Highway 89 Almost Ready For Traffic

After an inspection tour of the highway 89 project, from Weatherford to a point east of Ranger, the state reported Saturday by J. E. Gray, secretary of the Transportation Department, that the highway was expected to be completed within 15 to 21 days, depending largely on the weather.

All but six miles of the eastern end of the highway has been topped with topping progressing at a rate of from one-half to three-quarters of a mile per day.

The crew is being removed on Monday, contractors reported, to Kings road, where three miles of topping is to be completed before the work on Highway 89 is finished.

In addition to the topping on the eastern end of the highway, remains one-half mile of road and topping to be installed at Weatherford, contractors reported, and the work is expected to be completed in a very short time.

Alternative plans call for a "Highway 89 Celebration," to be held when the road is finally ready for traffic, possibly with a picnic on the Brazos river. These plans are only a suggestion, however, and the celebration may take some other form.

Jap Invasion Of China Reaches Critical Stage

By United Press
Japanese invasion of China entered an extremely critical stage today, due to increasing danger to American and other foreign interests and intensified counter blows by Chinese, aided by floods along the Yangtze.

Grave worries haunting the Japanese high command were indicated by another request that foreign warships move out of the Yangtze war zone and they go to unusual lengths to mark themselves as foreign vessels.

A similar previous request that foreign warships paint their decks red was rejected by the United States Naval Command.

Behind the Japanese request was a desire to speed up their offensive against the Chinese capital at Hankow. Unless Japan moves quickly the Yangtze river floodwaters may turn back the invaders if Chinese defenses fail.

Meanwhile the crisis in Palestine, where rioting between Jews and Arabs has taken 64 lives and wounded at least 160 in the last week, continued serious despite arrival of 1,200 British troop reinforcements.

CROWDS AWAIT FOR ARRIVAL OF PRESIDENT

FORT WORTH, July 9.—Texas' political faithful flocked to Fort Worth tonight to greet President Franklin D. Roosevelt on his week-end stop here to relax from a cross country trip, to rally support for the new deal.

All advance notices were that his Texas stay was to be "non-political" if such was possible during a campaign year. Elliott Roosevelt, riding into Texas on his father's train from Oklahoma, said "no political audiences will be held" when the president visits his son's home.

Democratic leaders and candidates, nevertheless, planned to greet Mr. Roosevelt and some to accompany him from Fort Worth to Amarillo Monday.

Gov. Allred headed the group that met the presidential special.

Among those absent was Vice President John N. Garner, frequently mentioned as an opponent of the new deal policies. Garner's office at Uvalde reported that the vice president would spend the week-end at his home, possibly fishing.

Mr. Roosevelt's train was due from Oklahoma City shortly before midnight. He will remain at his son's rural home until Monday morning, when the trip west is to be resumed.

The president will speak briefly over a radio network Sunday night. He will appear on the train's rear platform at Wichita Falls and speak to a Panhandle crowd in a two-hour stopover at Amarillo.

Enroute to Oklahoma City the president referred to Sen. Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, as "my old friend." The president, speaking from his train at McAlester, said that "we want to elect men who will help, not hinder."

Friday he assisted Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky and Sen. Robert Bulkley.

Our Destiny Isn't Dream—It's Work

Probably the greatest danger facing the American people today is not so much the danger that they will fail to do something right.

In some ways we are a peculiar people. We have our emotional ups and downs, and they often carry us a long way; but underneath everything we still have that old-fashioned trust in our own star—the feeling that somehow, sometime, we shall come out all right because it is so written in the skies. And while that is a good feeling to have, it could lead to disaster.

Arthur T. Vanderbilt, president of the American Bar Association, touched on this point the other day in an address before Yale Law School alumni at New Haven.

"The most deadly problem facing America is not fascism nor collectivism," he said. "It is the widespread feeling that we have a destiny and that we shall reach it without individual thought, individual initiative or active public service."

Belief in one's destiny is a fine thing to have—but not if that belief gets set up as an idol, to be worshipped on holy days and fast days with fine talk and fancy phrases, but never to be served by actual deed.

And there is a real danger that we may begin giving our belief that kind of service. As a matter of fact, there are plenty of signs that we have already begun to do so.

We are, for instance, fond of saying that we are the richest country in the world and that therefore widespread poverty and unemployment should not long endure in our land. That is a perfectly sound and sensible statement; but when we simply let it rest there, and blissfully sit on our hands waiting for poverty and unemployment to end themselves, we are giving way to a foolish and dangerous trust in our own destiny.

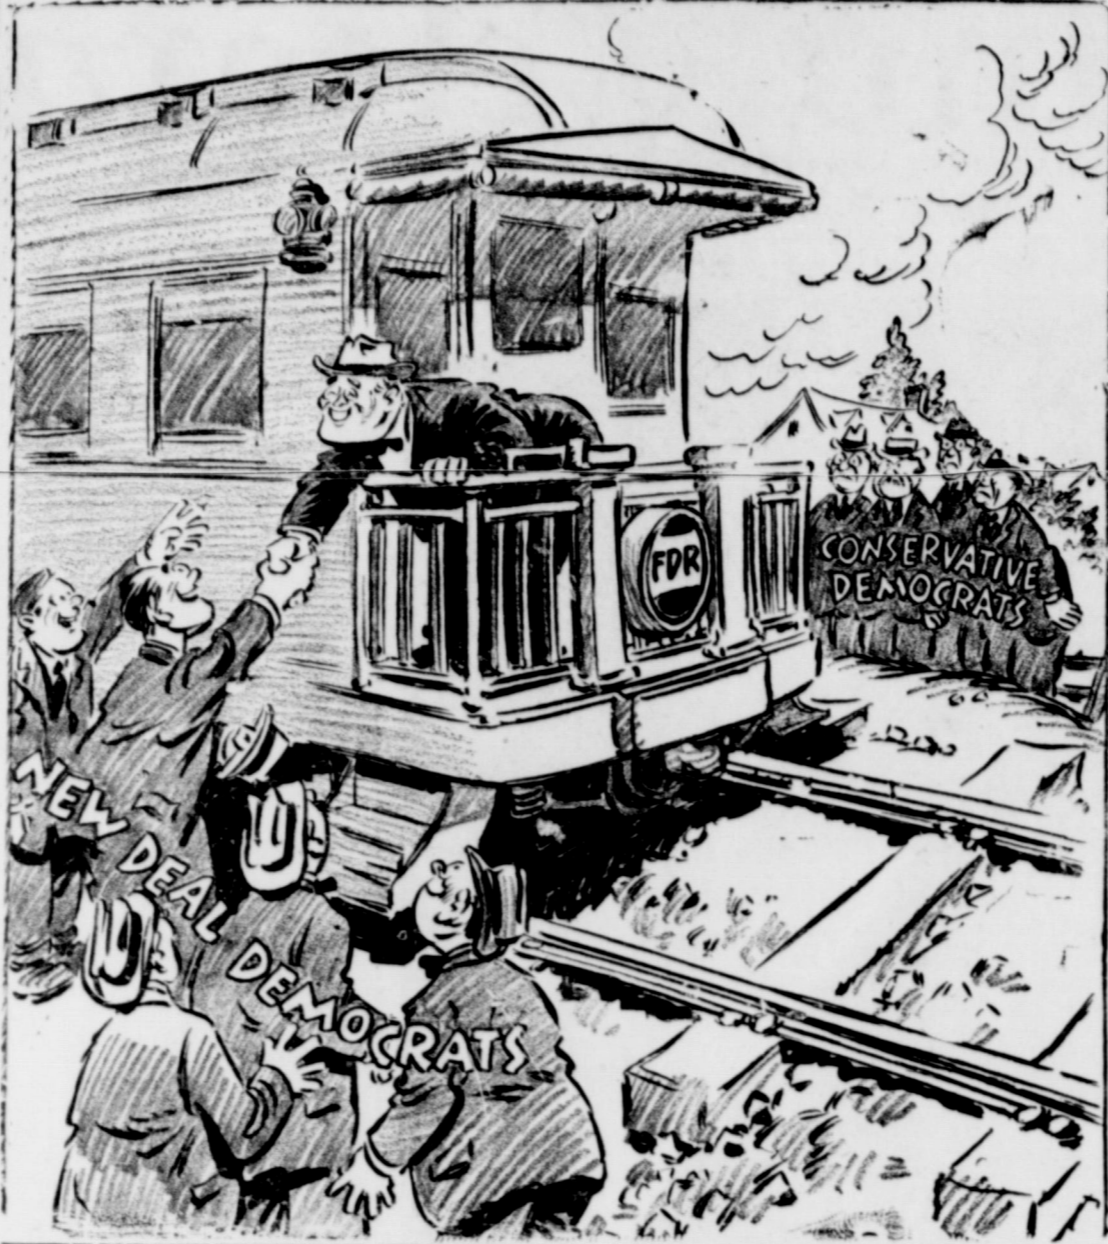

What we need to understand is that no people's destiny is really written in the minds and hearts of men, instead, and is hammered out by toil, self-sacrifice, courage and the kind of practical, shirt-sleeves faith that moves mountains.

It was our destiny, perhaps, to win our freedom from England, to expand and conquer a continent, to establish a working democracy and to provide the common man with a practical vision of freedom. Yet those things were not done by a people who sat back and beamed fondly on the mysterious workings of fate; they were done by people who got down into the thick of things and worked their heads off.

So perhaps we would be better off if we stopped talking about our destiny. Our destiny is what we make it—no more and no less.

The Boys on the Other Side of the Tracks

Cooperative Home Project To Start In Ranger July 18

The National Youth Administration's part-time project on resident training for girls of Eastland county, will get underway in Ranger Monday, July 18, it was announced Saturday by Mayor Hall Walker of Ranger, after a conference with H. A. Ziegler, assistant district supervisor for the NYA. The project was approved Saturday by J. C. Kellam, state director.

Quarters for the resident training project will be in one of the old Mid-Kansas houses in Ranger, which has been secured by the sponsors, City of Ranger, assisted by Eastland county.

The setup is being made for 40 girls per month, with the possibility that accommodations for more girls may be provided later. White girls between the ages of 18 and 24 from WPA families, farm security families, old age assistance families or from families of low income will be eligible.

The girls will work a total of 47 hours per month on projects outside the cooperative home and will earn enough to pay their room and board and medical attention, and have about $8 per month left over for their personal use.

One group of 20 girls will be at the project for 15 calendar days, after which they will return to their homes and another group of 20 girls will replace them, the two groups rotating for a period of six months.

The girls will work in the City-County hospital, the nursery school and in public offices, with instruction being provided by the home supervisor, Mrs. Hattie H. Bragg, in homemaking. They will work four hours outside the project and two hours in the home. It is possible that a full-time teacher may be secured through the department of education to conduct regular classes at the home.

A recreational project is also to be worked out, with a girls' softball team being organized, which will go to Mineral Wells to play the NYA project girls in that city.

Already 35 applications have been approved and medical examinations given for girls who want to take up work under the project, and the Ranger cooperative home is expected to be the second largest in the state. It will also be the second in the district of 21 counties, Ziegler stated. The average home in the state cares for 20 girls.

Girls from all over Eastland county, both from rural, city and small town homes will be eligible for employment under the project, and a number have been approved from over the entire county.

Applications may be filed with Mrs. Long at the Ranger relief office.

John Wood Visits Here Saturday

John Wood, senior member of the Texas Highway Commission, and candidate for railroad commissioner, spent Saturday afternoon here, concluding a week of campaigning spent in the Panhandle and West Texas.

"Campaigning in West Texas has been a revelation and a delight," said Mr. Wood, "for these people out here talk straight from the shoulder just like they do in Shelby county, where I came from. I am glad to say that enough of them promised me active support to make me confident of being in the second primary and ultimate winner."

"I am running for railroad commissioner strictly on my record as a highway commissioner, and that record is well known over Texas. I have never let political considerations dictate a single vote of mine and when on the railroad commission I will fight to keep that body free of the blight of petty politics."

Mr. Wood left late Saturday afternoon for Mineral Wells, where he was invited to be guest of a group of citizens at a supper in his honor.

It's the little humble things that make a house a HOME

THOSE careless marks of his baby fingers . . . could any one buy them from you now? The knee-high smudges on the door! The pencil scratches on the wall that showed his growth from two to a little man of six! The nicked nursery bed where you two watched for hours one night until a sprawled, feverish form slipped into healing slumber!

Yes, a home is seasoned with smiles and tears, mellowed by memories and flavored with hopes. Each room has well-loved articles that have grown dearer with the years. And there are new things that you are working and planning for. It may be an occasional table for the living-room. New drapes for the breakfast nook. A summer rug. Porch and lawn furniture.

The advertisements in this newspaper bring you news of furnishings to freshen your home. Study them and save shopping steps and budget dollars. They will help you add to the gracious charm of your home . . . that little world which is your very own!

BIG GUNS OF POLO BOOM AT MEADOW BROOK—Preparing for an exciting campaign, four of the nation's top polo stars are snapped at historic International Field in Westbury, L. A LA FASHION MODE—(1) White lace with flounced skirt and strapless decolletage is appealingly quaint. (2) Shimmering black cire satin is veiled with hand-tied black silk fish net. The flaring tunic and back hemline of the overskirt accentuate the sheathed figure line. Writing in Collier's, the Texas Congressman states that "instead of spending billions which may lead us into trouble abroad, we should spend millions on shore defenses to insure peace at home."

COFFEE INDUSTRY PICKS QUEEN—A storm of applause as this photo was taken swept Joan Carson, beautiful stenographer of the Hotel Commodore, into the title of "Miss Coffee." She was chosen by 1,500 members of the coffee industry from the prettiest girl employees of New York Hotels, and will represent the industry during Iced Coffee Week. Insert shows Miss Carson with her crown of coffee blossoms symbolic of her title.

"EARTHQUAKE" VIOLIN—Pasadena, Calif.—Working from the idea that both earthquakes and music are caused by vibrations, Dr. Hugo Benioff, of the California Institute of Technology, has developed the "earthquake" violin, whose mellow tone has amazed musicians. It has no wooden front or back, but in place of the wooden sounding box there is a small aluminum container under the strings.

SERIAL STORY INTERNE TROUBLE BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

CAST OF CHARACTERS TRAN DEARBORN—heroine, student nurse. She ran into love and trouble when she met DR. BOB BENCHLEY—hero, handsome young interne. He had trouble, too, keeping up with brilliant DR. STEPHEN SARGENT—head surgeon. Dr. Sargent's problem was something else again.

Yesterday, Tran is admonished for her breach and the next day is summoned by Miss Armstrong, nursing director.

CHAPTER III WHEN Tran got back to her room, Beula Tagg, her roommate, had just returned from an uncomfortable 15 minutes of her own in Miss Armstrong's office.

"She said," Beula outlined the interview gloomily, "that neatness in dress is a primary requisite for a successful nurse. But will you tell me how any girl can look really snappy in these meal sacks they call student uniforms?"

Tran tried to reconcile sympathy with truth.

"They aren't exactly slimming," she agreed. "And it's my bet they were designed by a father of 10 whose war cry was, 'A woman's place is the home.'" But who are robes to be chosen?"

As a matter of fact, Tran could afford to be philosophical. On her own slim figure the gray uniform, with its plain white cuffs and collar and its voluminous white apron, had somewhat the effect of a demurely picturesque peasant masquerade.

Beula looked comforted, but not entirely reassured as she continued to twist and turn before the mirror.

"I suppose I might try not trying the strings so tight," she observed, frowning.

"It would be more to the point if you'd try passing up the second and third helpings of dessert," Tran suggested unamiably.

It was a tactical error. As a nurse, Tran was her senior—any by the three days, it is true, which a flooded railroad track had made Tran late in matriculating; but as Beula saw it, it might as well have been three years. . . . That was one funny thing about this business of seniority. Logically, the senior nurse should have been the one in authority. But "senior nurse," it appeared, could be a purely relative term, depending entirely on length of service.

So far as Tran could see, every girl in the hospital except herself was senior to some one else, and so to be respected as such. . . .

Beula Tagg chose the present moment to enforce the point.

"Say, listen, Tran—Miss Armstrong wants you. Beat it! And, she finished, tying her apron with a final vicious jerk, 'may God save money on your soul! Because if Miss Armstrong's heard about yesterday, your name won't be 'Tranquility' or even 'Utility' any longer. It'll be plain 'Futility'."

By way of bracing herself for the coming interview, Tran quoted to herself, as she hurried along the miles of passage that led to Miss Armstrong's office, certain inspirational passages from the last lesson in "A Nurse and Her World": "To admit the possibility of fear is to be defeated"—"A nurse must be in command of her own emotions before she can hope to command unpleasant situations."

"Sure! Tran muttered to herself. The only trouble is that Miss Armstrong wrote that book, herself."

SHE was hesitating on the threshold of the office when the door opened, and young Dr. Benchley came out. Just inside was Miss Armstrong herself. She stood respectfully at attention, as a good nurse should in presence of one of the medical hierarchy; but if it had been any one but Miss Armstrong, Tran would have sworn that she did so with her own will in her cheek.

"A. for Dr. Benchley, his flushed face wore much the look of a small boy caught with the jam pot. Just as the door opened, Tran distinctly heard him say, 'Yes, Ma'am. I won't forget again—honest.'"

"You may come in, Miss Dearborn," the director said. "And now will you please sit down and tell me exactly why, when you should have been with Miss Miller yesterday afternoon, you were standing in the west corridor with Dr. Benchley's arms around you?"

Tran was caught so completely off her guard by this unforeseen attack that she could only sit, her eyes getting bigger and darker and more startled.

"Perhaps," Miss Armstrong was going on, "I should explain that at the moment I happened to be going up in the west corridor elevator—and the elevator, if you recall, has glass doors."

After a moment Tran said in a small, helpless voice, "Oh, yes! Of course. . . . I was, wasn't I?"

Then because, in her complete stupefaction, she had forgotten to catch her cheeks between her teeth, she giggled.

"Oh, I—I'm sorry!" she gasped. "Now Miss Armstrong would think she was shameless. . . . But," she stammered on, "I—well, you really couldn't have helped yourself. . . . You see I ran into him so hard I almost knocked him down, and naturally—"

"I see," Miss Armstrong spoke almost casually. SHE was tall and strongly made—still lithe and sure at 60—with lively, shrewd, humorous brown eyes under a mass of softly waving white hair. . . . Eyes that knew how to be very kind.

"And just where," she went on dryly, "were you running? . . . From or to, I mean?"

"To and from," Tran corrected desperately, gripping the arms of her chair. "To Miss Miller's class and from Emergency. . . . Oh, Miss Armstrong, I do so want to be a surgical nurse, and two policemen were bringing a man with a bullet in him into Emergency just as we passed the door."

After what seemed to Tran a hundred years, Miss Armstrong said again, "I see. . . . This learning to nurse does seem like a long, drab affair sometimes, doesn't it? But sometimes I wish some of you girls could have known it—well, when I was in training, for instance. In those days, for the course you've heard about discipline until you're tired of it." "Oh, no!" Tran cried quickly. "Not like this. Please go on!"

SO Miss Armstrong did go on and as Tran listened, her eyes dark and shining, she had no need to bite her cheeks. Never in her life had she been farther from laughter.

When she finally got up to go—because, somehow, without a suggestion having been made, she knew that that was what was expected of her—she found that she understood why it was that the older nurses swore by Miss Armstrong, why jaunty young internes, leaving her presence, sometimes looked like repentant small boys, why it was that, as nurses, her graduates ranked highest in the state.

At the last moment Miss Armstrong had said, "Of course, if you are especially interested in surgical nursing, you will want some time to work with Dr. Sargent. Every young nurse should. May I make a suggestion?"

Her face was grave, but her dark eyes twinkled. . . . Tran found herself wondering if sometimes, years ago, Miss Armstrong might have had to bite her cheeks, too.

"It seems to me," the director went on, "that if I were a young nurse, and wanted to work with Dr. Sargent—oh, especially with Dr. Sargent—I should make a point of keeping myself discreetly out of his way until I was so sure of my workmanship that I knew I could not make a mistake."

"Yes, Miss Armstrong," Tran almost choked with reverent gratitude. "I'll be as self-effacing as—as one of those boys—the research laboratories never have been able to find."

She meant it with all her soul! But unfortunately, Tran was one to whom the unpredictable seemed fated to happen.

"You have added insult to injury," the magistrate told him, "by selling American flags made in Japan."

"I see," Miss Armstrong spoke almost casually. SHE was tall and strongly made—still lithe and sure at 60—with lively, shrewd, humorous brown eyes under a mass of softly waving white hair. . . . Eyes that knew how to be very kind.

Public cordially invited. "Sacrament" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 10.

The Golden Text is: "Let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth" (1 Corinthians 5:8).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me" (Psalms 51:10).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The baptism of Spirit, washing the body of all the impurities of flesh, signifies that the pure in heart see God and are approaching spiritual Life and its demonstration" (page 241).

Mule Hitch Hikes On a Strawstack

MEXIA, Texas—Kenneth Parrish's mule hitched-hiked a ride on a strawstack during a recent flood and that trip cost his life.

Flooded Mustang Creek surged over its banks and the mule scampered up on the stack. The waters swept the straw 1,000 feet and dumped the mule into a barbed wire fence. The mule's injuries were so serious that Parrish had to shoot him.

THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Between now and election day, at least $275,000,000 will be paid out to farmers by AAA.

The effect on purchasing power and business, however, should be more important than the political effect. About $200,000,000 of the money will go to cotton-producing states, most of which are normally solidly Democratic.

Confidential estimates prepared by government experts indicate that nearly $145,000,000 will be disbursed in payments under the regular AAA farm program in the next four months and nearly $130,000,000 under the cotton price adjustment program within the next few months.

States receiving the most money

POLITICAL advice from Vice President John N. Garner: "I'd rather have the barbers with me than the bankers, for three reasons: First, there are more of them. Second, the barbers talk. And, third, and more important, the barbers vote."

and the approximate amounts are expected to be: Texas $46,576,000; Georgia, $18,813,000; Alabama, $18,602,000; Oklahoma, $16,151,000; Mississippi, $15,000,000; Arkansas, $13,578,000; South Carolina, $13,463,000; Iowa, $12,000,000; Missouri, $10,165,000; Minnesota, $10,000,000; North Carolina, $9,512,000; Louisiana, $9,342,000; Tennessee, $6,150,000; Illinois, Kansas, Wisconsin and North Dakota, about $6,000,000 each, and California, $5,770,000.

The proviso was first offered in the 1937 act by Congressman Cannon of Missouri, a grower. Adopted, it interrupted a program of Food and Drug administration research and experimentation on dogs. Congress appropriated $50,000 to the Public Health Service for the work. The U. S. P. H. S. has yet been heard from. (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service Staff)

Deborah: Emergency Leadership

Text: Judges 4:1-9, 12-14

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

THE course of the Israelites in the Promised Land was not one of smoothness and ease in prosperity. They had conquered their enemies, but in a sense their enemies also conquered them, for they fell victims to the immoral worship and practices of the surrounding peoples. As our record puts it they "did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah"; and the evil which they did corrupted their social and political life and led them into new dangers.

Jabin, king of Canaan, and Sisera, his great captain, came threatening Israel with 900 chariots of iron, and for 20 years he oppressed the Israelites. Whence was relief to come? Joshua and Caleb, the courageous leaders, were dead. But now the rescue of Israel came in a great and remarkable woman, Deborah, who judged Israel at the time.

One might reflect upon the forcefulness of character of any woman, who would stand out so prominently and achieve such a reputation for judgment and integrity of purpose, in an age when woman's place was more in the realm of domestic drudgery and very inferior to that of man. But Deborah occupied a remarkable position of influence by sheer force of her character and personality.

SHE called on Berek, who seemed the chief hope of military defense of Israel, to raise an army of 10,000 men and to lead them to Mt. Tabor. She had strategy as well as courage she planned to lead the Israelites into a place where Berek and Sisera could fall them.

Though he probably was of courage, Berek shared people's regard for Deborah felt his own weakness in comparison with her strength, refused to enter upon the prize unless she would give him. Along with her strength Deborah evidently had a sense of humor, for she assured that if she went with him, her journey would not be honored as Sisera would be into the hand of a woman.

It all happened as Deborah had planned. When Sisera that Berek was gone upon his army on Mt. Tabor, he entered his host with the chariots of iron. It was Deborah's opportunity as she said to Berek, "Up; for this day in which Jehovah has delivered Sisera into thy hands." What a noble woman! What a record in this Old Testament that places among great prophets and leaders a woman to inspire women in after ages! Such stories as this size the amazing nature of the Bible as a book of real progress. Even in modern "women's rights" have been fought for and have been only by great sacrifice. In ancient Israel is the story of a woman being put in a place, and her character and achievement made the best thing in the nation.

We wish to announce that next Wednesday and Thursday nights the pastor will speak on the subjects, "The First and Second Resurrection, and the final Consummation of all things at the end of the world." Much is being said these days about "A Rapture," which is said by some to be a period of three and one half years the Lord will have His people somewhere in the air, and during this particular time those who are unsaved will undergo a great tribulation here on earth.

Be ruled by an Anti-Christ. Some of the advocates of this particular belief, say that when Christ comes the second time, His coming will be invisible, and just those who are Christians then living and those who have died in the faith, will be raised up together to be with the Lord some where in the air for a brief period of three and one-half years.

We invite all our friends in and around Eastland to join us in the two nights services next week, Wednesday and Thursday nights. The pastor and LaVaughn will try and furnish some special singing at these services—Robert B. Bowden, Pastor.
