BLAZING THE HOMEWARD TRAIL

When singers of spirituals chant about the "Glorious Road" they may visualize something as beautiful as the photo above, showing a brilliant spectacle of illumination along New York's George Washington bridge and its approach. But it was scarcely a glory road for the thousands of Gothamites in the streaming caravan of cars whose headlights produced the effect. For they were reluctantly blazing the homeward trail across the Hudson river to return to work after a week-end at summer resorts.

Peace and Good Will Are Labored For

We have done a lot of thinking of late about the unfortified frontier between the United States and Canada, and about the "century of peace" between the two nations.

A bit of this unknown background is being unfolded currently in a pleasant little celebration at an old windmill on the St. Lawrence river a mile east of Prescott, Ont.

Probably you never heard of it before, but it was just a century ago that Americans last fought Canadians; and the old windmill was the scene of the fighting.

It seems that in 1838 a band of some 300 Americans crossed the border, bent on destroying a garrison of British regulars at Fort Wellington, in the town of Prescott.

So the invasion took place. It fizzled rapidly. The attack on Fort Wellington failed, the Americans established themselves in the old stone windmill, the Britishers laid siege to the place, and after a couple of days of fighting the Americans surrendered.

All of this sounds very remote and unreal, today. Even at the time it failed to make much of a stir, apparently; and it is worth recalling now only because it indicates that this much-talked-of peace between the two nations is something that had to be worked for.

Americans and Canadians were originally no more disposed to be chummy than any other folk. They had their troubles and they shed blood over them.

Now a century of peace which is built on that kind of foundation really means something. It means that two nations which really try to live in peace can do so; that old hatreds, suspicions and jealousies really can be shelved, and that men of good will can silence the war-mongers if they actually make the effort.

Which, in a world that seems too tired to make the effort to live at peace, is something well worth remembering.

SALEM NEWS

A large crowd attended Sunday school Sunday, reorganized the classes and elected officers and teachers as follows: Superintendent, E. H. Redwine; assistant superintendent, Dause Moore; secretary-treasurer, Eunice Mae Yancey; Bible class teacher, Mr. Ryon; senior class teacher, Earl land Springs, at the mouth of Brady creek, on the San Saba river. In discussing this campsite, Quirl stated that in his opinion the swimming pool formed by the low dam across the creek is "one of the safest and most sanitary in Texas." The maximum depth is 11 feet, and the pool is gradually shallower toward the entrance side. The entire bottom is gravel and the water is estimated to change once in two hours.

The site has a traditional background. Many Indian battles have been fought in the forks of the two streams. Many Indian relics are to be found in and near the camp. Indian sign paintings are on two bluffs, which have been visited by many students of archaeology.

The old Chisholm trail crossed the San Saba above the camp on the San Saba river. Such places as the Richland Springs caverns, Smugglers Draw, Cold Springs, Honeycomb Cave, etc., are in hiking distance of the camp. Many scouts see their first wild deer and turkey while attending camp, Mr. Quirl said.

Last summer more than 300 boys from the council attended the camp, which is operated in two one-week sessions each summer. Camp dates this year are July 12 to 19 and July 20 to 27.

Special events which have already been planned for this summer's camp include a memorial service honoring "Uncle" Billy Gibbons, which will be held Sunday, July 24.

A special entertainment feature of each period will be the "battle of the flours," a mock military engagement in which all the scouts in camp participate and which involves the use of paper bags containing flour as ammunition.

● SERIAL STORY INTERNE TROUBLE BY ELLINORE COWAN STONE

CAST OF CHARACTERS TRAN DEARBORN—heroine, student nurse. She ran into love and trouble when she met DR. BOB BENCHLEY—hero, handsome young interne. He had trouble, too, keeping up with brilliant DR. STEPHEN SARGENT—head surgeon. Dr. Sargent's problem was something else again.

Yesterday, Tran blunders into the emergency operating room on her first day in the hospital and is ordered out. Very shortly she has to need the benefit of prayer!

CHAPTER II

WITH burning cheeks Tran fled down the corridor—away from those cruelly amused male voices in Emergency. For, although nothing was further from her ethical code than to eavesdrop, she had heard. . . Her resentment was entirely directed toward the homely, dark young interne who had snickered. As for Top Sarge, of course, no one would have thought of questioning his right to be caustic, any more than if it had been a law of nature. He was "Top Sarge." Nevertheless that "leather-brain" did rankle.

She had a good deal of difficulty in finding the rest of the demonstration group, because no one had considered it worth while to tell her beforehand just where they were going, or why.

It began to occur to her that by this time Miss Miller, the senior nurse in charge of the group, just might have missed her. And Miss Miller had an unpleasantly direct way of asking questions.

In the end, it was the homely young interne from Emergency who set her feet in the right path. She came dashing around a corner just as she hastily shut the door to a private room which she had opened by mistake.

There had been a rather unpleasant moment just after she had opened that door. The patient, a florid blond lady, had sat up in bed and demanded in a shrill, lyric soprano, "For God's sake—is this a private room, or a subway station? All I want is a little peace. Heaven knows I'm paying enough for it."

The nurse in charge rustled hastily toward Tran, frowning and whispering, "Sh-sh!" And Tran again took to her heels.

SO it was that as young Dr. Benchley hurried around the corner she ran directly into his arms.

"Well," he gasped. "If it isn't our little Utility again! But say—whoever named you missed a bet. He should have made it 'Agility.' . . . For Pete's sake, kid—this is a hospital not a race track. You'd better get back where you belong."

Nevertheless he steadied her, grinning companionably down at her till she got her breath. . . His grin somewhat mitigated her resentment. It transformed his dark face from an interesting ugliness to a flashing charm.

As a matter of fact, she found herself suddenly liking him so much that she utterly failed to notice that he was still supporting her; and although she took her cheeks firmly between her teeth, her eyes became starry wells of mischief.

"How about yourself?" she demanded. "After all, this isn't Emergency either, is it?"

"Dr. Sargent," he said with dignity, "got so much interested in fishing for that bullet himself that he sent me out to take a telephone call for him."

"Just a couple of errand boys, aren't we?" Tran said.

She owed him that one for snickering.

He acknowledged the thrust with a crooked grin. Then, as an elevator whirred in the shaft behind him, he released her hastily, and thrust his hands into his pockets as if to keep them out of temptation.

"Say, listen, Agility," he admonished in a lowered tone, "don't let

"Well," he gasped. "If it isn't our little Utility again!"

old Sarge get you down. He's a good egg really; but with half the females in this hospital making passes at him, you can't blame him for getting a little scratchy when he finds a new one breathing down his neck."

"Really?" Tran said with delicate caution. "Well, I can't imagine any one pursuing him from personal motives—unless she was looking for a chance to put poison in his soup."

"You wait. In no time at all, you'll be swooning with adoration when he passes, like all the rest of them," said Dr. Benchley, grinning down at her, his hands still in his pockets.

Then as a door opened down the corridor, he said swiftly, "Listen, Agility, if Miller misses you and sends out a search party, you might as well turn in your apron. . . For your information, I just passed her little flock going into K-6. . . If Miller asks embarrassing questions," he called softly as she turned away, "the old one about having a nose bleed may work."

TRAN sped off down the corridor.

K-6 was the Women's Surgical ward.

By good luck the door stood open. Tran slid in like a slim gray wraith and joined the little group of aproned girls following Miss Miller's crisp white linen down the long room.

Miss Miller might have modeled for a Red Cross poster as the ideal nurse. She was erect and trim, blond and coolly lovely as a snow maiden, with quietly watchful blue eyes, slim, beautiful white hands, and an air of serene detachment which had won for her the nickname "the icicle." . . . Miss Miller was not a regular nursing instructor; but as a nurse, she was recognized as tops. Rumor had it that she was Dr. Stephen Sargent's favorite nurse—a rumor, Tran knew, which gave her enormous prestige throughout the hospital.

Now, "the icicle's" cool, quiet voice was explaining the organization and management of the long white ward through which they were passing.

Meantime, on either side of the long aisle, the ward nurses—some graduates in their trim white uniforms, caps and white shoes, and a sprinkling of student nurses in gray striped dresses and white bibbed aprons—lined up at respectful attention as Miss Miller passed. That was because here Miss Miller was supervisor, and consequently senior nurse.

It was all rather like a military inspection. Tran found herself feeling absurdly small and insignificant as part of so much pomp and circumstance—and more than a little uneasy, even while she managed her most convincing expression of grave, respectful attention. . . Had Miss Miller missed her? . . . SHE was not long left in doubt. When it was over, and Miss Miller had marched her double line of gray-clad girls back to their quarters, she summoned Tran with a lifted eyebrow and a backward inclination of her smooth blond head. The rest fled away with carefully restrained glances of curiosity and pity which were by no means lost upon Tran. . . She had been seen then. "The icicle" began crisply, "Now it's no use wasting my time with the one about stopping to tie your shoelace and getting lost. No," she went on as Tran half opened her lips, "nor the bromide about having had the nose bleed, either. They both grew whiskers years ago. . . Besides, I'm not even going to ask you where you've been. Because I know."

"I'm sorry—" Tran began.

But Miss Miller raised a slim hand for silence.

"I should prefer," she went on, "to let the matter rest between us. After all, it's no credit to me to have girls in my charge openly defiant of discipline. But unfortunately I am not the only one who saw you follow Dr. Sargent into Emergency. . . I'm not even asking you why you did it. You can explain that to the Director of Nursing. I have repeatedly noticed in your attitude a tendency to frivolity which has no place in the nursing profession." . . . Miss Miller was one of Tran's superiors who had frequently found those uncontrollably dancing eyes of hers vaguely disconcerting. . . "I might warn you," she went on, "that you will not find anything in Miss Armstrong's displeasure that you can laugh off."

It was just after Tran had finished dissecting a particularly juicy and loathsome frog in the zoology laboratory next day and had gone to her room to clean up that the summons from Miss Armstrong came.

THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The year's most sensational rumor has been killed off by the General Motors announcement of operating schedules.

The rumor, believed and repeated in the highest places, simply was that the big three automobile companies were going to close down until after election.

The version attributed to Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, after a visit to the White House, was that this move was deliberately planned as a political blow at the New Deal. Fantastic or otherwise, the yarn was given so much credence that Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson was asked to check up on such laws as there might be which covered "conspiracy against the public welfare."

From Palo Alto came a report that Herbert Hoover had explained to Leland Stanford professors that the industry would fold up until after elections, delaying decisions on new models and postponing fall openings, because of its uncertainty and fear.

CORRESPONDENTS who kept trying to check these and other versions could be sure only that the industry would produce relatively few cars in the next two or three months because of heavy inventory, that there was inside pressure for postponement of fall openings until January and that many interested persons—including certain automobile men—had engaged in a lot of loose talk.

Now General Motors announces that its plants will close on an average only three weeks longer than the usual annual shutdown for inventory and model changes. Which means at least a thing less for Washington to be hot and bothered about.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT the committee which is over to study British labor and conditions that he wanted to find out why there was relatively little opposition in England to union organization and collective bargaining.

THERE'S so much dynamite H. R. 10936, a bill introduced by Congressman David J. Lewis of Maryland, that it probably will be considered seriously.

The bill proposes that any U. S. senator or representative who gages in law practice with a partner or associate who acts as attorney or agent in any case opposition to the interests of the service of the United States shall publicly disclose all items income received by himself a partner in that connection.

The obvious next step would be to require lawyer-members of Congress to disclose fees from identity of all clients whom they or their law firms represent, with in many cases might be no embarrassing.

But Lewis, who tossed the bill in at the last minute, appears to be seeking to build up a campaign issue against his opponent, Senator Millard Tydings, member of Baltimore law firm.

SPORT GLANCES By Grayson

BY HARRY GRAYSON Sports Editor, NEA Service

WITH the New York Yankees having a tough time making the fight for second place, it might not be a bad idea for Joe McCarthy to bring in the Newark Bears. . . . Look what Cleveland has done with nothing more than a Newark manager, Oscar V. . . . Although that is all the Yanks need, the Giants continue to turn to them for help. . . . Bill Terry didn't require a right-hitter any more than Max Schmelz could use Max Machon's left towel, which is why the Cheerless Leader paid Newark plenty.

Bob Weiss, who leads organized baseball in home runs. . . . George Weiss, director of Colonel Ruppert's minor league clubs, obviously wasn't satisfied with having unloaded Blondy Ryan at the Browns. . . . If Vernon Gomez hadn't already had so much trouble in court, he'd have an excellent suit for non-support against the Yankee mags. . . . In 19 innings, they provided Lefty with just a run. . . . Joe McCarthy blames much of the Yanks' difficulty to the Newark pitchers. . . . He says the front office insists upon being used. . . . And hopes the higher-ups shortly will be convinced that they do not yet belong in the American League.

EDDIE MEADE played an important part in Joe Louis' knock-out of Schmeling. . . . It was on May 30, while watching the champion work out, that Meade told John Roxborough and Jack Blackburn: "You've got the greatest puncher in the business, and you have him waste time blocking punches when all he should do is throw them." . . . The remark put the fat manager of Henry Armstrong in the Brown Bomber's corner. . . . The only thing surprising about the Schmeling scrap was that they paid $940,000 to see . . . Wait! Hoyt has replaced George Earnshaw as ace of the Brooklyn Bushwicks, a semi-professional organization. . . . He gets a month. . . . If Burling Grimes gets the air in Flatbush, it reported that he can't return to St. Louis and boss the Browns. . . . Johnny Allen leads all other pitchers in winning percentage. . . . fiery Cleveland Indian has won 94 and lost 30. . . . He capped straight in 1937, and nine in a row this trip.

WILLIAM P. JACOBS, president of Presbyterian College of Clinton, S. C., believes the shortage of new blood essential to the well being of United States Davis Cup teams is due to lack of opportunity for boys to develop their talents and conflicting college systems. . . . His remedy is to assemble about 150 youths from colleges and schools in the southeast every October for a three-session of practical instruction under competent professionals. . . . Tommy Farr believes that his style troubles Louis more than other, and the record bears him out. . . . The Welshman went . . . Howard Mills of the Browns failed to make the headlines. . . . he shut out the Yanks with four hits. . . . But Mills has been playing good ball for quite a while. . . . The recruit left-hander's 13 innings to win one game and lost a hard luck decision which home run that put the Browns ahead was washed out and game reverted to even innings, St. Louis and Mills losing.

College Goal For Mother of 53 Draws Near Realization

By United Press
ANNA, Ill.—Mrs. Mable Keith Lesar, 53, a widow and the mother of three sons, who was graduated from the Anna high school in May, will be a freshman this September at the University of Illinois.

Just 32 years ago, Mrs. Lesar planned to graduate from high school in Anna, which is in Union county. Illness and hardships prevented. Now, after a struggle lasting three decades, during which she lost her husband in the 1918 influenza epidemic and found herself with three sons, a heavily mortgaged home and no means of support, she has realized her girlhood ambition.

Mrs. Lesar's three sons all have completed high school. Two of them are graduates of the University of Illinois and the third is a student there. One of the graduates is an assistant professor at the University of Kansas.

TO RELATE LIFE HISTORY

NOBLE E. BERRYHILL

Evangelist Noble E. Berryhill of Fort Worth, an ex-marine who is conducting a revival at the Church of the Nazarene in Eastland, will relate the story of his life tonight. He will be dressed in his marine uniform and use the theme, "How a Devil Dog Became a Devil Driver," which will include adventures in marine life, his conversion and call to preach. The revival ends Sunday night.

Saturday night his subject will be "From the Hills of Nicaragua to the Land of Glory." Sunday morning the subject slated is "The Forbidden Drink that Adam and Eve ate in the Garden of Eden, What it is!"

Sunday night the evangelist will preach on "The Sin God Will Not and Can Not Forgive or When Does a Man Sin Away His Days of Grace."

Guards Foil Prison Break

A dramatic episode from Columbia's "Penitentiary," showing Sunday and Monday at the Connellee Theatre. The casualty is Marc Lawrence, Walter Connolly, as the warden, and John Howard, as a convict, seem to have been intimately concerned with the goings-on, as have the two guards. Jean Parker and Robert Barrat are featured in the film also.

Decision On Cattle Imports from Mexico Is Due From Court

By United Press ALAMOGORDO, N. M. — The Otero county district court is expected to render its decision within two weeks on whether cattle can be imported from Mexico and held for three years without taxation.

The question revolved about the old A. B. Fall Three Rivers ranch. The Tres Ritas Ranch corporation, present operators of the ranch, contended that the 700,000-acre ranch was a "government bonded warehouse" and the 7,000 head of Mexican cattle on it were exempt from taxation.

M. A. Threet, district attorney of Otero county, maintained that the federal government's wording "stable or part, thereof may be a government warehouse" was not liberal enough to include open range in Otero and Lincoln counties.

"Otero county is handicapped by the fact that the U. S. Treasury has already bonded the company, but the county has not given up $1,800 in taxes which the treasurer collected on imported cattle and their offspring, or the $700 collected by Lincoln county," Threet said.

Threet said that the federal law specified "if an original package has been broken and contents mixed with other property, it automatically ceases to be bonded." He contended that livestock on an open range, mixing freely with 200 native bulls, as the company petition showed, constituted "broken packages" and the increase at least was subject to taxation.

Cattlemen of the area showed interest in the case. The important phase, observers explained, was "if this company can import Mexican cattle and hold them three years without taxation, there should be nothing to prevent every cowman having his herd tax-free under the theory of bonded warehouse."

Timid diners all over the world will applaud this one. Science has succeeded in setting a window into the shell of an egg.

Youth Has Fright Of Life When He Is Lost Overboard

By United Press PORT ARTHUR, Tex. — John Rainey, 22, dived overboard to swim in Lake Sabine while sailing with Caleb Hammond. This resulted in the fright of his life.

Hammond brought the sailboat about to pick up the youth but foot-high waves concealed the swimmer. Hammond returned to Port Arthur to organize a searching party.

Meanwhile, almost exhausted, Rainey discovered that he could touch the bottom of the lake with his feet. He waded half a mile to shore, hailed a tugboat and was brought home after being lost 10 hours.
