Colvin, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, will promote the happiness of the community.

Colvin, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, is visiting many families in the rural areas to interest the rural boys in educational advancement. In consequence, it is probable that a number of boys living in the rural communities will attend Eastland high during the year.

State and federal boards of vocational training are offering special farming courses at Eastland high. The instructor will be given by Mr. Colvin, who had experience in teaching the John Tarleton College previously at Kennedy.

Courses will include pig raising, feeding and care of cows and the handling, judging team will be formed to participate in contests at the college, the Texas Tech school and at Plainview.

Work in poultry, which will include breeding, incubation and care of chickens, the construction of chicken houses and sanitation in particular the feeding and management of a flock of chickens for production purposes.

Work in dairying and poultry raising will be along practical lines and work will be done as possible in the field in conjunction with poultry and dairies. In other words, the local plants for poultry and dairying will be used as laboratories.

Colvin intends also to organize a poultry judging team for the county. He had such a team at John Tarleton College, where he won the state judging title at A. & M. College last year.

In addition the course at the school will offer work in animal production, including hogs, sheep, goats, beef and cattle. Field work will be done as much as possible.

World War Veteran Wounds 2 Women When Kills Self

By United Press.
WESTON, Aug. 2.—Tommy, 33-year old World War veteran, killed himself last night wounding two women. The mother, Mrs. Minnie Dennis, 23, and Mrs. Julia Hickman, 37, were driving in an automobile on 37th street and Avenue when Morgan jumped on the running board and shouted, "I'm going to kill you."

After riding on the automobile for a few blocks while the women screamed, he began firing. Mrs. Hickman was shot in the shoulder and in the neck. Mrs. Dennis was shot in the neck.

Morgan jumped from the automobile, placed the pistol in his mouth and sent a bullet through his head.

A five-year-old son of Mrs. Dennis, who sat between the women, was unhurt. Morgan was gassed overseas and is believed to have affected insanity.

DAILY LEISURE PERIOD NEEDED BY HOUSEWIVES

We Need to Learn "To Loaf and Invite Our Souls" Says Speaker.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—A period of leisure in the daily round of duties of the housewife is not only desirable but essential for the best development. Mrs. Lily Pearl Chamberlin, department of home economics, John Tarleton Agricultural College, told farm women and others in attendance at the session for the homemaking group at the nineteenth annual Farmers' Short Course here.

"In making out the day's schedule, a time should be set apart for leisure and this period should be kept sacred," Mrs. Chamberlin said. "We need to learn to loaf and invite our souls."

"Some of us lead such strenuous lives," she added, "that, like the overworked housewife, we would carve on our grave stones: 'Don't weep for me now, oh, week for me never; 'I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever.'"

It is necessary to learn, the speaker continued, that "Rest is not quitting the busy career; rest is the fitting of self to one's sphere."

The next thing, after having made a place for leisure, is to find out how to use that period to the best advantage. Mrs. Chamberlin said. Among the suggestions made were the following:

Relax for the sake of mental as well as physical well being. Get away, if possible, from the sights and sounds of the household. Take time for thinking. Use part of the leisure time for reading. Employ definite physical exercises for building up the body. There are numerous other things that suggest themselves as engaging in some definite project that may be turned to leisure each day should be devoted to making one's appearance more attractive, the speaker said in conclusion.

HOOVER KISSES NO BABIES!

But He Will Pat Them

One of the nation's time-honored political gestures was cast into the discard when Herbert Hoover, republican presidential nominee, refused to kiss a baby that was held up to him at Montello, Nev. When the mother held up the child, the crowd cried, "Kiss the baby!" Hoover's reply was "I'm not kissing babies for publication." He patted the child and handed it back to its mother, as shown above. The picture was taken by the NEA staff photographer with Hoover.

Very Few Women In India Educated

BOMBAY.—In India there is only one educated woman to every 100 educated men, declared Mrs. Cousin James, secretary of the Women's Indian Association, in commenting on the need for a more active women's movement in India. The present ignorance of India's women, she said, is a blot on the fair name of the country.

Only two out of every 100 Indian women can read or write in their own language, and the percentage who get higher education is most appallingly low. The education of her womanhood is India's most pressing need.

The annual report of the association says, "Our work inspires members increasingly to serve in the political field. Seven are now members of the Legislatures, including those in the Native States, and over 80 are represented on the local boards and the senates of the universities or are honorary magistrates, and justices of the peace."

Behar is now the only province in India where women are enfranchised. In all other provinces women have the right to vote and to enter the councils on exactly the same terms as men.

PYTHIANS GIVE EXHIBITION OF BALL PLAYING

Colorful and Amusing Game At Connellee Park, Wednesday, Entertains Many Spectators.

By Mrs. W. K. JACKSON

The Breckenridge and Eastland Knights of Pythias ball teams introduced their second game, played Wednesday afternoon, with a tramp about the square, headed by fifteen pieces of the local band, with A. J. Campbell, bandmaster, leading.

To the casual observer the teams looked very much like Fussy Doras, dressed in short skirts, saucy hats and faces prettily camouflaged, with pouting red lips and darkened eyelashes.

One of the handsomest lads or lassies was W. H. Madden, whose dark eyes gleamed above his red cheeks, and whose pouting mouth was an inviting crimson.

The game was full of joy. The old Connellee Ball Park was comfortably filled by spectators. They saw Turner Colie cavort at first base; Clyde Turner, with a tramp about the square, headed by fifteen pieces of the local band, with A. J. Campbell, bandmaster, leading.

Bob Hammett covered the right field, Ott Hearn returned them from center and Bill Herrington gathered those that drifted into the right.

Delivery of the sphere and receiver were interchanged by Jake Ross and Artie Liles and this proved a wonderful battery.

J. F. McWilliams was bat boy and utility man. The game was umpired by Garrity of Breckenridge, Ben Grant of that town managed the boys of his burg and Carl Brawl handled the bases for Eastland.

The crew managed their skirts with delicacy and ability, and certainly showed their sisters how it could be done, in a strenuous game.

A big weiner roast was given at the City Park after the game, when buns, onions, pickles, cakes and iced tea made a filling and satisfying meal. It was served by a committee of Pythian Sisters, Mmes. Rollins, Fred Leonard, Artie Liles and H. H. Leonard.

The ticket sale was in charge of W. H. Madden, and the proceeds will go to the Pythian Home at Weatherford, when the local temple forwards its pledge in November.

PROSPERITY RESERVE IS CONTEMPLATED

Public Improvements Suggested To Relieve Idleness In Periods of National Unemployment.

An old idea with new plait in its robe has been dressed up and presented by Doctor John M. Gries, of the Department of Commerce. In a memorandum prepared for the Senate Committee on Commerce, of which Senator Jones of Washington is chairman, Doctor Gries suggests a policy of creating work during periods of national unemployment by undertaking public improvements which have been authorized by the government, whenever it is found that the volume, based on the value of contracts for construction work in the United States has declined ten per cent for a three-month period below the average of the corresponding three-months period of the preceding three years.

The United States government is in the construction business to the extent of about $150,000,000 a year, and a "prosperity reserve" is urged as a practical way in which industry and employment may be stabilized by the expansion of public works. Dr. Gries in his statement said:

"Certain works of the Federal Government, such as reclamation flood prevention, river and harbor work, roads and public buildings, are peculiarly suited for consideration as large undertakings covering a long period and capable of elasticity of execution to synchronize with cycles of business depression."

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Capt. Frank Courtney and his three British companions were forced to come down on the open ocean today, approximately half way between the Azores islands and Newfoundland, while attempting the second lap of their projected one-stop flight from Lisbon to North America.

Courtney communicated by radio with ships in the vicinity of his landing place, and they, in turn, passed the word along to London and New York that the plane was in no immediate danger but needed help.

The steamships President Hayes, Celtic, and Cebic were reported to have left their regular courses to hasten to Courtney's aid. His position was given as in latitude 42 degrees north and longitude 41 degrees west. That is approximately 720 miles out of Horta in the Azores and 880 miles from Newfoundland.

Spanish Seaplane Fails To Hop Far As Was Planned

FORT OF NEUVA, Spain, Aug. 2.—Riding the surf at La Rabida, from where Christopher Columbus started on the voyage that resulted in the discovery of America, the damaged seaplane Nunsencia waited today to start on a more modern method to reach that same America.

The plane, piloted by Commandant Ramon Franco, was forced to land at La Rabida yesterday morning after having started from Cadiz on the first part of an around-the-world flight.

Engine trouble developing in the first hour of the flight from Cadiz—a flight that was to have its terminus at Horta in the Azores—was believed responsible for the forced landing.

Commandant Franco and his three companions remained in seclusion after the landing. They indicated that they desired to start again for the Azores as soon as possible.

SO SAY WE ALL. Much guff is written about the woes of wealth. Along this line is the following high-powered paragraph from the McKinney Examiner:

"John D. Rockefeller, almost 90, enjoyed himself on Tuesday. He did not find an oil well, a diamond mine, or make $20,000,000 in a quick turn. That would not interest him. He drove a coal wagon down the street in Oswego. With the driver's consent he climbed to the high seat unaided, and was sorry to go back to his big limousine."

Rejoinder is made as follows by State Press in the Dallas News:

"We don't mind agreeing that Mr. Rockefeller was reluctant to return to his limousine. You say he was and we would underwrite your veracity in any case. But if Mr. Rockefeller was sorry to go back to his soft upholstery, why didn't he keep on with the coal wagon? The regular driver of that conveyance wouldn't have pushed him off. He would have been glad to go to sleep in his seat while his rich friend assumed the responsibility. Or, Mr. Rockefeller could have driven over to the coal office and got another wagon for his particular use."

"When we read about millionaires who regret not having any hard work to do we wonder why in the name of Nixcumraus they don't get a hard job and stick to it. They have a habit of claiming they do not enjoy their meals any more, because they have so much food and so little appetite. Nonetheless, they could reduce the bill of fare to the simple proportions they were acquainted with in youth and build up a relish for the pork and beans by doing muscular labor."

"Millionaires are great palaverers. They are always pretending it doesn't do them any good to be rich, but if they were strictly vainglorious they would give their money away and go back to manual toil and the happy life."

"If State Press ever gets rich he is going to advise everybody to follow suit. He is going to tell the world plainly that having wealth is a continuous picnic. He is going to harangue the multitude of the sorrows of money and the responsibility of millionaires. He will, quite to the contrary, mount a rostrum and tell the folks he enjoys his dollars like a cat relishes sardines. He may make himself unpopular with his fellow magnates, but he won't be a hypocrite."

ATTENDS SCHOOL FOR COMMERCIAL EXECUTIVES

(From Pampa Daily News.)

George W. Briggs, manager of the local Chamber of Commerce, returned last evening from Chicago, where he attended a two-week course at Southwestern university, Evanston, Ill., for commercial executives. He was accompanied by Mrs. Briggs and younger son, Burnham. A niece, Miss Eileen Pengro, returned with Mr. and Mrs. Briggs and will make her home with them.

The secretary reports a very beneficial time spent at the university. He has many important matters to place before his board of directors. Classes commenced at 8:30 a. m., and lasted until 4 p. m. each day until Friday, when examinations would be held. Saturday was another day of tests and exams. The school lasted twelve days.

"I feel that my two weeks in Evanston were well spent and that I have received ideas that may be beneficial not only to the Chamber of Commerce, but to the business interests of Pampa," Mr. Briggs stated. "Among the subjects featured at the school were retail trade development and the benefit of a business survey, both of which I plan to utilize in a beneficial program here," he further remarked.

SOAP PERFORMS FUNCTIONS OF MODERN MAGIC

Effects Cleanliness Which Frees Mankind From Many Ills of Flesh and Superstitions.

As ancient beliefs in charms and magic disappear, science is producing more wonderful gifts for the modern world than the alchemists dreamed of. That every-day object, a cake of soap, for instance, has played a remarkable part in freeing mankind from many superstitions, diseases, and other handicaps of an earlier day. It is only a little more than one hundred years ago since Chevreul, a French chemist, evolved the chemistry of soap and made it a practical object of manufacture. Today soap is one of the cheapest and most widely distributed necessities of daily life.

The role played by this humble cleansing agent in improving human welfare has called forth comment from Doctor Henry L. Vaughan, health commissioner of Detroit, Michigan, and former President of the American Public Health Association. In a recent statement Doctor Vaughan points out how habits of cleanliness protect individual health and reduce the spread of disease. "Most of the bacteria on the not capable of causing any specific disease," he declares, "but when any part of the body falls below par they may become destructive. The use of soap and its application to every part of the surface of the body results in the limitation of these and like organisms, both in numbers and in virulence. In the pre-scarp age, pustular diseases of the skin were much more common than they are now."

Even the most cleanly person, the authority continues, must come in contact with his environment, and through this contact the skin gives lodging to extraneous microscopic living things. This may occur in taking hold of a street car strap or even in shaking hands with a friend. Hand to mouth infections are responsible for the spread of a large proportion of communicable disease, especially of those transmitted through the nose and throat. But surrounded as is modern man with the means to cleanliness, it is a simple matter to play safe by washing with soap and water.

Public sanitation has great victories to its credit in the control and prevention of disease. No less do the little habitual acts of cleanliness safeguard our everyday life.

STYLE FOSTERS CRIME

LOS ANGELES—Style changes which constantly demand the purchase of new outfits of clothing has been a factor in the increase of crime among women, according to Mrs. Nettie J. Yaw, deputy sheriff of Los Angeles county. There are now an average of 160 women always confined in the Los Angeles county jail, while when she assumed office here 12 years ago there was but one woman imprisoned, Mrs. Yaw said.

According to the deputy sheriff, most of the women serving prison terms in the Los Angeles jails have been sentenced for passing bad checks in order to obtain money to keep up with the ever changing styles in clothing.

Overseas Highway Very Unique and Draws Travelers

Opportunity to make an overseas trip entirely by automobile or on foot, if one enjoys a really long hike, is now an accomplished fact. This has been brought about through the construction of the Overseas Highway in Florida, which, when completed, will extend from Florida City, on the mainland of the "Everglade State," to Key West, the southernmost outpost of the United States. The route of this great highway is the dividing line between the waters of the Atlantic ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. Except at Upper Matecumbe Key and at Sugar Loaf Key, at which two points the Overseas Highway crosses the "Overseas Railroad," the route of the highway parallels the railroad for the entire distance.

For 130 miles of the way, this unique highway runs over small coral islands known as "keys." Varying in length from twenty-eight miles to one and one-quarter miles, eighteen of these keys form the stepping stones across which this roadway runs. With but few exceptions, these keys are not more than three feet above sea level and, at times, some of them are covered with from six inches to a foot of water. Of course, the roadway has been graded up well above high water.

The surface of the keys and "fills," at some places, will be road, while twenty-six miles of bridges will be necessary to connect the highway with points or land. Of limestone formation, these keys vary in hardness from material which may be dug with pick and shovel to rock of flinty hardness. The liberal use of dynamite, however, solved the problem for the road builders. Considerable quantities of 60 per cent strength explosive were used for leveling the high spots encountered along the right of way.

To obtain material for filling and grading at points along the course of the highway, a novel means was resorted to, this being the blasting of coral rock from beneath the surface of the sea. The fact that dynamite may be used for underwater operations made possible the obtaining of the necessary material.

The Overseas Highway has been formally opened to travel. But, until further work is done, including the building of some bridges, it is necessary to use ferry service between No Name Key and Lower Matecumbe Key. Even so, this affords motorists what is, perhaps, the most interesting and remarkable trip to be enjoyed anywhere in the world.

FEW MEN TEACHERS

ROME—Male teachers are becoming increasingly hard to find for the elementary schools in Italy, according to statements published here, which speak of a crisis in the education field. The figures for 1927 show, that of the 91,000 elementary school teachers in the country, 71,000 were women and 20,000 men.

The institutions which train and examine candidates for the elementary scholastic career enrolled 7905 women and only 702 men last year. The reason given for the desertion of the scholastic career by young men is that they find other professions and businesses more attractive and remunerative.

A number of scholarships has been recently offered for male teachers in order to encourage a readier flow of men recruits for the scholastic profession.

Parasites Affect Afflicted Animals In Different Ways

COLLEGE STATION.—It is difficult to say by merely observing the symptoms of parasitized animals just what particular kind of worm is producing sickness in the flock.

There are four tape worms of dogs, cats and coyotes considered important in this connection since they require the bodies of sheep, goats, cattle or hogs to complete their life cycle.

Three species of tape worms are found in sheep, goats and cattle, the most common of which is the fringed tape worm, Dr. Tunnickoff said.

AMPERE HOME PRESERVED

LYONS.—Thanks to the generosity of the American telephone magnates Sosthenes and Bernard Behn, the house at the village of Poyelmieux where the famous Ampere was raised is now the property of the French Society of Electricians. By a stroke of irony the day the acquisition of the property was celebrated the village of Poyelmieux was first served with electricity. It had been the only village without it. Several members of the French institute, M. Gheusi, rector of the University of Lyons, Gen. Hellot and representatives of the government attended the celebration. President Imbs of the French Society of Electricians made a speech recalling the life of Ampere and thanking the Behn brothers for their gift. Gen. Hellot read a telegram from Messrs. Behn.

Love For Two

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Bertie Lou Ward, on the eve of her wedding to Rod Bryer, receives a sharp-edged paper knife Lila Marsh—the prettiest girl in town—who had turned Rod down because he was not wealthy.

The feel of the metal chilled her. And the thought that it was a dagger to pierce her happiness flashed across her mind so that her dreaming anticipation turned to miserable foreboding. But Bertie Lou courageously resolves not to be jealous of Rod's past love affair. His future is in her keeping.

She was beautiful in her wedding dress, but the joyful singing in her heart ceased just before the ceremony when Bertie Lou accidentally overhears one of her bridesmaids ask another if she thinks the bride likes being second choice.

Dazedly she stands before the altar, but when the words of the minister end and Rod whispers "My wife," with a world of wonder and adoration in his eyes, Bertie Lou knows that she would rather be second choice than to give him up.

Then Lila comes up to offer congratulations. CHAPTER II "Sure, go ahead," Rod replied good-naturedly to Lila's offer to help prepare the housekeeping rooms that he and Bertie Lou would occupy upon their return.

Others were pushing forward for a word with Rod. But Lila had not finished with him. Stung a trifle by Bertie Lou's failure to show any signs of annoyance, she said suddenly, with a high, tinkling laugh: "Well, I suppose I might as well take my last kiss now while I can get it."

Rod did not realize what she was about before she had flung both arms around his neck and given him a lingering kiss full upon the lips. "For the sake of said lang sycos," she added.

People stared as she moved laughingly away. Lila's behavior frequently shocked the townspeople but she had always stopped short of getting herself ostracized. But this, they thought, was going a bit too far. Right under Bertie Lou's nose! And the words that had made her and Rod one still echoing in the air.

Bertie Lou took it like a thoroughbred. She acted just like a bride. Perhaps if nothing had happened to mar the occasion she would not have forgotten the mask of the flapper who wasn't really a flapper at all, but just a sweet girl who was trying to live up to what she thought was expected of modern youth.

But Bertie Lou wasn't going to ignore Lila or passively let matters take their course. Kissing might be in order at a wedding, it was true, but Bertie Lou knew perfectly well that Lila's act meant more than a mere kiss. Whether or not it was to be followed by other overt assaults upon her happiness Bertie Lou could not foretell, but Lila must be put right about it at once.

Bertie Lou lived through two honey-moon weeks of never-to-be-forgotten bliss with nothing to mar them but the shadow of a predatory ex-sweetheart that flapped ominously in the background of her consciousness.

Rod, as a husband, was flawless. He'd always been the finest looking boy in Wayville. But the best thing about him was his utter indifference to his good looks.

He and Bertie Lou thought they had everyone at the Lakeside Hotel fooled about their new status. But that was only because they were too self-contained to see the smiles that followed them everywhere—the revealing, yearning, wistful, envious but good-will smiles.

Bertie Lou even forgot Lila at times. There was that hour on the mossy bank, far back in the hills, under a clump of silver birches where they had lunch and drank from the spring beside the brook.

Bertie Lou's eyes were like summer stars. Rod took her face in his hands. "Oh, Bertie Lou," he said. Her head came to rest on his shoulder and Rod held her like some precious possession he feared to lose. Why, he didn't know it was going to be like this! He was actually blinking tears. Sappy! But he didn't care. He hadn't known what he was jeering at—why, a fellow who wouldn't fall off the sneer wagon at a time like this as dead.

He turned Bertie Lou's face up to his and saw that her eyes, too, were full of tears. They both smiled. "Whose girl are you now, Bertie Lou Bryer?" he said.

"With only one man in the world you ought to know." "Bertie Lou Bryer, you're in love!" "Well, the joke's on you, too," she laughed back at him. "You're just thrilled to death, Mrs. Bryer's husband."

"I know it," Rod returned with mock sheepishness, "but for goodness sake, Mrs. Bryer, don't peddle it." "Perhaps I will—unless you tell me what I want to hear. You know your declarations have always been vague, Roddy. You've left a lot unsaid."

Rod released her. "Come over to that tree. I'm going to broadcast it." It was a towering pine tree. They could smell the fresh spicy odor of it as they stood arm in arm and looked toward it.

"Bertie Lou, you're just a girl," Rod said softly. "I thought you were too advanced to want the old stuff, but I guess maybe you won't scoff if I tell you something that I've wanted to tell you lots of times before."

Rod turned and took her hands in his. "Bertie Lou, I love you more than anything else in the world." They dropped the idiom of the younger set then while they talked of their future. Rod smoked a cigaret without offering one to Bertie Lou. She didn't notice the omission. There was something about the woods that was out of keeping with a cigaret-smoking, vice-cracking girl. The spirit of the place had got into their blood. Its peace and serenity. Bertie Lou forgot Lila.

But Rod's vacation came to an end and they left the woods behind them. Bertie Lou winked back a vagrant tear as she took a last backward look at the scene of her recent happiness. Then she laughed at herself. Why, she wasn't giving up anything! She and Rod were merely transferring their beautiful union from one locale to another.

It didn't work, however, her self-encouragement. She had to face Lila now—face people. Lila's kiss had told everyone that she wasn't through—that and her taking a hand in the fixing up of their new home. Bertie Lou would fight, but she didn't like to.

They were met at the station by a crowd and escorted to their new home over the grocery store. Rod had rented it before they were married and the proprietor had agreed to redecorate the rooms while they were away.

Bertie Lou's Bridesmaids had promised to arrange the furnishings and hang the new curtains that Bertie Lou's mother had made. Bertie Lou was assured that the place was a dream, but her greatest joy was that Lila was not among those who met them. And no one mentioned her. Bertie Lou began to hope that she had ascribed a false importance to Rod's old flame.

And Lila was waiting in the flat. (To be continued)

FERTILITY OF THE SOIL MUST BE PRESERVED

Soil Conservation and Diversification Declared To Be Inseparable.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—Any system of farming that continues to check out soil fertility will eventually destroy the comforts and lower the stability of the farm home and will also destroy business in the cities and towns. A. K. Short terracing and soil conservation agent, Federal Land Bank of Houston, declared in an address on "The Necessity of Soil Conservation" before the crops and farm engineering group of the nineteenth annual Farmers Short Course in session here.

Spanish Flyers and Their World-Touring Plane

twenty times as much as is being used by crops," Mr. Short said. "In speaking of soil conservation, in this section our minds are immediately focused upon terracing," the speaker continued. "This is true of course, because of our enormous waste from soil erosion, yet we must bear in mind that, while this is the first step in the fundamental basis, there is more to soil conservation than that from the mere stopping of soil washing. A study of this problem involves data that has been accumulated and what is actually happening under farm conditions. Also a study of the situation must be centered around our chief farm crop, cotton.

At the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Spur, on land with 2 per cent grade, the land planted to cotton in 1926 lost its soil at the rate of 6 inches in 32 years.

"Soil conservation and diversification are inseparable. We cannot build nor maintain soil fertility without diversification. The practice of diversification will build soil fertility. If we are to

EAST SEES NO HOOVER HOPE IN TEXAS VOTE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Eastern newspapers which have given attention to the Texas election observe no comfort in the primary result of July 28. On the contrary, the vote is generally regarded as an indication that Texas, as well as other sections of the south, will remain "regular."

Under the caption, "No Balm in Texas," the New York Times reviews the Texas result, and particularly the vote received by Thomas B. Love for lieutenant governor, as indicating the anti-Smith trend. In view of the result, says the Times, "Texas must be lifted out of the Hoover hope chest."

What the Times Says. "The likelihood is that the same allegiance to the ancient party faith will be apparent all over the south before the campaign is much further advanced," says the Times editorial.

Relative to the campaign just closed in the Seventeenth Congressional District, in which there were five contestants for the seat vacated by Thomas L. Blanton and in which Mr. Lee and Calloway appear to be the two high men in the number of votes received, with the result that there will be a run-off between them, Mr. Calloway said: "I wish to express my gratitude to the people of the 17th Congressional District for their earnest and loyal support in the campaign closed on the 28th of July. I was in the campaign less than three weeks, presenting my views on vital national issues, against the campaign waged by some of the others for almost a year.

NEW CHEMISTRY BUILDING PLANNED FOR TEXAS U.

AUSTIN.—Substantially in their final form, plans for a new chemistry building on the campus of the University of Texas were submitted to the University Board of Regents at their meeting last week, according to an announcement from the president's office. These plans were discussed, and Comptroller J. W. Calhoun explained various details to the Board, but action on the matter was deferred until the next meeting.

FEEDING HOGS DISCUSSED AT SHORT COURSE

Sows Properly Nourished Before Farrowing Produce Best Litters, Speaker Says.

COLLEGE STATION.—Experience has taught that the time to start feeding a ton litter is at least six months prior to farrowing time and the longer before the better. E. T. Nagle, of Gatesville, Coryell county agent, said in a discussion of "Feeding Ton Litters" before the dairy and swine section of the nineteenth annual farmers short course here.

"We find that properly fed sows produce more pigs to the litter and that the quality of these pigs greatly exceeds that of pigs from the same sow in other litters," he continued. "As an example let me cite the experience of A. D. Chambers, who fed the heaviest litter in the state last year.

"His sow had been fed on the 'Texas ration,' corn and slop, previous to farrowing last year; his sow has been fed a balanced ration, using the Eudaly protein supplement ever since. Last year his sow farrowed 11 pigs, this year she farrowed 14 pigs. Last year at the age of 60 days, his pigs averaged 41 pounds, this year at the same age they averaged 55 1-2 pounds. At 90 days last year they averaged 81 pounds and this year at 90 days 119 1-2 pounds. The pigs were fed and handled in identical manner for both years.

"Our experience has taught us that the Eudaly protein supplement and carbohydrate feeds make as rapid gains as any other ration and do it more economically and for that reason nearly every feeder in Coryell county is using that ration. Most of our men use corn meal as the carbohydrate feed although some are using silo meal and some are using a combination of the two for the sake of variety. All our men feed their entire ration in slop form and we use milk to make up the slop. We find that milk has a greater value than is generally assigned to it and I should not like to try to produce a winning litter without it."

Success in feeding ton litters depends on three factors of equal importance, Mr. Nagle said: The right kind of hogs, the right kind of feed and the right kind of feeding.

Mr. Lee on those issues that are vital, in order that the electorate may understand and determine for themselves.

"I shall ask Mr. Lee to meet me in joint discussions at least once in each county in the district, in order that our positions may be fairly, fully, and honestly discussed. The personal relations between Mr. Lee and myself are perfectly cordial and we are personally better friends than when we started in the campaign. I am certain we shall go through the coming campaign, discussing our different views on national questions on the same high plane and with the same personal good feeling and cordiality that has obtained throughout the campaign just closed.

Good Management In Hog Raising Brings Success

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—Success in the hog business depends largely upon good management which in turn is greatly aided by the use of suitable equipment. E. R. Eudaly, swine husbandman, Extension Service, A. & M. College of Texas, told those attending the dairy and swine section of the nineteenth annual Farmers Short Course in session here.

"By suitable equipment, we do not mean elaborate and expensive equipment but equipment that makes possible good management, the speaker said, "such as farrowing houses that provide plenty of room and that contain properly constructed guard rails, feed troughs in farrowing pens that permits pigs to eat with the sow at an early age, sheds for stock or fattening hogs that are cool in summer and warm in winter, self-feeders that will not permit the hogs to waste the feed nor the rain to wet the feed.

There should be water troughs that will keep the water before the hogs at all times and that will not permit the hogs to get in them and dirty the water. Dipping vats should be provided for ridding the hogs of lice and mange. There should be hog wallows that will keep the hogs cool in summer and that will not be mud holes and they should be located so as not to make the hogs lame. Inexpensive portable

PATTERSON APPRECIATES CONFIDENCE OF PEOPLE

Burdette Patterson, candidate for Associate Justice of the Court of Civil Appeals gave out the following statement concerning his candidacy: "While the reports from over the district are incomplete, it is now apparent that a second primary will be necessary to determine the nominee for this place. I am very grateful for the loyal support of my friends over the district and trust I shall have their continuing support and influence in the second primary. The returns from Eastland county so far show that I have carried this, my home county, over my nearest opponent, who also resides in this county, and I appreciate more than I can express this tribute of confidence and esteem paid me by my home people."

No. 2 Picturphone SYNCHRONIZED FILM MUSIC

NOT THE VITAPHONE

THE PICTURPHONE was inspired by the success of Vitaphone, an instrumentality by which music, speech and sound is accurately synchronized to the action of a motion picture. But let there be no misunderstanding. THE PICTURPHONE to be employed by the Connellee theatre is NOT Vitaphone though it bears similarity to Vitaphone in the fact that it makes use of radio amplification to project sound. While music may be synchronized to the picture with the PICTURPHONE, speech and sound CANNOT be synchronized in the picture as the picture is taken. However, musical interpretation of the picture by means of the PICTURPHONE is as superior to the lone organist as the organist is superior to the electric piano.
