests to the merchants of Eastland to offer prizes.
Registration fee of $2 to be paid by each person engaging in the tournament, whether belonging to the Eastland club or coming from outside. This $2 fee will also entitle to one seat at the club banquet to be served the evening of Saturday, September 1, in the Connelley Hotel roof garden.

Committees Named
Vice-President Walter Clark today named the following committees:

General tournament committee—E. E. Freysehlag, chairman; H. H. Porter, W. G. Doughtie, W. K. Hoyer.
Program and invitations—Dan E. Garrett, chairman; A. H. Johnson, Calcutta Auction—Frank H. Weaver, chairman; Guy Parker, Ed W. Owen, Blair Lewis, Curtis Hertig, Lonnie King and Allen Key.

Prizes—John Knox, Jr., chairman; Stanley Bird.
Hospitality—J. M. Knox, Sr., chairman; W. T. Garrett, J. E. Lewis, William H. Taylor, John M. Turner.

List of Prizes
Prizes will be given in each of four flights, in each of which sixteen players will qualify. All Eastland players will be required to play their qualifying rounds of 18 holes previous to the opening of the tournament on September 1, probably one or two days prior to that. This action is deemed necessary to avoid congestion of the nine-hole course during the day assigned for qualifying play, the first day of the tournament. Prizes will be given to the following:

First, low medalist; second and third, the winner and runner up in the championship flight; fourth and fifth, winner and runner up in the second flight; sixth and seventh, winner and runner up in the third flight; eighth and ninth, winner and runner up in the fourth flight; tenth, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth, winners in consolation play in each of the four flights. This makes thirteen prizes.

Many golfers are expected to enter the tournament coming from Ranger, Cisco, Breckenridge, Gorman, Abilene and Stephenville. Several Eastland golfers participated in the golf tournament at Stephenville early this week and received assurance from players there that Stephenville, Dublin and DeLeon would be well represented at the Eastland tournament.

MCCORMICK FAMILY
LEAVES EASTLAND
 Mrs. Clara McCormick and daughter, Miss Margaret McCormick, left for Breckenridge, Wednesday, taking with them all their household furnishings in several big trucks, provided by the company for which Mr. McCormick is drilling on the Kinnebrew, near Breckenridge, to assist in transporting their effects.

For some time it has been difficult for Mr. McCormick to leave his work to return to his family, on account of the distance, and it was finally decided to make the move, until school opens in September, at least. At that time, if Mr. McCormick is still located on the Kinnebrew lease the family will remain permanently. Should some change occur they will return in order that Margaret may enter the Eastland high school.

Eastland regrets losing these pleasant people even for a brief period. Mrs. McCormick for several years has held many responsible posts as an officer in the Order of the Eastern Star, member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board, Secretary of the South Ward Parent-Teacher Association, teacher in the Methodist Sunday school, and lay member of the Methodist Church. CHANGES MAY BRING BREAD FROM SUNBEAM

Hired Man Passing Along With Horses As Synthetic Foods Release Workers.

A generation or so ago a farm without a hired man might have seemed anomalous. This personage, or the farmer himself, was in the field in season, from the dew of the morning to the dew of the evening, familiar alike with the sweet smell of early turned soil and the ardent heat of midday sun. Before or after field hours, he might milk the cows, water the stock, be boarder or handy man around the farmhouse kitchen. On Saturday evenings or on Sundays he was perhaps free to take the horse and buggy and his best friend to the village and to church. Came harvest days, and the hired man was among those present at the "husing bee," the county fair, and the spelling match. He was an institution, included in the connotations of the word farm.

With modern evolutionary processes, however, all this is being changed. Indeed, having advanced through the stages of man, horse and hand plow, man, team and sulky plow, man and tractor plow, it seems as if the hired man may at last disappear before the latest invention, the driverless tractor. This automatically piloted tractor, recently tested in the University of Nebraska College of Agriculture, may be started early in the morning and will follow the furrows all day long, and all night long, for that matter, without the help of a hired man. It will negotiate the bends in the furrows, so it is said; with a little extra attachment it will work in the wheat fields or in the rice fields, taking the little gullies or the ridges with perfect complacency.

Those who would seek out what is to become of the hired man might conclude that there is still plenty of work for him to do. He may do the chores, milk the cows, and take the milk to town, preparing for this expedition, not by seeking up the "bisy" and the buckboard, or the team and the Never eat when overheated or very tired, and above all eat regularly. If not hungry at meal time eat sparingly rather than wait and eat "between meals." The stomach should be accustomed to receive food at regular intervals since this encourages proper digestion.

Days of Great Flying Reptiles Repictured By Fossil Discovery At One-Time Shore of Cretaceous Sea

EUGENE, Ore.—With man's conquest of the air now holding the center of public attention, special interest is attached to the discovery of an odd-shaped, fossilized bone near Mitchell, Ore., which is reminding natural scientists of an earlier and seemingly less successful attempt to invade the realm of the birds.

Not men, but reptiles, engaged in these early flying enterprises, and developed, not machines, but long, membranous wings with which to propel themselves in the air. But despite the seeming power of these wings, which in some types reached a spread of as much as 20 feet, the flying reptiles, or pterosaur, faded out of the picture. All that is left to remind men of such creatures are a few fossilized remains, such as that found by Dr. E. L. Packard, professor of geology at the University of Oregon, while on an investigation in Wheeler county last summer.

certain differences in bone structure another. The pterosaur, or flying dragon, as they are sometimes called, were able to fly many miles, Dr. Packard believes. While this is the only specimen of this particular type found by Dr. Packard, thousands of specimens giving evidences of the encroachments of the sea into what is now inland on the Pacific coast have been discovered. These include ammonites, clams, snails, and other fossils. It was on the shore of this sea that Dr. Packard discovered the fossilized bone of the pterosaur. Similarly, waters covered the great inland basin east of the Rocky Mountains, and on its shores, particularly in Wyoming and Oklahoma, other remains of the pterosaur have been found, but in all there are very few in North America.

Danger of Common Drinking Cup Is Shown by Doctor

WASHINGTON, D. C.—With the approach of school days, individuals and organizations working for the promotion and protection of public health are urging school authorities to watchfulness as regards drinking supplies and drinking vessels. They are calling attention to the menace of water-borne diseases and are stressing particularly the danger of transmitting communicable diseases by the common drinking cup or the use of vessels that have not been sterilized.

"We must see to it that the common drinking cup is put out of existence," declares Dr. Royal S. Copeland, United States Senator and former Health Commissioner for New York City. "No better thing could come to any school-house than to have the sale of carbonated beverages in it, or nearby, so the children could get what everybody knows is a clean drink free from the danger of contamination."

Dr. Copeland also points out that many ailments are due to lack of proper fluid intake and that bottled carbonated beverages supply this deficiency in a safe and pleasurable manner. "All carbonated beverages," he said, "have a sharp taste, agreeable and stimulating. Added to the drink carbonic gas has a beneficial effect upon the mixture. It appears capable of preventing the development of harmful germs."

LINCOLN LETTER FOUND IN TRASH PILE IN GEORGIA

Was Written to Governor of Louisiana On March 13, 1864

ATLANTA, Ga.—A letter, yellowed with age, believed to have been written by Abraham Lincoln when he was president, has been found in a trash pile in the rear of a restaurant here. The letter, signed, "A. Lincoln" was found by Tubby Walton and O. P. Walton, owner of the restaurant. It congratulated Michael Hahn on his election as first governor of Louisiana after the Civil War.

The letter was dated, March 13, 1864 and was written on official stationery, headed "Executive Man sion." The letter read: "I congratulate you on having secured your name in history as the first free state governor of Louisiana. Now you are about to have a convention, which, among other things will probably define the elective franchise. I barely suggest for your private consideration, whether some of the colored people may not be let in as, for instance, the very intelligent and especially those who have fought in our gallant ranks. They would probably help, in some trying time to come, to keep the jewel of liberty with the family of freedom. But this is only a suggestion, not to the public, but to you alone. Yours truly, "A. Lincoln."

Students Learn That Gentlemen Don't Get Drunk

IOWA CITY, Ia.—A changed mental attitude, which has brought university students to the realization that "gentlemen don't get drunk," is the outstanding effect of prohibition noted on the University of Iowa campus by Robert E. Rienow, dean of men for the last five years.

Dean Rienow, who was dean of men for five years before the advent of prohibition, recalls the period before the saloons were outlawed, when it was considered a collegiate accomplishment to be able to drink large quantities of liquor. "Boys would stop in at any one of the many Iowa City saloons for a mug of beer after class," he relates. "Then many would return to the saloon after dinner and finally stagger home night after night in a half-drunken condition."

"We could not argue successfully that they should not drink any more than we could prevent them from using any other commodity that was on the market. To get drunk was not only 'collegiate' but perfectly legitimate." Now, despite some bootlegging, the problem of drinking is almost solved on the University of Iowa campus, Dean Rienow believes. "So long as we keep liquor in its present position of disrepute," he says, "the enforcement problem will solve itself—as it is slowly but surely doing."

Dean Rienow employs the honor system with resultant student responsibility and each year sees an appreciable decrease in drinking. In the Quadrangle, men's dormitory, a student council handles the problem without administrative intervention, with the result that drinking is practically unknown among the 700 students housed there.

Professional and economic rather than moral reasons are the chief arguments used by the Iowa dean in building up the attitude of temperance on the campus. "More than ever before students are coming to college to 'better their economic status,'" he declares. "It is constantly becoming easier to convince them that habits formed in college will determine their success in life."

The material effects of prohibition are shown on the campus in a continually higher level of grades, according to Dean Rienow.

Thirty billion cups of tea are consumed each year in America. How'd you like to be the iceman?

Far Shores

By Jan Isabelle Fortune. I shall walk out again some dusk Along the silver sands, And breathe the sandalwood and musk That comes from other lands, Blown by the whipping trade-winds far

From where some blue night sky Yields up its beauty star by star, And strutting peacocks cry.

(Deep in the aching heart of me I crave a storm-swept shore On some wild typhoon-tumbled sea That leads to Singapore.)

My garden plot is cool and still, And through the afternoon The droning bees all sip their fill In fragrant rose-drunk sown; My neighbors gossip in the sun; A kitten on the grass Plays with the daisies one by one, That move as light winds pass.

Here is a safe and quiet peace Along a calm sea-rim; (Why should my heart cry for release When evening shadows dim?) Somewhere along my dreaming street

I hear a whistle call; This dusk is white and still and sweet . . . But as the shadows fall, Some ancient aching part of me Throbs for a storm-swept shore Along a typhoon-tumbled sea That leads to Singapore.

I LOVE FOR TWO

By RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 By NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

BERTIE LOU WARD, on the eve of her wedding to HODNEY BAKER, feels troubled at receiving a dagger-like paper knife from LILA HARRIS, an ex-girlfriend of Rod's. She resolves not to be jealous, but a second blow to her pride comes when she notices that the knife is a gift from her bridegroom's ex-girlfriend. She is shocked and angry, but she knows that Rod likes her. She must keep her feelings hidden.

The pain in her heart vanishes when Rod tells her how much he loves her. They spend an ideal honeymoon and Bertie Lou forgets about Lila until they return and find her playing divo in their apartment because she "knows what Rod likes."

You must have a good impression of the wedding in the new home aspects their financial budget. This worries Bertie Lou as she sees the pretentious manners of Lila. So she is happy when Rod accepts a position in New York with TOM FRASER.

Anxious to make a good impression, they go to an expensive hotel until they can find an apartment. The cost of these dresses and charges is against Rod's wishes. Lila arrives in time for the affair and Molly Fraser arranges to throw Rod and Lila together as much as possible. The night club party lasts till dawn and Rod is left with a check for more than $100 and he has only $70 with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Rod fumbled with the piece of paper with its distressing figures, reached uncertainly for his billfold, and then withdrew his hand from his inside coat pocket, empty.

CHAPTER XV

BERTIE LOU could not see the check as it lay before Rod but she knew that something was wrong, of course. Rod fumbled with the piece of paper with its distressing figures, but it didn't reach him. He reached for his billfold, and then withdrew his hand from his inside coat pocket, empty.

Molly chirped impatiently: "Well, aren't we ever going to leave?"

Something had to be done about it. Plainly, Rod hadn't yet formulated an idea. "What's the matter?" Bertie Lou said, and leaned over the table to reach for the check which he had dropped. He tried to stop her from her purpose but she had it.

One quick glance at its terrifying contents and she laughed, a rippling little expression of consternation. "Oh dear," she said, "I forgot to give you the money I got from the bank today, didn't I? I'm sorry, honey, because now you'll have to ask Tom to lend you some."

Mr. Loree tore his gaze away from Lila's pretty, eager countenance and looked across at Bertie Lou. Her voice had been distinct. "Let me in on this," she pleaded. "I'd rather like to make it my part, if you don't mind. Enjoyed it immensely."

Tom was half awake now. "Non sense," he mumbled, hardly knowing what it was all about. "No, indeed," Rod refused. "I'm obliged to make a loan, however. It seems we left the money on the piano." He laughed. "Let me have a fifty, Tom."

Tom dug out the amount and added five for half the tip. "Leave ten," he suggested, half fearing that Rod would probably underestimate the importance of generously satisfying the waiter.

Chances were he wouldn't know the amount expected to make him contented. As a matter of fact

$10 was the minimum for a hundred plus check. Surprisingly Tom took care of the captain. Rod might never come again but he was sure he would. Liked the place. And good tables weren't to be held for "tightwads."

BERTIE LOU was pleased when they reached the street to learn that Mr. Loree had his car there and would drive Lila home. There was room for two more, he said, looking questioningly at them. Molly jumped at the chance. The car was a sumptuous cabriolet, an odd car for a man's use. Its rear seat would accommodate two and there were two drop seats.

Bertie Lou was perfectly willing to go home alone with Rod in a taxi. As a matter of fact she had been growing about in her mind the last five minutes for a plausible reason to avoid going to the Fraser apartment. Tom had said something about bacon and eggs but the thought of food sickened her.

Lila could have choked Molly for her impetuous acceptance of Mr. Loree's courtesy. At least she might have had sense enough to realize that he offered them room in his car merely as a gesture born of good breeding, she thought angrily.

As Loree's car drove off and Rod turned to look for a taxi, Bertie Lou's mask of sociability fell off. She hadn't approved of the party in the first place. Rod was well aware of that even if she hadn't said much about it. And he'd been sorry he got into it the instant Molly had asked him to postpone it until Lila's arrival.

But hang it all, how was a fellow to know what these night clubs were like! At the most he'd thought $30 or $40 would be plenty.

He was beginning to realize what entertainment in New York cost. He had been in to laugh at stories he had heard of night club prices and had set them down as humor, akin to mother-in-law jokes and stories of rolling-pin throwing wives. He never really believed that it cost as much to entertain in a New York night club as it was reputed to cost—any more than he had believed that mothers-in-law

"I MIGHT have found some entertainment to fit a bookkeeper's income," Bertie Lou returned. It was the first biting reference to Rod's position that she'd ever made. It stirred him to a touch of anger again.

"I don't know that I can't afford a real party once in a lifetime," he replied warmly. "And it won't cost you anything. Go ahead and charge everything you want to."

He was stung because she called him a bookkeeper when he felt very proud of having reached the dignity of an accountant's estate. The Wayville place had carried quite a story about it. A whole column on the front page. It had made Rod feel like a general, to say the least, in the battlefield of business. And now Bertie Lou spoke of him as a bookkeeper.

"Oh, you're just trying to make me feel extravagant and selfish to smoke-screen your own wild spending," she flamed back at him. "And I haven't done anything more than buy a dress I could have got along without if you hadn't tried to make Rockefeller look like a top-house bum."

"For Pete's sake don't be a harridan and stick forever to one idea," Rod begged. "I've told you I didn't know what a snucker I was making out of myself when I sprang that night club racket. Can't you add it up to experience and call it a day?"

Bertie Lou closed her lips in resentful silence. It was certainly unfair of Rod to try to make her appear as a nagging fault finder when she really had something to complain about, she thought bitterly.

And that "It won't cost you anything" smarted her sensitive pride. It was a reminder that Rod's money was his own. And Bertie Lou had nourished the thought that their marriage would be one of those fifty-fifty affairs in every way.

SHE drew away from him and sat stiffly upright in the far corner of the cab. It was the first time since their marriage that Rod had said anything to hurt her. Hurt her, that is, in the way you are hurt when a cherished illusion is suddenly destroyed. Bertie Lou had not believed she never would quarrel with Rod, but she had hoped they could at least postpone the inevitable for a long time.

And here they were, just a few months after their wedding day, the minister's words still fresh in their memories, saying bitter things to each other. The sensation that came to Bertie Lou was new to her. Her throat became tight and painful and a strange feeling as of a warm flood released in the region of her heart caused her real physical anguish. It was as though her heart had burst. Perhaps she was going to die of heart trouble!

It would serve Rod right. After she'd got him out of a pretty mess, too. Scared to death because he hadn't enough money to pay that check. His ingratitude bit deep and ached into Bertie Lou's soul. But the thing that went deeper still was Rod's going to sleep on their quarrel. Actually falling asleep, while Bertie Lou blinked her eyes fast in the dark and wondered if he really loved her after all. Lila had been stunning, as usual. Even dazzling in orange velvet and rhinestone-covered slippers. And Rod had enjoyed dancing with her. Anyone could see that.

About 800 attended and they cheered every speaker frequently.

"Among the speakers were Judge Tom Ridgell of this city, who was appointed judge of the Civil Court of Appeals at Eastland when Mrs. Miriam Ferguson was governor; Mark McGee of Fort Worth, who was appointed Adjutant General in the Ferguson administration; Mayor C. H. Clarke, H. A. Leaverton, C. O. Mackey and Ben J. Denn. The latter three are Breckenridge citizens, Leaverton and Mackey having formerly been prominently connected with the clan, while Denn was a leading advocate for Alvin Owsley, candidate eliminated in the first senatorial primary."

Sports Matter

By HARRY FERGUSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

Stars continue to revolve around Connie Mack, veteran manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

With the exception of John McGraw, who leads the New York Giants, no manager in the major league has had so many outstanding ball players on his payroll as Mack.

He started back in the days when winning pennants was his habit. Then he had Eddie Collins who for years was king of the second basemen, and who is now back with the Athletics in the capacity of pinch hitter and coach. Mack also had that slugging third baseman who became a national figure—Home Run Baker.

Then came the time when Mack suffered four straight defeats in the World Series at the hands of the Boston Braves. That caused the Philadelphia manager to break up his brilliant team and begin a campaign of building from the ground up with youngsters.

Seven Dreary Seasons.

For the seven years between 1914 and 1921 Mack kept on building without success. Seven straight seasons went by with Philadelphia finishing in last place every time. But Mack's place every finally began to tell and the team climbed until in 1925 the Athletics finished third and last year they came in second.

It was in 1925 that Mack partially abandoned his program of developing youngsters and took his checkbook into the marts where baseball talent is sold. He came back with Lefty Grove, for whom he paid $50,000; Mickey Cochrane, the brilliant catcher who cost $30,000; and Paul Strang, $75,000 outfielder who turned out to be the worst Guy of the lot.

Once more Mack had a formidable team. He kept on buying, trading and drafting until today he has a club that threatens to dislodge the powerful New York Yankees from the leadership of the American League.

Zach Wheat, for years had been a fixture in the outfield of the Brooklyn Dodgers, put on a Philadelphia uniform last year, but his aging legs could not carry him through the pennant drive. This Spinker was signed up this year, but he, too, bowed to Father Time. Only the mighty Ty Cobb came through in expected style in 1927, and now he has by Haas, a great hitter and a polished outfielder.

Al Simmons is Mack's brightest star this year. Simmons cost the Athletics plenty of money, but he has been worth every cent of it since Mack taught him a few things about hitting and turned a raw, awkward youngster into one of the most feared batsmen in the major leagues.

The check book is still working at Shibe Park. This year it brought Ossie Orwoll out of the obscurity of the American Association and made him one of the most promising recruits of the season. It also obtained George Earnshaw, Baltimore pitcher, who started out slowly, but who now is proving that Mack is what he is buying.

Lesser lights who have led in Philadelphia are: Hal Hale, Jimmy Fox, Max Baer, Bing Miller, Howard Ehmke, Quinn, Rube Walberg, Sam Joe Boley, Bill Lamar, Baby Jacobson, Lefty Heiman, Harris, Ralph Perkins, Joser and Jimmy Dykes.

Mack has earned his title "maker and seller of stars."

With the CANDIDATES

An open letter, written several days ago by Oscar Callaway, candidate for congress, to his opponent, has just been received by this newspaper and, in part, is as follows:

"Mr. R. Q. Lee, "Cisno, Texas.

"Dear Sir:

"Your letter to me of August 7 stating that you were wondering why and wondering if and wondering whether I wasn't trying to cover up my attitude toward our president, my attitude on prohibition, my attitude on the war, that the Hon. James Wilson defeated me in 1916 and that they sent stenographers to take a speech of mine on the 23rd of August, 1917, received. I have said everywhere and state now that I am proud of my record, and all of it, and have asked you to put your finger on the vote I have cast, on the word I have said, I stand by that record, but I cannot defend what somebody might have said about me in a campaign or what some dark alley affidavit men might swear. That is not my record.

"I asked you to come out in the open like a man, stand upon the platform with both of us present and detail to the electorate of the 17th congressional district how you sold the Cisno & Northern Railway, and how you treated your stockholders, who put their property in your hands and their trust in you by electing you president of that road. I want you to state how much stock you took, the names and amounts of the other stockholders that went into it at the beginning, how long they held it, the date they sold it, the party to whom they sold it, what they got for it and what you got for the 1974 shares that you had picked up and owned at the time you sold it; also what you paid for the 1517 5-10 shares that had been turned over to you as trustee to sell for the other stockholders. Instead of answering that question of your successful presidency of a railroad, you scuttle, you run about over the district in private, you get affidavits that you work up and pay for, you slander Mr. Shanks for supporting me, you maliciously and willfully display an affidavit that I said so and so, at Gorman in 1918 all of which is false.

"You have sense enough to know that I would have been put in the federal penitentiary if I had said the things at Gorman that your slanderous affidavits state. Everybody but you know that Eugene V. Debs was sent to the federal penitentiary for five years for making a statement that the war was a commercial war. They had on the statutes at that time a state espionage act and federal espionage act, that made it criminal for a man to do or say anything in any way whatsoever against the government's activities or the laws of the land.

"Neither you nor your lunch seem to know anything about orderly discussion nor decent arguments, and you have no conception of facts. You, of course couldn't stand up in the open when there is a man present that is going to follow you. Your method is to scatter your scent like the polecat, and beloud the issue like the scuttle fish. I am going to be present tonight at Abilene and ask the crowd to hear me reply to your deluge of 43ty dish water.

"Very truly yours,

"OSCAR CALLAWAY."

(Abilene Reporter)

Thomas L. Blanton, retiring congressman from the 17th district, Wednesday drove a spike into a movement, growing over the district, to write his name on the democratic primary ballot August 25 for re-election.

The idea is simply out of the question, Judge Blanton said, but he intimated that "should the people call me at some future time when I could do so justly," he might consider again making the race for congress. "Not now, however, he said in the following statement:

"Friends from practically every county in the district have advised me that there is an organized movement on foot for voters to write my name on the ballot Saturday week and reelect me to congress.

"I have notified all that I cannot permit this, for it would be manifestly unfair to the candidates who have spent their time and money and made their campaigns with the knowledge that

I was not running for re-election. I cannot be a party to any movement that is unfair and unjust to others. While I greatly appreciate this implied compliment and this great confidence my friends have in me, I must insist that no such action be taken. Should the people call me at some future time when I could do so justly, it might be that I would respond to their wishes. But just now I am happy and thoroughly satisfied to re-enter the practice of law, and will form a partnership with my two sons. I therefore earnestly request all of my good friends to drop this movement, as I cannot agree to it, and for them to use their judgment in wisely choosing between the two high candidates who have lawfully earned their right to exclusive places on the democratic ballot in the run-off primary.

"THOMAS L. BLANTON."

Leaders of all elements were present and expressing loyalty to Tom Connally's candidacy for the United States Senate when he spoke in Breckenridge, says a dispatch.

"BRECKENRIDGE, Aug. 15.—Ferguson appointees and former supporters predominated at a meeting held here Wednesday night in behalf of Tom Connally, running for United States Senator against Senator Earle B. Mayfield. Ferguson recently announced his support for Mayfield, the two having been bitter opponents in the senatorial campaign six years ago, with the clan as the main issue.

"V. L. Shurtleff, formerly an ardent leader of James E. Ferguson in West Texas, presided. The meeting was held on the lawn of the Stephens county courthouse.

Going Back First Time To Alma Mater

ANTONIO, Aug. 16.—As an invited guest of the American National Convention at San Antonio, Texas, on October 8 to 10, Colonel Charles A. Washburn, general convenor, has announced that he has definitely accepted the invitation extended to him by National Commander C. S. Spafford.

Interest attaches to the coming of San Antonio, as it will be his first visit to the city since he graduated from the flying course at Kelly field in March, 1925 and entered Brooks field primary training March 1926. He began his course at Kelly field in September, 1925, and graduated March 14, 1925. He has heard from him since he heard of his appointment to the post of St. Louis.

It is expected to make an interesting spectator at the air circus on the entertainment program. It will see the best of the fliers compete.

Among the visitors and other distinguished guests at the convention, the greatest honor has ever had at a convention, are expected to include and all other kinds of thousands of road maps of the United States, showing all highways, have been prepared by the Standard Oil Company for use of the convention in coming to their convention.

Five thousand special maps have been furnished by the Standard Oil Company, which said, by writing to the department at 2000 N. 10th street, St. Louis, Mo., to each of whom a copy has been sent, or by direct to the American Legion Convention Bureau, 1414 N. 10th street, St. Louis, Mo., Texas.

Whoofus Whiffletree's Woozy Wonderings

Jack Britton, former welterweight champion of the world, who began fighting in 1904, won a 10-round fight the other night in New York City from Tony Vaccaro. The aged warrior out-fought his youthful opponent in almost every round. Britton was a boxer when Paaky McFarland, Battling Nelson, Cyclone Johnny Thompson, Abe Attell, Stanley Ketchel and Jack Johnson were stars of the ring. They have all faded long ago. There have been three heavy-weight champions since Johnson's day. Ketchell was killed years and years ago. Britton was boxing before Jimmy McLarnin, Young Stribling and other stars of today were born.

Inspired by the achievements of Britton, his old rival—Ted (Kid) Lewis, a Britisher, has announced he will return to the ring. Britton and Lewis fought many times. Our recollection is that Lewis won the championship from Britton on a decision and then lost it back to Jack on another decision.

Johnny Risko, who is always upsetting the dope, upset it again in his fight with the big Italian, Robert Roberto. Only this time the dope all favored Risko and the betting was 4 to 1 that he would win. Roberto won the fight on a foul.

Carl Mays, the submarine hurler, has been released by the Cincinnati Reds. He reached his greatest fame with the New York Yankees. His style of delivery was most peculiar. His arm swung almost as low as his ankle and the ball took a rising course in its journey toward the plate. The batters, accustomed to drops, found the delivery baffling. However, after several seasons of success for Mays, the hitters apparently made allowance for the rising flight of the ball and were able to solve his pitching. He then went to the National league where he was reasonably successful for a season or two. In fact he had won four out of six games this year but had been afflicted with neuritis.

Wichita Spudders made it 17 straight on Wednesday and Houston lost again.

Hooks and Slides

No Profit in This
The injury which ruined the throwing arm of Goose Goslin practically wrecked the Washington ball club. The club isn't going any place this year and the prospects for the 1929 race are worse because there seems to be little hope that his arm will be any better next year.

It was quite naturally, a bad break for Clarke Griffith because the whole team was built around the Goose, but American League men hold Griffith to blame for not having taken steps to protect the future of his investment.

"When it became apparent at the very start of the season that Goslin's arm was clear gone, Griffith should have sent him home for the remainder of the year and put him in care of a good doctor. He did send him away twice but brought him right back and kept him in the lineup so continuously that he never had a chance to rest his arm. It would have been better to have finished last this season if he could have had Goslin back cured next year," one of the officials of another American League club said recently.

Homes of Tunney and His Fiancee

It was pointed out that one American League club had two players injured early in the season and the players were sent home for the remainder of the season, although the club was involved for salary checks of more than $500 a week for two players who were useless to the club.

What Of It?
Charley Comiskey, in defending himself for the way Ray Schalk was treated, says that in the last two years Schalk made more money out of the White Sox than the owner did.

It is not of record, however, that Schalk built a new grandstand wing on his domestic establishment or that he made any wild investment like Comiskey did in paying $100,000 for Glisell.

Figuring what Comiskey made during all the time Schalk worked of the most generous manager that ever lived, the "noble Old Roman" certainly can't kick.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—
Bill Gibson won't get in on any of those 50 steel millions. . . . Bill McGowan is rated the best ump in the American League. . . . The others are— not as good. . . . Tommy Murphy, who used to drive winners on the Grand Circuit, is a success as a trainer for Mrs. Whitney's running stable. . . . And he fired a jock a few days ago riding against instructions. . . . The Glants expect to profit 500 grand this season. . . . The American League batters say they never could hit Lefty Grove's fast ball if it didn't come straight down the line. . . . Tex Rickard told an inquirer that Tunney is going walking in Scotland with some bridge builder. . . . Ty Cobb says that two of the Athletics' pitchers are afraid of the Yankees. . . . And an American League manager said that Jimmy Fox is not a great third baseman, but he is game. . . . Sam Rice's name is Edgar Charles.

On the Level.
It might have been good business for Comiskey to have given Schalk the whole ball club and to have accepted as his end what he was paying the manager in salary.

When the New York sports writers were amusing themselves several years ago in speculating about the salary that Babe Ruth should be given on a new contract, it was suggested by one writer the Babe was worth at least $150,000 a year.

Colonel Jake Rupper couldn't see it that way and he said: "I will let Babe have the whole ball club if he will put me on the payroll for $100,000 a year."

sway an unexpectedly large section of the electorate, it becomes obvious that the G. O. P. position is strong. Perhaps the Democrats would have made just as good a record and we would all have had jobs and made just as much money but where is a really cogent argument for a change? It simply must be produced if Smith is to reduce the odds against him. How to convince us that we will, in some way or other, be better off under Democracy?

Two issues, after Hoover's speech, continue to stand out importantly; farm relief and prohibition. On these two issues, each party is divided. On neither can either candidate point to an impressive record. Here again enters the offensive and defensive strategy forced respectively on Democrats and Republicans. Both Smith and Hoover can make promises, but Smith is also in a position to attack.

Promises Enforcement
As for prohibition, Hoover promises honest enforcement; Smith promises to try to obtain modification of the law. On agriculture, both promise better times for the farmers, but it is up to Smith to make the more alluring promises. In both cases, however, Smith is able to attack the opposition party on the basis of its record.

Whether Hoover might consent to some kind of sort of Volstead Act modification is still not quite clear. "Grave abuses have occurred which must be remedied," he said. Whether the removal of abuse in the law's enforcement or abuse of the law through violation may be a point of argument. But the most that any wet can write from his speech is the possibility that Hoover might not object to a more liberal interpretation of "Intoxicating" than is contained in the present half-of-one-per cent limit of alcohol in beverages. There is no nourish-

BRIDGING THE GAP

Between the Gas Fields and Your City—To Serve You!

Lone Star Gas Company

"Bridge-ing" the Gap

What an age we live in! So many things to do—so many places to go. Sometimes you wonder how some women do it. But with natural gas delivered right into the kitchen you can safely sit at the bridge table until a bare half hour before dinner time.

YOU women nowadays enjoy yourselves far more than your mothers did. Pleasant afternoon bridges, matinees, or shopping tours are easily accomplished with all the modern conveniences that you have to help you.

Consider natural gas, for instance.

It's always ready for you to use. To fully appreciate natural gas, just imagine your consternation if you were to walk into your kitchen, turn the handle, and find no gas there! It just simply doesn't happen, does it?

But if it were not for the Lone Star Gas Company, you would not know the marvelous, taken-for-granted service that your local gas company renders. You would have the hardship of handling a more cumbersome and dirty fuel. And much time would be spent in waiting to heat the stove (and incidentally, the whole kitchen), before you could cook.

We've built huge pipe lines that bring clean and economical natural gas to your community. We maintain costly pumping stations so the pressure will never lag. And part of our army of employees is always on the job so that the service shall not fail.

Bridging the gap, as we said it to the men—or "Bridge-ing the Gap," as we have just told you—when we say our service means less work and more leisure for women, you'll know what we mean.

Twin Girl Reporters Get and Write "Twin" News Stories, Signed Jointly

ATLANTA, Ga.—Twin souls with but a single thought. That describes Helen and Olive Parish, twin reporters on the Atlanta Constitution—twins because they were born that way, because they dress that way and because they report that way. Furthermore, when they write a letter which says, "I, etc." they both sign it.

Ben F. Noble, their city editor, wouldn't think of sending the two on separate assignments. The girls write their story together. Helen tells Olive what she thinks and if Olive doesn't like it, and often she doesn't, she tells Helen the correct way of saying it, and vice versa. The net result is a compromise story, signed by both and published under their names.

Helen, or was it Olive?—anyway, one of them recalled their first newspaper story. They were attending Oglethorpe university at that time and jointly wrote a story which found its way to the city desk of a large daily. A man turned it in for them—and landed a job for writing it.

Since that eventful day a year and a half ago, the twins have become fully initiated into the newspaper fraternity.

As newspaper reporters Helen and Olive are in demand. The Kiwanis club must have them one day, the Masonic club the next and so on until the week is filled with special invitations for them and Noble wishes there were four of them instead of two.

The twins have completed a five-year course for an A. B. Oglethorpe university and expect to enter an eastern school for master's work this fall.

Tung-Oil Trees Being Developed As Texas Product

The tung-oil industry has become definitely established in Southern United States. The demand for this product is due to the fact that the production of many types of modern industrial paints and enamels calls for the use of substantial amount of water resisting varnishes. For this purpose, one of the chief raw materials used is tung oil, which is expressed from the nut like seeds of Aleurites forii. The tung oil tree appears to be capable of development as a crop of secondary importance on cheap, well drained, sandy clay soils, where there is an annual rainfall of twenty-five inches or more, and where the temperature does not often go lower than 10 degrees F. Twenty years' trial at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station sub-station No. 2, Troup, has demonstrated that it can be successfully grown in East Texas and possibly also in the Gulf Coast region of Texas. At a later date a more detailed description of the varieties grown at Troup will be published, but this opportunity is taken to call to the attention of those interested in growing the tung-oil tree that seeds and budwood will be distributed over a period of three seasons, 1928-1931. Seeds will be ready for shipment in the fall of 1928, and again the following two seasons. Budwood of two named varieties will be distributed during the seasons 1929-30 and 1930-31: Troup (T. S. No. 11,679). Tree tall, prolific bearer, fruit round. Tans (T. S. No. 11,678). Tree not as tall as Troup variety; fruits pear shaped. A limited amount of seeds, and budwood will be sent to those interested depending upon the supply available each season and the number of applicants. The names of those requesting seeds and budwood will be placed on a register and the material will go forward at the proper season.

PUT NICKEL IN SLOT AND VIEW COLORED TALKING MOVIES NEXT

NEW YORK.—Broadway "movie" patrons may soon be able to drop a nickel in a slot and view colored, talking motion pictures, with the actors moving in a third dimension as if an old-fashioned stereopticon scene. Completion of a process which combines color and voice with the third dimension has just been announced by the Dramagraph Motion Picture Corporation, a new organization of which Van Dyke Hill is president. In addition to achieving the third dimension which motion picture experts have sought for years, the process involves a new method of obtaining color which is no more expensive than black and white. Mr. Hill said. The company, it was added, intends to install miniature projection devices in which the spectator can view a successive number of five-minute "movie" for 5 cents each. The thumb-nail theaters will make their debut in January, Mr. Hill said. DALLAS.—$1,000,000 new hotel under construction at Main and Martin Streets.

Cheaney
We are having some real warm weather around Cheaney. We are gathering in our maize, that is not so good as last year. Corn is also light. Peanuts are looking fine, but there is a worm working on the hay and it may be an injury to the whole crop, for most every patch has lots of worms. Cotton still looks good, but we have some weevils and they are working some. The protracted meeting closed at Cheaney Monday at the water where three were baptized. We understand a Methodist preacher from Kokomo will begin a meeting at Cheaney next Tuesday night, August 21st, and it may last for a few days. Mrs. J. C. Lockhart and children of South Cheaney spent the day Tuesday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Walton of Hunt. The railroad company has promised Cheaney a switch, so we can load our peanuts and other farm products. It will be on Dr. Duffins farm. This will save Cheaney people a long haul. T. W. Howard, wife and son went to Glen Rose last week and report a good time. Mr. Howard said he aims to go again as it is a real nice place and has nice tourist camps and is a real good place to go. Lots of people are going there for their health, he said. The road work north of Cheaney is still on a standstill, as Mr. John Daniels broke his arm Wednesday and Mr. Godley is away on a trip. So they had no driver until Mr. Wordley returns. Dan Browning and his wife and mother, of Commerce, were at Cheaney this week visiting his uncle, R. R. Browning and family. Mr. Browning is moving to Mertzon, as he is superintendent of a 10-teacher school there next term. While at Cheaney they took a good look of the oil field. This is their first trip west of Fort Worth. They said they liked West Texas. Ed Campbell and family of Cross Roads was at Cheaney Sunday attending church and while going home with Mr. and Mrs. James Love for dinner ran against a gate post with his car and had a wreck. His young daughter was hurt and was taken into Ranger for medical aid. She is reported doing fine now. We do wish cars had better eyes so they could see where they are going. We are all glad to see Grandma Walton able to walk again, after a long siege of sickness. Mr. Webster and John Akirs and Ray Cooper were Gorman visitors Wednesday. We are proud to see the road

PERPETUAL BASEBALL PLAYED IN MUSEUM
CHICAGO.—A baseball game is continually in progress in center of a gallery of the Art Institute. Batter up, men on bases, fielders tense, the game goes on, day after day. The players in realistic poses were modeled by children in the Saturday classes of the Art Institute school. The two nines are garbed in suits of striking colors, paint having been added to clay. In the bleachers sit spectators. A cheer leader shouts, for this is a school game. It is appropriately staged in the Children's Museum of the institute.
