A Half-Billion-Dollar Lesson in Rat-Holes

Proposals to settle and finally "pay off" the British World War debt to America are gaining ground in London. They are getting an increasingly attentive ear in the United States.

The Baldwin settlement of 1923 called for payment of $13,520,000,000 in 62 years, but the British war debt has been in default, both as to principal and interest, since 1931. At that time the British attitude was: "We can't pay. Let them whistle for their money. We fought their fight for three years, and spent the money in the States anyway. Uncle Sam is just Uncle Shylock to us." And the American attitude was expressed by the laconic Coolidge crack, "They hired the money, didn't they?"

But today there is a movement in Britain to pay something, to settle the matter for good and all. Why this change of front, all of a sudden?

It is all very clear. In 1931, Britain was not much worried about another war, or the financing of it. Today she is. And American law now forbids any loans to countries which have defaulted. Looking toward an uncertain future, it would be well to have that American matter cleared up so the way would be open to further loans, rather than closed by default on the last ones.

Mexico's derisive jibe, that there were bigger and more powerful countries than she who had defaulted their external loans hit the British in a tender spot. There wasn't any answer, and that is the kind of jibe that hurts.

So now it is proposed that a single lump sum be paid, say a half-billion dollars, and by mutual consent wash up the whole matter.

There is certainly no longer any reason in the die-hard attitude that demands payment down the last cent. It can't be done, and there is some doubt that it would be a good thing if it were done. But that does not mean that just any kind of cash settlement is advantageous, either.

What is it worth to the United States to have this continual reminder around her neck that the financing of wars means default and ruin? It might be worth more than a half-billion dollars when the next war comes along.

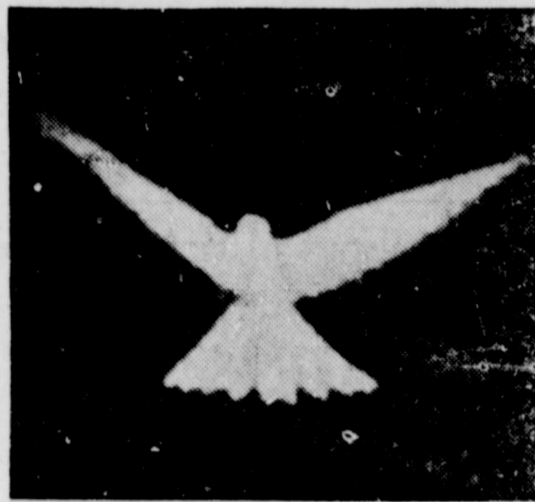

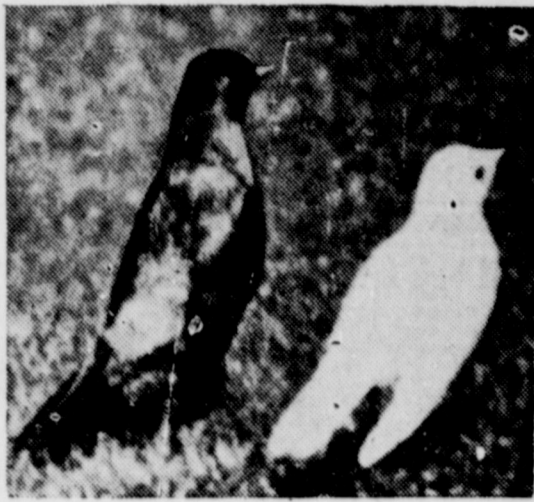

And this is no discredit to the British, who would probably have paid the debt if anybody would. The point is that war debts of this kind are uncollectible from any nation and under any circumstances. It might be worth a half-billion dollars if we could be made to remember that; if we could learn that what is tossed down the rat-hole of war is gone forever.

The Department of Agriculture recommends scarecrows equipped with flash guns, revolving lights, and noise-makers. The experienced farmer, however, foresees the arrival of crows equipped with blinders, reflectors, and ear-muffs.

Found and Photographed at Last—A Perfect Specimen of Albino Robin

A white (albino) robin is a rarity in the world of birds, but pictures of one are even more rare. Here are pictures of a perfect specimen discovered by Albert Dixon Simmons, Cleveland naturalist, the only one he has ever been able to photograph in years of close study of birds.

CAMP BILLY GIBBONS

Troop 34 of Richland Springs will be well represented in camp since a number of boys are depositing their camp fee in the bank under the supervision of the cashier, Assistant Scoutmaster Brown.

Scoutmaster Orville Bradley of Brownwood reports that there will be almost a hundred percent attendance of active Scouts from Troop No. 2 in camp.

The Drum and Bugle Corps composed of Scouts from Dublin troops No. 22 and 24 will be out in full force. They recently took part in the Safety Parade in Fort Worth.

The boys of Troop No. 39, Stephenville, H. V. Collins, Scoutmaster, are working hard to have the best attendance at camp in the history of the troop.

Scoutmaster J. R. Banes, Breckenridge, says that they are also working for a large attendance.

Joe I. Bacon, vocational agriculture teacher and a good Scouter of San Saba will be with the members of Troop No. 36 as their leader this year.

Assistant Scoutmaster Sanders of No. 46, Mullin, was in the office recently to report that his scouts can be counted on for some more good acrobatic stunts during campfire time.

Scoutmaster F. M. Wood, No. 29, Carbon, expects to have Assistant Scoutmaster T. G. Jackson with him and their Scouts this year in camp.

Comanche will be well represented this year according to S. M. Cauley. Members of Troop No. 5 with their Scoutmaster, A. R. Hochhalter will work out some good camp photography.

All Scouts who want to pass swimming and Life Saving Merit Badges, also Junior and Senior Red Cross work will have an excellent opportunity to do so under the instruction of waterfront man, Scoutmaster "Toots" Gilliam.

Notice: We are in the market for some donkeys to be used in camp. We want the kind that will not go on a sit down strike. Get in touch with the Scout office if you can give us any information about same.

Committee Named To Draft Program Of Cotton Research

WACO, Texas, June 23.—Burrus C. Jackson of Hillsboro, chairman of the statewide cotton committee of Texas and president of the Texas Cotton association announced here today that a subcommittee would be appointed to draft a suggested program of work to be followed by a cotton research laboratory to be established by the federal government in some southern state, and which Texas is trying to get.

A group of influential Texans recently made a trip to Washington, headed by Mr. Jackson, to present the claims of Texas, and the officials of the Department of Agriculture requested the Texas committee to prepare a program of the possible scope of work for

Stevenson Visits Here on Tour In His Campaign

Coke Stevenson, of Junction, twice Speaker of the House of Representatives and now a candidate for lieutenant governor, was a visitor here today, meeting the voters of this section of the country.

During the day Stevenson was in Ranger, Eastland and Cisco, stopping at Cisco for a meeting of the Rotary club.

Stevenson has an unparalleled record as a presiding officer, which position he will fill if elected lieutenant governor, because he presided over the House four years without an appeal from his decisions.

Stevenson is running on a platform of "economy, experience, efficiency in government." He was for six years county attorney and county judge of Kimble county, was 10 years in the legisla-

Hand Rattles Get Air Defense R

LONDON — Sirens and rattles will be used to give warning of air raids in Great Britain, Geoffrey Lloyd, parliamentary undersecretary for home affairs, disclosed in an address to Ladies Carlton club of London.

"The signal for an air raid warning will be an intermittent siren blast or a continuing blast, alternately rising and falling in pitch," he said.

"The 'raid alert' signal will be a continuous blast for minutes on the siren, keeping a steady pitch.

"Gas warnings which are more local in character will be given by hand rattles sounded in air raid warnings.

"The air raid warnings will be equipped with armlets, steel helmets, civilian duty respirators, anti-gas eyeshields and curtains to protect the eyes the back of the neck against spray."

Stevenson was twice speaker of the House, and is the only man to serve two consecutive terms as speaker.

As a member of the House, Stevenson introduced and helped pass aggressive, constructive and business-like measures. Among these were the state auditor's law, providing a check on government expenses; the state budget law, business methods in government payment of county highway bonds; the gasoline tax, saving taxpayers $40,000,000 up to present time; the $4,000,000 building program for the University of Texas and the $2,000,000 building program for Texas A. M. college.

During Stevenson's term as speaker the cost of government was cut 25 per cent and saved taxpayers $13,000,000 during the biennium of 1933-34 and a similar amount during the following triennium.

At the same time the revenue for public schools was increased and the present old age assistance payments were provided.

“There’s The doorbell again”

Suppose daily to your door came the butcher, the grocer, the clothier, the furrier, the furniture man, and every other merchant with whom you deal? What a tedium of doorbell answering that would mean!

It would be even more impractical for you to visit daily all these stores to find out what they have to offer and the price.

And yet you need those merchants' service quite as much as they need your patronage. Contact between seller and consumer is essential in the supplying of human needs. Before a sale can be closed the goods must be offered. Every day, through the advertising columns of this newspaper, the merchants of this city come to your home with their choicest wares. Easily, quickly, you get the news of all that is worth while in the market-places of the world.

They are not strangers at the door, but merchants you know and trust. You are always surer of high quality and fair price when you buy an article advertised by a reputable firm.

HOLDUP HONEYMOON

BY EDWIN RUTT Copyright 1938, NEA Service Inc.

CHAPTER I
JOSEPH HERENDEN SANDHAM was on top of the world. He sat in a low wicker chair on the afterdeck of his trim white yacht and extended his hand languidly for the aperitif that Smithers, his valet and body-servant, was about to give him.

Illustrations by Walt Scott.

This was old-time because, Joseph knew, the girls were fighting over which one was to have lunch with him.

"Who's Simmons?"
"My uncle's caretaker."
"Ah, we're getting places. Who're you?"
"Kelly Archer."
"Who's that?"
"Like it?"
Joe was silent a moment. "Look here, Kelly," he said finally, "we're shooting at cross purposes. Suppose we begin at the beginning. Now then! What country is this?"
"America, eh? Great old place, that. Glad to be here. What part of America?"
"Connecticut. Ever heard of it?"
Joe nodded. "That checks, I remember being Connecticut."

start again. Something smashed, I guess.
MENTION of his car brought another fact about himself back to Joe. For two years he had been employed by the long-established and respectable firm of Chandler & Sandham, Chocolates, Caramels, Bonbons and Confections, learning the business from the ground up. At the moment he was serving in the capacity of salesman for the New England territory. Hence the car, a Ford built along the general lines of a fair-sized delivery truck.
"I don't understand," he said now, "why you brought me here? Why didn't you just toss me into a hospital?"
Kelly looked at him, speculated for a moment on the fact that he had curly dark hair and eyes a nice shade of gray, then said: "Of course, hospitals are sprinkled all over the place, aren't they? Like hot dog stands and filling stations? It was easier to bring you here, that's all. You see, the crack-up happened only a couple of miles away and I knew Uncle Tyler was in Europe. Besides, I wanted to avoid any—er—publicity."

"That's the old Garbo fight," said Joe. "I shun publicity myself. Live quietly and expensively, is my motto. But where were you going in such a rush?"
Kelly sighed. "Questions. Nothing but questions. What is this, the third degree?"
"Kelly, you're the girl that knows all the answers. And I've been out with the birdies for the Lord knows how long. Come on, lady. Was there a fire in Boston?"
"Or my way to Boston. Cambridge, rather."

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—A nice, eight-point program for the Republican party appears to be one of the current needs in politics. The G. O. P. has been going in for numerology in the past, but no one has yet combined the possible magic in the number eight. Here's what has been presented to the country thus far:
Five-point program of principles to guide the nation, offered by Herbert Hoover last December.
Six-point program to restore confidence and prosper, offered by Congressman Hamilton Fish of New York.
"Seven deadly sores," of the present economic situation, offered by New York's Congressman Bruce Barton as subjects for congressional investigation.
NINE-POINT party program offered by Governor Aiken of Vermont as basis for attack on the New Deal.
"Nine basic headaches"—bad spots in the New Deal which the Republican Committee on Program promises to explore and analyze.
Ten-point Republican program, suggested by Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan in a magazine interview.
Eleven-point program for saving the country, proposed by Herbert Hoover on his return last month from Europe.
Twelve-point "rescue plan," devised by G. O. P. National Committee and congressmen in minority report on administration's recovery-relief bill.
Most popular points have included: no more pump-priming; revision of taxes and the Wagner act; lower relief costs and investigation or elimination of WPA, eliminate government competition with and attacks on business.

By HARRY GRAYSON

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service
POMPTON LAKES, N. J.—It's too bad that Jack Blackburn can't think for Joe Louis. The famous lightweight of 30 years ago does everything but fight for his "Chappie."
Louis' thoughts are Blackburn's. Interviewing Louis after chatting with Blackburn, you get the same replies.
A superlative boxer himself, Blackburn, never scaling more than 140 pounds, outfoxed Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and good heavyweights.
It was quite natural for him to turn to sharpening Louis' defense once Max Schmeling demonstrated that he could be confused by an unorthodox style and was a rank sucker for a right hand punch.
This plan was the correct one against a mauling lugger like Tommy Farr, who couldn't knock off Judge Landis' trick hat, let alone hurt Louis, but those who know Schmeling best suggest that the Brown Bomber adopt the Jack Dempsey theory in his second edition with the German at Yankee Stadium, June 22... make his attack his defense.
If Louis follows Blackburn's announced plan of battle... boxes... he'll play right into the cagy Schmeling's hands.
THAT is exactly what the wily ex-champion wants him to do... be careful.
For as Schmeling remarks, "When Louis is protecting himself, he will be doing no damage to me."
Schmeling is the epitome of confidence, and this is based on the firm belief that Louis has a wholesome respect for his right fist. Indeed, there has been unmistakable evidence that the beating the Union dealt him two years ago left Smokey Joe a little punch shy.
His hands went up to protect his head with each lunge of Farr. This won't do against Schmeling, an intelligent campaigner who will make the most of any flaw in the other bloke's armor. Herr Maxie knows that the toughest punch for a fighter to escape is one he anticipates.
There is no question but that Louis has improved as a boxer since his last excursion with Schmeling. He now has one of the finest left jabs ever employed by a big fellow, and more poise than he possessed two years back.
BUT while it is true that Louis is a more polished performer, there also are indications that he has lost much of the verve that characterized his performances against Primo Carnera and Max Baer.
If Louis stands off and boxes—fiddles around—Schmeling, a sharpshooting counter-puncher, is likely to get away from most of his better shots... outmaneuver and outthit the Dark Angel.
It will take concerted blasts of fire such as Louis unleashed against Carnera and Baer to repel Schmeling. The trick is to get Louis back into the punching stride that was his before Schmeling nailed him... put doubt in his mind for the first time.
The Brown Bomber has two of the fastest and hardest hitting hands in the history of the ring. A concerted attack is the surest way for Louis to take advantage of his near nine-year edge in age. A concerted attack would be Joe Louis' best defense against Mr. Schmeling.
