By United Press
WIMBLEDON, England, July 2.—The United States scored its first sweep of all five titles of the All-England tennis championships today when Mrs. Helen Willis Moody overwhelmed and injured Helen Jacobs, 6-4, 6-0.

Miss Jacobs suffered a sprained ankle late in the first set.

Four titles were decided today. The other, the men's singles, was successfully defended yesterday by Don Budge. Budge shared two victories today and thus became the first player ever to win three titles in two successive years.

Budge and Gene Mako retained the men's doubles crown by defeating Henner Henkel of Germany and George Metaxa of Austria 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 8-6. Then without taking a rest Budge and Alice Marble kept their mixed doubles crown by defeating Henkel and Mrs. Sarah Fabyan of Massachusetts, 6-1, 6-4.

Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble won the women's doubles by defeating Mrs. Rene Mathieu of France and Adeline Yorke of England 6-2, 6-3.

OLD MURDER CHARGE FILED AFTER ESCAPE

By United Press
SAN ANTONIO, July 2.—A seven-year-old murder charge was renewed today against Robert Compton, Jr., of Gonzales, who escaped three weeks ago from the San Antonio insane hospital.

Compton, 31, was charged in 1931 with the murder of his sweetheart, Lillian Nagel, 17-year-old San Antonio High School graduate. The charge was dismissed a year later after the youth had been found insane.

Andrew Young, uncle of the dead girl, refilled the charge today. A warrant was issued for Compton's arrest.

The charge alleged that Compton killed Miss Nagel because she "dated" a San Antonio army officer.

The Blue and the Gray--In Gettysburg Harmony

Labor Troubles Hit the South And Southwest

By United Press
SAN ANTONIO, July 2.—Geo. Lambert, organizer for the CIO affiliated cannery union, said today he would file a formal protest against Mayor C. K. Quin's refusal to make available city property for an address by V. L. Toledano, Mexican labor leader.

Lambert referred to Quin as a "miniature Frank Hague, who would deny the representative of a foreign nation the right of speech."

NEW ORLEANS, July 2.—The strike-bound Yellow Cab company advertised today for men to break the strike of the CIO's automobile workers union, which tied up its fleet of taxis.

Company officials sent out a call for 600 drivers to replace men who walked out late Friday when the 10-day old trucker's strike spread to the cab company.

But favorable returns were offset by the steady rise of the national debt and the prospect of a record-breaking deficit in the new fiscal year, which began Friday.

The deficit reported today compares with $4,360,600,000 in the fiscal year 1936, the new deal record to date.

Price Cutting Is Shown to Barber As Against Law

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 2.—W. L. Tennyson, an Oklahoma barber, went to jail as a matter of principle when he would not pay a fine of $25 for charging only 25 cents for a haircut, and still is in jail despite an Oklahoma Supreme Court order for his release on bond.

Tennyson's attorney is about to file a $100 bond to get him out so that the barber can continue to defy the Oklahoma barber price-fixing law by "charging 15 cents for a shave and 25 cents for a haircut if he wants to."

The state supreme court granted a writ of habeas corpus and directed the sheriff to show cause why Tennyson is held. The county court has ordered the barber to post $500 bond to assure that he would not violate a restraining order prohibiting price-cutting.

A test of the law which permits association of barbers in cities and towns to fix minimum prices now is before the state supreme court and it is predicted that it may finally reach the United States Supreme Court in Washington on appeal.

Northern Trappers Warn Fur Coats to Be Higher Priced

By United Press
EDMONTON, Alta.—A sharp increase in the price of mink coats and other furred wearing apparel for midlay's wardrobe is forecast by fur dealers here for next year.

According to reports emanating from the fur country north of Edmonton, the fur harvest will realize considerably less than the $3,000,000 total is brought last year.

Pelts of all kinds are scarce on the local market and experienced dealers attribute the scarcity to a decrease in rabbits, which form the main item of diet to many furbearing animals.

For some reason, trappers say, rabbits contract an incurable disease every seven or ten years that kills them by the thousands. This year rabbits are at the bottom of the prevalence cycle and it will take another five years before they return to normal.

What Is Good Is What Works

Placidly indifferent to the zealots who howl that we must take either Communism or Fascism day after tomorrow, and like it, the people of Sweden go about the creation of their own design for living.

That it is a good one is attested by the celebration in Stockholm of the 80th birthday of King Gustaf V. More than a million of his subjects contributed to a gift of a million-dollar check which was presented to the king. He immediately passed it on to the fund for fighting infantile paralysis and rheumatic disease.

Half a million jammed the streets of the capital to cheer the king. They shouted for "Mr. G.," the incognito under which the king used to play tennis, and by which title he is popularly known. Thousands of birthday gifts from rich and poor piled up at the palace.

The king himself paid the highest honor to his position, when in a speech he referred to himself as "the premier citizen of a free country." It was a true description of his status, far more accurate than "king." No more noble political title has yet been conceived by the mind of man.

Even to his Socialist ministers, King Gustaf is known as "a good fellow," and the left-wing papers in noting the anniversary were united in proclaiming that even to radicals, a good monarchy is better than a bad republic. For they know that Sweden has approached more nearly than any other country to a condition where there are few who are very rich, and few who are very poor, and where all are free.

This picture of a great country paying a largely spontaneous tribute to its ruler, and doing it in a dignified, decent manner without needling the populace with nationalistic hokum or herding it into synthetic huzzas, is like a light in a world of strife and turmoil, of bitterness and hatred.

This is no plea for monarchy. The combination of circumstances that makes monarchy a success in Sweden probably does not exist in the same degree anywhere else in the world. It could not possibly work in a country like the United States or France.

But the Swedish celebration does point strongly to the fact that actuality is what counts in government. If it works, if it makes people reasonably happy and secure, if it keeps them free, the name by which a governmental system is called means nothing.

A glance around the world shows that it is possible to have oppression and suppression under governments called "people's governments." It is possible to have tyranny and brute force under a system of elections that is in name republican. The substance is the thing, not the label. Sweden has the substance, and is content.

To any who might reproach them with having an outdated monarchy as a form of government, the Swedes are in position to return a liltng laugh. They are realistic. They care more for life than labels.

One pound ox-heart cherries, 1-4 cup sugar, 1-2 cup water, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 2 teaspoons potato flour (or cornstarch) smoothed in 1 tablespoon water. Wash and stone the cherries. Measure juice into 3 to 4-quart saucepan and place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Hearing Rooms Are Needed at Capitol

By United Press
AUSTIN.—Need of an adequate room for public hearings in the state capitol was stressed this week when dance rooms of two Austin hotels were in use simultaneously for state conferences.

The railroad commission held its oil prororation hearing in one hotel and its freight rate hearing in another on the same day.

The hearing room of the state highway building was in use the same day for road delegation conferences. Local newspapers estimated that 1,000 persons attended the three hearings. Some road delegations have learned to avoid the crowd on the regular hearing days. Arriving the next day they ask a hearing. This interrupts the executive conferences and the commissioners this week issued instructions NO delegation will be heard unless scheduled for the regular day.

State's Attorney In Criminal Appeals Has Many Worries

By United Press
AUSTIN.—Lloyd Davidson, states' attorney before the court of criminal appeals, has a hard job with some of the cases sent to that court on appeal.

His hair almost rose on end as he read a San Antonio paper account of the trial of a negro charged with attempted rape and robbery with firearms.

In the closing argument the prosecutor demanded the death penalty and flayed the defendant for "failing to take the witness stand and refute a single word of the testimony," the reporter had written.

Repeatedly the court of criminal appeals has held that even an indirect reference to failure of a defendant to testify is a reversible error.

Federal Judge Robert J. McMillan of San Antonio didn't make Davidson feel any easier. Judge McMillan was in Austin holding court. He met the state's chief attorney for crime cases and asked: "When did Texas change its law?"

The next day Davidson relaxed. The same paper retracted the story.

“There’s The doorbell again”

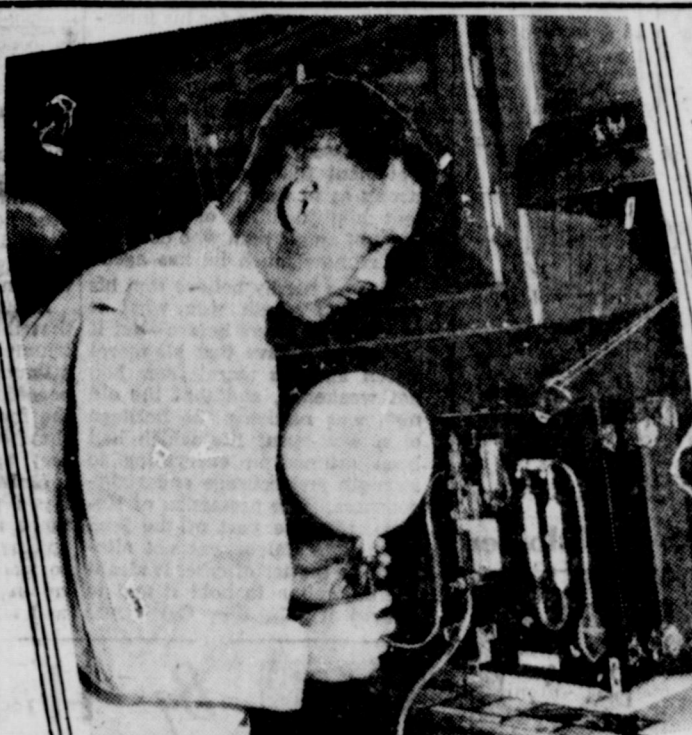

Suppose daily to your door came the butcher, the grocer, the clothier, the furrier, the furniture man, and every other merchant with whom you deal? What a tedium of doorbell answering that would mean!

It would be even more impractical for you to visit daily all these stores to find out what they have to offer and the price.

And yet you need those merchants' service quite as much as they need your patronage. Contact between seller and consumer is essential in the supplying of human needs. Before a sale can be closed the goods must be offered. Every day, through the advertising columns of this newspaper, the merchants of this city come to your home with their choicest wares. Easily, quickly, you get the news of all that is worth while in the market-places of the world.

They are not strangers at the door, but merchants you know and trust. You are always surer of high quality and fair price when you buy an article advertised by a reputable firm.

HOLDUP HONEYMOON

CASE OF CHARACTERS
JOSEPH SANDHAM—here, he thought he was on top of the world until he was snatched into KILLY ARCHER—heroine she thought she was headed for the altar until she was snatched into ED THE WEASEL—gangster he thought he was headed somewhere, too, but affairs somehow got mixed up.

Yesterday Joe convinced Ed that he is kidnapping Kelly and then under cover of darkness he begins to do things in the Ford.

CHAPTER IX

YES, under cover of darkness, Mr. Sandham moved into action. First his left hand stole, surreptitiously into his inside coat pocket while his right continued to guide the car. From the pocket he drew a small oblong object which he placed in his lap. Then the hand went back into the pocket and came out with a smaller thinner object. After that, for the space of five minutes, both hands rested innocuously on the wheel.

In the back of the car the head of Ed the Weasel nodded slightly. He was by no means asleep. But the steady purr of the motor had lulled his sensibilities. Joe half-turned in his seat and stole a look at him out of the corner of his eye. "Getting sleepy?" he asked.

"Naw," said the Weasel, blinking through the darkness. Joe drove for another mile in orthodox fashion. Then, very carefully, his right hand slipped from the wheel, groped in his lap for the slender thing which he had taken from his pocket, found it. The oblong object lay flat on his knee. And for a short time the thumb and first finger of his right hand were tortuously busy, while with his left hand he controlled the destinies of the Ford.

Finally he ceased his labors. "Want some candy?" he said suddenly to Ed the Weasel. "This car's lousy with it."

"Don't care if I do," said the Weasel, yawning. "I ain't et much today."

Joe reached down to a cardboard packing-case under the seat and fumbled in it. He extracted a small flat box.

"Try these," he said, passing it back to the Weasel. "Chocolate covered peppermints."

The Weasel took the box and tore at the cellophane wrapper with his fingernail. It came off and presently he was rustling the wax-paper inside, fighting his way toward the peppermints. For a second the noise of paper rattling fled the back of the car. Under cover of it came a thinner rending sound from the front seat, a sound that was barely audible. Then Joe slipped the oblong object back in his pocket.

"Dose is okay," said the Weasel, with his mouth full of peppermints.

"Take all you want," Joe invited.

"I got enough," said the Weasel. "I don't go fer sweets much."

"Guess I'll have one myself," said Joe.

The Weasel handed him back the box. His fingers dove into it. After that, he replaced the lid and left the box on the seat beside him.

At dawn Joe pulled up before a likely-looking refreshment stand whose environs were devoid of other vehicles. A black-haired girl was polishing the counter inside. At Joe's signal she issued forth.

"Kawfee," said the Weasel hoarsely, from the depths of the Ford. "An' hot cakes. Fer tree. We'll have 'em out here in da car."

In a short time the black-haired girl returned, bearing sustenance. The hot cakes were huge, brown and indigestible. Kelly and Joe ate of them but sparingly. Ed the Weasel, however, was no weak sister. He cut his allotment into great segments, drowned them in syrup and masticated with audible satisfaction.

"Dat hits da spot," he stated, between bites.

"Do enjoy yourself," said Kelly. Presently the girl returned with coffee in thick China mugs. When they had finished drinking Joe handed her a bill.

"Keep the change," he said grandly.

She flashed him a smile. "Thanks."

"And just as a token of our esteem," said Joe, evidently made mellow by the coffee, "accept these chocolate peppermints. Delicious, fine-flavored, a boon to the digestion. Here you are. On the house." He picked up the box of chocolate peppermints and thrust them at her.

The girl hesitated. Joe's eyes held hers.

"Come on," he said. "Take 'em. Plenty more where they came from."

She reached for the box then. Joe slid in the clutch. He winked flagrantly at the girl of the refreshment stand. The Ford roared away.

MID-AFTERNOON found them nearing Niagara Falls and the Canadian border. In a deserted stretch of road a few miles from the town, Joe stopped the car suddenly.

"You and I," he said to the

4. Drunks—"We call them beer rats. They are the beer parlor boys, usually up to petty larceny and small change deals, but they are not tough."

5. Dope heads (narcotic addicts and prostitutes—"Nobody really knows about this bunch like cab drivers. We know their hang-outs all the way from a $25 place to a joint where you can get in for a grain of morphine."

6. Timid souls—"Usually the cheating wife."

Weasel, "have got to have a conference."

The Weasel exhibited impatience at the unexpected delay. He was anxious to get across the border. He growled: "Wot we gotta talk about? Ting is to git into Canada."

"Sure," said Joe. "But we'll never do it with all this junk in the car." His hand swooped over the merchandise which loomed around the Weasel. "The customs officials will want to know why we're going to Canada with enough candy to make a herd of elephants sick. There'll be questions and delay."

"Gee, dat's right," said the Weasel thoughtfully.

Kelly looked at Joe in exasperation.

"You would bring that up," she said. "You certainly do all you can to smooth the way for our amiable jailer here, don't you?"

"I figure it a romantic touch," Joe told her, "for you and me to be married in a foreign land."

If a pretty girl can snort, Kelly snorted. "Married? You know darn well whom I'm going to marry. And he doesn't look anything like you."

"I'll bet I'm handsomer," said Joe. He turned to the Weasel. "We've got to throw the cargo overboard, that's all."

"Tain't over no place, den," said the Weasel. "An' we'll trow it."

A side road offered a convenient spot. At the point of the Weasel's gun, Kelly and Joe evacuated the car. The Weasel took up a position favored by overseers.

"Okay," he said to Joe. "Chuck da stuff out."

Joe opened the back doors of the car and started in. Confections of all descriptions were dragged out and dumped carelessly at the roadside. And as he worked Mr. Sandham sang, raucously. He broke off suddenly and addressed the Weasel. "Give me a hand with this, will you? It's heavy as lead."

Obligingly the Weasel shuffled over, placed a hairy paw on a huge box and jerked. Joe jerked in unison. The recalcitrant box of chocolate dipped nougats began to vacate the Ford.

"Then, all at once, the Weasel dropped it as if it had been a puff adder.

"Hey," he roared. "Come back here, you!" At the same instant his gun hand whipped up.

Joe raised his head. Miss Kelly Archer had converted the distraction of the Weasel's attention. She was fleeing down the road toward the main highway like a species of red-headed deer.

"God" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 3. The Golden Text is: "We will rejoice in thy salvation, and in the name of our God we will set up our banners" (Psalms 20:5). Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth" (John 4:24). The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "We worship spiritually, only as we cease to worship materially" (page 140).

Taxi Driver Has Catalogued People In Seven Classes

HOUSTON.—Alvin B. Cowan, who has driven a taxicab around Houston streets for years, places all people in seven categories. Cowan, who plans to write a book about the people he has carried, has kept a diary telling about his "fares." The first rule of taxi-driving, he has found, is to keep quiet and not do much talking. By following this rule and studying the persons riding with him, he has decided that everybody comes in, one of the following classifications: 1. Bigshots—"I have had some of the 'society set' get in my cab so 'high' on opium they didn't know where they were." 2. Love-birds—"They are the most common and all they want me to do is drive them. There's no clear class to divide them."

Caleb: A Life-Time Devotion

Text: Joshua 14:6-15

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

CALEB shared with Joshua the distinction of having the courage and faith to believe that determined Israelites could conquer the Promised Land. The rewards of heroic conduct and of true character are not always evident in this life. Men serve in sacrifice, and the evidence of what they have done often does not appear until after they have gone. But it is a satisfaction to realize that the reward came in Caleb's case, and that a fitting portion of the Promised Land was given to Caleb for his inheritance.

The reward had come to Caleb when he had not many remaining years on earth, for he was now, as he says in a statement of the lesson, 85 years old. In his statement that he was then as strong as in the day that Moses sent him justified, or is it the boast of an old man who does not realize how much he has aged?

We can hardly believe that his physical strength was what it had been 45 years before—but it is easy to believe that his moral vision and his moral fiber had not weakened, and that the old man was realizing the heritage of a well-spent life which had been attuned in everything to strength and courage and righteousness. The possession of Hebrew, the fine part of the land allotted to Caleb, was not altogether a matter of ease. It meant the obligation to hold it and to defend it. In this, Caleb was evidently successful, for we have the record in the closing words of the lesson that "the land had rest from war." THE moral lessons of this ancient story for our own time are not difficult to appraise. There is, of course, the question of the moral right of people to conquer a land and expel another people by force of arms—a question that has very seriously arisen until comparatively modern times. The story of history is, in the main, the story of conquest and settlement, with those who show capacity for settlement as well as conquest triumphing in the end. But apart from this deep question of the right of conquest is the lesson that determining courage and faith with moral vigor can conquer any obstacle. The man who is truly righteous need not fear the giants of evil. Formidable enemies can be dispersed and conquered by moral will and heroism.

But there is the further lesson that the goals of life are not triumph over enemies, but in attainment and preservation of peace. It was the spirit in which the Israelites possessed the land that has made their place in history significant. Joshua and Caleb are heroes of today. The story that they were and did is inspiring, and nerves to action to whom "promised lands" open up in characters to be attained and tasks to be achieved.

NO doubt the United States Lawn Tennis Association has not the public prints by now that Donald Budge has won the French clay courts title, which means the highest tennis honor to be won in France.

That, to the United States Lawn Tennis Association, should be sign in the wind and the handwriting on the wall. The U. S. L. T. A. shudders at the thought of it, but that one according to those who know the Oakland "redhead" best, means lanky Donald is all set to succumb to the old $ sign. Not immediate mind you, but next fall . . . in time for a winter program.

Budge has completed what he set out to do—the grand slam tennis. He now holds the French, English, American, and Davis singles titles. There is absolutely nothing else of importance for him to win.

Those close to him say he no longer would get a kick out of being Bobby Riggs, Bitsy Grant, Gene Mako, and other current rangers.

SHOULD a newcomer spring up to challenge his amateur supremacy his interest may be fanned into a flame again. A newcomer, haps, like 19-year-old Frankie Kovacs from his own home town, Don McNeil, the Kenyon College youngster.

Budge is a practical sort of person despite his tendency to a much fun out of life as possible. And remaining in the ranks of amateurs when there are no more worlds to conquer doesn't do the bankroll.

Not a few experts consider him, at his best, better than Fred Perry or Ellsworth Vines, who aren't going to get any better. They cleared more than $75,000 on their professional tour last year.

By the time Budge returns from his European campaign, and up the summer with American and Davis Cup play, he'll probably have an interesting announcement to make.

One which won't make the U. S. L. T. A. feel too good.

IT looks as though Sam Chapman, Connie Mack's All-American rookie, has arrived.

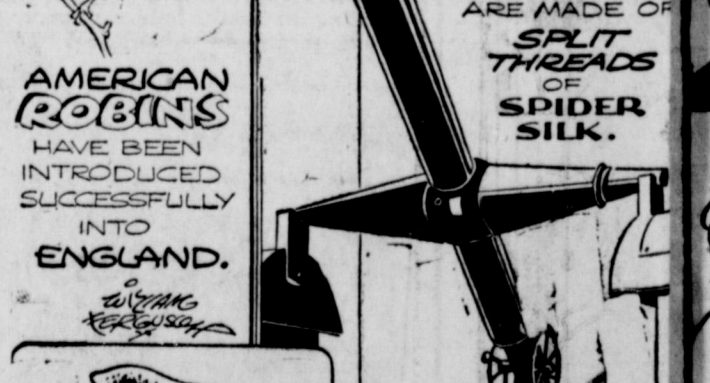

The husky University of California lad wasn't supposed to be much of a chance to stick in the majors—not in his first year of campus anyway—when he joined the Athletics.

But the other day, he was walked—purposely.

The experts, of course, are waiting for Chapman to complete first round of teams and pitchers in the loop, and start on his se before they pass final judgment.

But when hurlers start handing out intentional walks it looks though they've made up their minds ahead of the experts.

Rambling With The Rambler

BY WAYNE WALLACE

The League of Nations has so far been anything but a howling success. It has been criticized since its beginning and looked upon as something obnoxious by the majority of American people. Certainly it has many bad features, not the least of which is the danger of involving non-interested nations in the entangling alliances of other countries. Yet with all the League's faults it does suggest a means that may eventually be accepted by world's powers in settling international disputes. But before any such thing ever comes to pass, people will have to become more civilized.

The main purpose of the League is to outlaw war, a very worthy and noble cause. It wishes to settle disputes by reason rather than by armed force. And if some means if ever reached which will be successful in fulfilling this desire, then the human race will be benefited beyond measure. The main trouble in accomplishing this task is that while the mission of the League is idealistic, its members are not. Each nation wishes the League to work out to its own individual advantage and when such is not the case they the off-fered nation withdraws.

For such a League to ever work it would be necessary to instill honesty in its members, since this is the only means a League of this nature can employ to control those under its jurisdiction. It cannot use armed force since this is against the underlying principle of its mission. Thus any nation assuming any such authority in subduing another, would itself be offending against the rules of the League, or for that matter even a group of nations. As long as pacts and treaties mean nothing to individual nations, as long as they are considered mere scraps of paper to be discarded at the least provocation, just so long will such League find its very existence jeopardized. Although the League of Nations came into existence January 10, 1920 in accordance with a covenant of the Peace Conference at Paris, the idea preceded it by many centuries. In fact it was near the close of the thirteenth century that Pierre Dubois, a reformer, proposed a court of international arbitration and advocacy of the outlawry of war, holding that the nations responsible for it should be "starved out"—which is nothing more than boycotting Philip the Fair was then king of France.

To many observers the League of Nations seems to be on its last legs. It has met with some successes during its short existence but so far has failed miserably in its many attempts to manipulate a crisis; yet despite this there are still some who believe that the League, or something of like nature, will eventually bring an end to war. John I. Knudson in his book, "A History of the League of Nations," remarks in conclusion, "The world has become so interdependent that some centralized agency for discussion and decision of policy is now indispensable. Should the League not survive due to some fearful catalyzing some similar institution would in time be built upon the same structure and serving the same needs. In other words the League has become an indispensable organization in a world community."

The ideas sponsored by the League of Nations have come a long way down the centuries and their development has been slow; yet those who trust in such things feel that they have something to show for the effort expended in its direction. There will always exist men, who trust in human nature and who will strive to make the world a better place to live in and those of us who are not so idealistic might find a little comfort in their presence. And maybe they are not altogether wrong. Since modern transportation and means of communication have come into being, individual countries have become better acquainted with each other and sectional bigotry has broken down. Perhaps such will be the effect among nations when the giant airplanes of tomorrow bring the continents closer together, when communication becomes easier, when nations become better acquainted with each other. Perhaps they will then learn that all men are human and very much alike in many ways. Then such a League will have a better chance to prove successful.

Odds and ends: If life begins at 40, just think how many people are born into the world and die without ever living... Because a man bears a famous name does not mean the name will bear him... In democratic countries politicians must pay some attention to the people for fear of their jobs; in dictatorial countries the people must listen to the politicians for fear of their lives... If people would only iron out their differences before marriage they might have a different use for the iron after marriage... More plates are crossed while eating than while playing baseball... A sit-down strike, evidently is something that won't stand on its feet... Trying to run business on a shoe-string presents many a knotty problem... Hating people, at its best, is nothing more than wasted effort... A pointed remark may pierce like a lance... Three cheers for Eddie Cantor who puts levity to his race above the strings of his purse.

More Modern Look Result of Toombs, Richardson Work

First of a series of improvements for the modernization of the store were noted Saturday at the Toombs and Richardson Drug establishment in Eastland.

The improvements include painting, decoration of the fountain and "bringing the prescription department into the open." At the rear of the store the public may see their prescriptions compounded in clean, sanitary quarters. While the department is separated from the rest of the store, it still is in view of the public. Medicine used in compounding the prescriptions is on the shelves on three sides of the department space. A registered pharmacist is on duty at all times in compliance with Texas laws. The improvements have drawn many expressions of praise. Work also planned for the store includes a modern awning for the front which will improve the exterior appearance. The store is operated by T. E. Richardson and Hubert Toombs.

THERE IS NOTHING NEW NOR STRANGE ABOUT CHANGE!

What was new yesterday, is old today, and will be obsolete tomorrow. "Jimmy Got It," a story appearing in last week's Saturday Evening Post, might startle the young reader, disgust the more mature, but how funny to the oldsters!

It must be the viewpoint, the outlook, or the setting that make the difference, but there is nothing that we can do about change.

Everything is changing, everyday, everybody. The nice homes we have on the market today may be gone tomorrow. Some of those we had last week are sold this week. If you are a tenant and keep putting off buying a home, beware of change! Its sure to happen, sooner or later.
