

HUGHES STILL FAR AHEAD OF HIS SCHEDULE

By United Press
NEW YORK, July 12.—Headquarters of the Hughes round-the-world flight reported today that the millionaire sportsman landed at Omsk, Siberia, at 12 noon, CST, completing safely the third leg of the speed dash.

MOSCOW, July 12.—Howard Hughes and four fellow American aviators took off for Omsk, Siberia, today at 8:31 a. m., CST, their flight around the world.

They arrived here after a flight from Paris and were 5,316 miles from New York.

As they took off after a pause of only two hours, they were going steadily on the round-the-world record of seven days, 18 hours, 49 minutes, set by the late Wiley Post in 1933.

Flying over Central and Eastern Europe, high above thick cloud banks, the aviators made the Paris-Moscow stage, second of their flight, in seven hours, 51 minutes.

PRESENT FORM OF GOVERNMENT "GOOD ENOUGH"

By United Press
PUEBLO, Colo., July 12.—This nation is not going to copy other forms of government because "ours is good enough for us," President Roosevelt told an audience today from the rear platform of his train.

His administration's big objective "is to make democracy work," he said. He made no mention of politics. In a speech last night in Amarillo Mr. Roosevelt mentioned several members of the Texas delegation as the type he liked in Washington. He called the names of Maury Maverick, Marvin Jones, W. D. McFarlane and Lyndon Johnson, all of whom were on board the President's train in Texas.

OKLAHOMANS VOTING TODAY IN A PRIMARY

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 12.—Oklahomans trooped to the polls by hundreds of thousands today to decide a bitter primary election that was regarded as a partial test of the influence of President Roosevelt's trip in behalf of liberal candidates.

Early reports indicated that nearly 600,000 Democratic ballots would be cast.

Sen. Elmer Thomas, to whom Mr. Roosevelt referred in his speech Saturday as "my old friend," was opposed for re-election by Gov. E. W. Marland and Rep. Gomer Smith.

Of almost as much interest was the Democratic campaign for governor. William (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, opposed by Mr. Roosevelt, sought to become the first Oklahoma governor ever to be re-elected.

APPOINTMENT OF ALLRED IS BIG PUZZLE

AUSTIN, July 12.—Gov. Allred's appointment to the federal judgeship of South Texas had politics unsettled today. If he resigns, Lt. Gov. Walter Woodul becomes governor. If Woodul resigns the post would pass to Sen. Ben Oneal, Wichita Falls.

Capitol observers expect Allred to resign after September 1. That will be after the democratic primary elections in which Woodul is a candidate for attorney general. Allred's term will end Jan. 17, 1939. If Woodul is elected attorney general, and present attorney general, William McCraw is elected governor, the usual change in the attorney general's department on Jan. 1, would have to wait until Jan. 17.

Gratifying News From the South

Most hopeful news for democracy and closer relations with the United States keeps filtering up from South America in increasing volume.

Latest of these cheery signs is the orderly and enthusiastic induction of Gen. Alfredo Baldomir as president of Uruguay. Pledged to restore a democratic and constitutional administration and resist Fascism, General Baldomir was greeted with an unprecedented burst of popular acclaim as he took over the office vacated by Dr. Gabriel Terra.

General Baldomir is known to be friendly toward the United States, and there is every hope that his administration will swing Uruguay into closer relationships with "America del Norte" rather than with Europe. To see orderly democracy register such a signal victory in any American country is pleasing, and especially so in a country which, like Uruguay, has in the past resorted to "short-cut" methods, and now gives new evidence of attaining its democratic maturity.

The quick squelching of a Fascist coup in Brazil by President Vargas was another hopeful sign. The foreign-inspired Integralista group was given very short shrift by Vargas, who appears to be moving definitely toward a more truly democratic regime.

Colombia and Argentina are bright spots in the southern governmental firmament, and our nearest southern neighbor, Mexico, quickly stamped out whatever Fascist threat there might have been in the pretensions of Saturnino Cedillo. Whatever one may think of Mexican politics in detail, as regards confiscation of land and of foreign oil properties, there is hope in the unquestioned fact that the Cardenas regime comes nearer being grounded in wide popular support than any regime of recent years. In Mexico, too, democratic principles are superseding the old-fashioned "man-with-the-carbine" regimes of the past.

Closer relations with several South American countries are being actively fostered. A plan to send American farmers to the state of Matto Grosso in Brazil is being considered. Under the proposal, the two governments would share expenses of transporting the farmers, and Brazil would allot them large tracts of land. At least two organizations are active in Rio de Janeiro to foster better relations between the two countries, and the American University at Washington has just been given a heavy endowment with which it can offer facilities for study in that city of students from South America.

The "Good Neighbor" policy is more than words. It is not impossible that the tide of democracy, ebbing now in Europe, may reverse itself in South America and swell to its flood in the western hemisphere. Recent events in South America give new hope and inspiration to everyone who believes in and loves democracy.

How Are You Coming Along With Your Work These Days?

Rambling With The Rambler

BY WAYNE WALLACE

The world of today is apparently bending every effort in an attempt to destroy civilization. For the past few years the men who have usurped leadership have been playing a game of bluff with the old established governments. So far they have been quite successful in gaining their objectives without throwing the rest of the world into abject confusion; yet it is safe to predict that their time will come. Some day, someone is going to call their bluff and the result of it will be terrifying in the extreme.

Long before the wars of today, men with vision drew a picture of the horrors that would result from modern warfare. They saw large cities blown from the face of the earth, they saw millions of helpless women and children murdered, they saw the savagery that the educated mind can produce. They saw all these things and they painted a vivid word picture of it. And yet, even they fell a bit short of the awful reality.

Modern warfare is nothing less than a living, screaming, stinking, rotting, writhing death—a veritable hell on earth. High-powered explosives blasting the good earth to shreds; men scampering like jackrabbits for cover; bodies mangled, smashed, crushed and hurt; guts spilled by burning steel; flesh quivering from pain; faces torn away or gashed beyond recognition; limbs splintered, shattered or ripped off. There are the wounded laying by the ways, raw wounds unwashed for days, alive with slimy maggots. There are infected sores, cesspools of corruption, the stench so ghastly that it sickens the stomach. There are hospitals, temporary or otherwise, filled to overflowing with maimed patients. Here doctors and nurses endeavor to give relief to the victims amid the agonizing shrieks that constantly fill the air about them.

Besides these things there is the torrid sun, the pounding rain, the roaring floods, earthquakes and other manifestations of nature being disrupted. There is no sleep for the weary, not because of the whine of bullets, roar of cannon and other disturbing noises, but because of worry, fear for the safety of loved ones, who may not be even as safe as the soldier.

And the glory, where is it? Does it ride with the man who sends death to helpless victims far beneath him who have no chance of retaliating? No, for such a one cannot even call himself a man. He is a butcher of the human race. The man who uses poisonous gas is no better. It cannot be that it is with the man who is directly responsible for the war, nor is it in the trenches where the men must hide to protect themselves. Apparently there is no glory at all but that which exists in the minds of the people.

Many nations have been roused to loud complaints about the bombing of helpless civilians during the recent wars. Without doubt they have just cause for complaint, in fact it is something that should not be put up with at all. But, and here's the sticker, are they honest about their complaints? Judging from their actions it would seem that they are just a bit hypocritical. First of all, because they make such complaints only when the side they are for is being bombed, and secondly, because we cannot pick up a paper that does not tell of the factories in some of these countries that are doing an overtime business making bombs. Maybe if and when they go to war they may not use these bombs for such purposes as to kill civilians, but I honestly doubt it. All these countries believe that such things are going to continue because they teach the people the use of gas masks, what to do in case a city is attacked, etc. Some six weeks ago, Mussolini gave his ideas on this subject and while his statement is brutal it appears to give the general impression that will be accepted in the future wars of the world. He says: "War from the air must be conducted in a manner designed to disrupt the plans of the enemy, dominate the skies and crush the morale of the population." Such a philosophy is cruel, but then war is cruel, and most countries just more than one can swallow.

Chesterfield Again Features Pleasure In Its Cigarettes

The new July national release of Chesterfield advertising by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company again features the pleasure of Chesterfield Cigarettes in combination with summer sports and diversions. Emphasis is placed on action and lively spirit both in illustration and text for newspapers, magazines, billboards and point-of-sale displays. A new theme line, "Double your fight them solely for the purpose of winning; they are not concerned at all about the means employed to accomplish this purpose. Frankly, there is nothing that gives any indication but that the above will be true. Most countries realize this and are constructing bomb-proof shelters and underground refuges for protection from aerial bombardment. Unless the nations of the world can get together on this phase of war, either civilization will be destroyed or set back hundreds of years.

Odds and ends: Men may remember the past and plan for the future but they must live in the present. Some people see red and stop, others just let nature take its course. It's all right to twist a lion's tail, but first make sure there are bars between you and the lion. Gone with the wind is the ambition of many movie stars. Wonder if streamlining milady's apparel will make her a faster number. Putting an end to a war that has never started certainly offers its problems. Lawyers are supposed to work for justice but some of them just work justice. Before the golden age it was an eye for an eye; now everything seems to be I for I. It is not what a man is made of but what he makes of himself that counts. Because a man is down does not mean that the man on top is enjoying himself; it may be that he is afraid to let his opponent up. People who look and see nothing are not always blind. Running around is sort of a circle game. Keeping a cool head is a hard job when one is hot. Selling a street car to a sucker is just more than one can swallow.

He Sits, Waits in Love Sitdown

Although Mrs. Hedi Heusser, comely red-haired divorcee, installed herself as a voluntary prisoner in the master's bedroom of his Irvington, N. Y., mansion to force him to marry her, wealthy Rollo K. Blanchard, above, remained unmoved. From his yacht, to which he fled when Mrs. Heusser made his castle her home, he declared he would not marry her, but neither would he dispossess her by law.

Brooks to Speak Eastland Thursday

Pierce Brooks, candidate for lieutenant governor, through his specially equipped truck, to which is attached an elaborate float depicting the "politicians" driving the capitol building, will make address here Thursday, at 1:30 p. m.

Brooks' panoramic float, a beautiful piece of artistry of the most famous scene in the state. "After you people from every part of the state, I decided to portray thoughts on this beautiful scene. I want the people to know how glad they have been to place business men in office through years of experience. The needs of the people display has attracted attention in every locality where spoken.

Brooks is supporting payment of the state's security obligations, and in form informs the voters can be done without the of additional taxes. He plan to save $10,000,000 of the state government without impairing the of any department. He favors the abolition of the board, vesting control in the authorities and saving a million. He would abolish the assistance commission, another million, and place in county judges, warrants coming from the state controller. Another outstanding he advocates is the ment of the auto license. He would substitute a license fee and retain a license law. He points out highway department is with its building program large reserve, and this step not hamper the proper tion and maintenance of highways. At the same time, he would relieve the farmers, laborers and small business of useless tax burden. He tampering with the constitution creating a unicameral legislature. He fears this would fall under the control of interests.

SERIAL STORY INTERNE TROUBLE BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

EAST OF CHARACTERS TRAN DEARBORN—hero of a student nurse. She ran into love and trouble when she met DR. BOB BENCHLEY—hero, handsome young interne. He had trouble, too, keeping up with his work.

DR. STEPHEN SARGENT—head of the hospital. Dr. Sargent's problem was something else again.

Yesterday: One day Dr. Benchley suddenly crashes Tran in his arms and, frightened, Tran looks up to see Dr. Sargent standing in the doorway, she sees in terror.

CHAPTER V

ALL the rest of that day, after the terrible Top Sarge had nursed her and Bob Benchley in the instrument room, Tran waited dreadingly for the summons to an interview with Miss Armstrong—that fateful interview during which the director of nursing would tell her, regretfully but firmly, that she was a misfit.

"Misfit" was Miss Armstrong's euphemism for a student nurse who failed to click.

Late that afternoon, hurrying along a corridor on an errand to Central Supplies, Tran almost collided with a white-coated figure. Dr. Bob Benchley halted her by the simple expedient of hooking his little finger through hers, and murmured swiftly, "Heard anything from Armstrong?"

"Not yet."

"Maybe you won't," he encouraged her, but his voice lacked conviction. "Top Sarge dressed me down for both of us—unprofessional conduct—interference with nursing discipline—were some of his rhetorical high spots. I'm still licking my wounds. Haven't time to tell you all about it now, but—he glanced warily over his shoulder—"when are you off duty?"

"This evening at eight—but only till ten, of course."

"Meet me at Borden's at eight," he directed swiftly. "We can slip over to the park."

"No," Tran flung over her shoulder as she tore herself away. But she knew she'd have a hard time living up to that "No" when he called softly after her, "You're the sweetest thing God ever made, Agnity."

SHE hurried all the more after that, because the errand was for Miss Miller; and "the icicle's" sense of timing was uncanny.

Which Tran got back with the tray of sterilized dressings from the Autoclave—the great cylindrical steam sterilizer—Miss Miller, with the assistance of Miss Smart, a third-year student, was working in the service room off the corridor from which the private rooms opened.

Right now, Tran knew, Miss Miller was on private duty. The patient, one of the doctors from Saint Vincent's board of directors, had specially asked for Miss Miller.

For Tran, that alone invested Miss Miller with a halo. But on top of that, the case was one of Dr. Sargent's. . . . That lent Miss Miller wings of glory. Tran forgot her worry in an agony of eagerness to please Miss Miller.

When she hurried, a little breathless, into the service room, Miss Miller was saying, "Of all the patients in the world, doctors are the biggest babies. They're always sure they're going to die. He's diagnosed his own case a dozen times in the last six hours."

"I know," Miss Smart said. "Miss French had one last week. Believe it or not, he insisted on taking his own temperature. How do you manage yours?"

"Manage?" Miss Miller's blue eyes held a glint of cool amusement. "I treat him exactly as if he were a bricklayer who wouldn't know a clinical thermometer from a stethoscope. After all, I am the nurse. If—oh, here you are, Dearborn!"

She turned to Tran. "Let's see what you've brought. Um—six towels. Right. . . . Sheet. Right. . . . Laparotomy gown. Right. . . . But, my dear child, you're positively white about the mouth. How often must—"

"I know, Miss Miller," Tran blurted. "I have no professional poise. But working with you is so—so exciting that I—well, I just forget about everything else."

FOR once, out of complete ineptness, she had said the right thing. Miss Miller's smile was almost friendly.

"Well, I must get back to my patient," she said. "Now I wonder, Dearborn—Miss Smart is assembling the sterile articles for me—I wonder if I can depend on you to get together the unsterile? You'll want—"

"I know," Tran cut in breathlessly. "Collodion. Two tourniquets. Tissue forceps in two per cent Lysol. Flask of normal saline. Board. . . . I looked it up when I heard it was to be a transfusion. Was in the demonstration room. A talk with kind, humorous Miss Philbin would help her up a lot. And perhaps Miss Philbin would know what was going to happen to her."

If it was to be the worst, Tran knew what she was going to do. She was going to dress herself up in her best and meet Bob Benchley outside Borden's as he had asked her to do that evening. If she was going out of the hospital on her ear anyhow, she might as well have a little fun on the way.

Tran opened the door and went in. If she had only known it, her decision was one of the most fortuitous of her nursing career.

"Don't let her get you down, kid," the other student nurse advised kindly. "You're one-up that she even let you touch her equipment. For a probe, that's rating with Miller. And isn't she the leading lady of this hospital?"

But Tranquility turned away with ice at her heart. In the stimulating contacts of the past hour she had almost forgotten that she was a misfit. When she got back to the dormitory, of course, she would find the summons from Miss Armstrong; and that would be the beginning of the end.

ONCE back in the dormitory, she noticed a light in the demonstration classroom. She had almost forgotten that tomorrow she had been scheduled to demonstrate before the class in nursing procedure: The Making of Bed with Patient in It. . . . The Bath of a Patient in Bed. . . . The Dressing of a Patient in Bed. . . . Preparation of Patient for General Medical Examination.

It was to have been a sort of final test before the granting of her cap. . . . Getting your cap meant that you were a full-fledged student nurse, entitled to wear a gray striped uniform, white cap, and white bibbed apron—ready for regular duty in the wards.

The demonstration was to have taken the full class period. Instead of "Griseida," the dummy, Anita Seibert, another probationer, was to have served as patient. You always had to demonstrate with a living patient before you got your cap.

Tran and Anita had planned a full-dress rehearsal here this evening. But Anita had been sick in bed all day. Tran had taken it for granted that the rehearsal was off.

Nevertheless, seeing the light under the door, Tran paused outside. She couldn't quite face the thought of going to her room yet anyhow—with that summons from Miss Armstrong waiting for her. Perhaps Miss Philbin, the instructor in nursing procedure, was in the demonstration room. A talk with kind, humorous Miss Philbin would help her up a lot. And perhaps Miss Philbin would know what was going to happen to her.

What if it was to be the worst, Tran knew what she was going to do. She was going to dress herself up in her best and meet Bob Benchley outside Borden's as he had asked her to do that evening. If she was going out of the hospital on her ear anyhow, she might as well have a little fun on the way.

Tran opened the door and went in. If she had only known it, her decision was one of the most fortuitous of her nursing career.

NEW YORK—Bill McGowan, top-notch American League umpire, says that 55 per cent of major league pitchers deliver the ball illegally one way or another. Mechanical pitching faults are plentiful in the big show, and old and outlawed tricks are still in use.

Stressing the fact that he is not picking on Johnny Allen or the Cleveland club, as charged by the fiery right-hander, McGowan uses the two great mound stars of the Indians as examples.

Allen spits in his glove and rubs the ball therein, and umpires and rival managers and players assert that there is too free use of resin in connection with his clothing.

Bob Feller . . . consciously or not . . . goes to his mouth, and jumps the rubber. The Iowa farm boy steps back with his left foot as he starts his windup.

"I told Feller in Cleveland the other afternoon that he must quit taking his fingers to his mouth for his own good," explains McGowan. "Jimmy Dykes and others have complained about it, and unless he breaks the habit, he'll shortly have 23 opposing players and a manager shouting at him every time he starts. That wouldn't figure to help his control, and control is all he needs."

PITCHERS have cut the seam of the ball with sharp thumb nails and on belt buckles. They have discolored the ball with mud, licorice, coffee, and whatnot. They have roughened it with sandpaper, emery, and fingernails to make it do tricks.

Two swipes on his trousers and Edd's Cicotte of the Black Sox memory had one of the sphere shined like a ball-room slipper.

Leading the seam with mud made the ball dart in unexpected directions. Howard Ehmke actually stuck chewing gum on the sphere in the first game of the 1929 world series.

Fellows with unusually strong grips have been able to loosen the cover . . . and thus toss a "puck" ball.

It was the famous fluttering cuff of Dazzy Vance that brought about the rule prohibiting pitchers from working with ragged or slit sleeves which have the effect of confusing the batter.

MORE common mechanical faults are: Not having the back foot in contact with the rubber. Taking a step, or crowhopping with the front foot in delivering the ball.

Not coming to a stop before pitching with men on bases. Moving the shoulders, head, arms, feet, or fingers after coming to a stop.

Not stepping toward first base in attempting to pick off a base runner. Failure to first back off the rubber after coming to a stop in holding men on bases when not in the act of delivering the ball to the plate or throwing to bases.

McGowan and all other umpires will tell you that they'd spend half their time running to the box if they did so in response to every mechanical defect and infringement of the rules.

WASHINGTON LETTER BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Although the Senate Campaign Expenses Committee offers partial sanctuary for any WPA project worker who is subjected to political "intimidation," it is not yet cranking the style of President Roosevelt and other Awar Dealers who insist on supporting "liberal" candidates as distinguished from "conservatives."

There may be some backdown on one side or the other, but it looks as if the committee and the administration might engage in a running skirmish for the rest of the campaign season. The committee is dominated by anti-New Deal senators.

A curious sequence of statements began when Chairman Morris Sheppard announced that government officials who supported congressional candidates would be summoned before the committee. Roosevelt then flatly told the country he would support certain candidates in the primaries.

Antelope Plentiful In Western Texas

AUSTIN, Texas—It is not possible for the Texas Game Department to promise range lovers can be given a home where the buffalo roam, but they can live where the deer and the antelope play.

Warden W. D. Stubblefield, stationed at Ysleta, estimated to the department that there are from 2,500 to 3,000 antelope in Hudspeth county.

Clearing operations along the Rio Grande below El Paso, he said, would make the section less favorable for the antelope.

A strike continues at an eastern pencil factory. Negotiations for settlement are on the point of being broken off.

Gerald Mann Is A Visitor In City

Former Secretary of State Gerald C. Mann of Dallas, was a visitor in the city Tuesday in the interest of his candidacy for attorney general. Mann conferred with friends and supporters and reported widespread progress of his campaign indicated he would lead his opponents in the first primary.

Mann, a native of Hopkins county and an All-American football star at S. M. U. a decade ago, is seeking his first elective office in his campaign for attorney general. He has served the people, however, as an assistant attorney general, secretary of state and as Washington representative of the Texas Planning Board, all by appointments.

He is widely remembered for his successful battle against fraudulent stock brokers and racketeers while secretary of state when he exposed gangs of operators selling worthless securities in Texas and subsequently wrote and secured passage of the present Texas Securities Act.

In Washington for the Texas Planning Board, he coordinated federal and state relief and WPA projects, securing many millions of dollars in federal funds for Texas. Among the many projects he secured was a two and a half million dollar state-wide tax survey, the largest of its kind ever granted by the federal government, an educational survey, an underground water survey and a mineral resources survey.

Mann's platform for attorney general promises the strict enforcement of the laws and a continuous fight against the political rackets and political racketeers infesting the state.

British Ponder On 100 New Towns

LONDON.—A plan to move approximately 5,000,000 people from large British cities to new self-contained towns is being con-

Robert W. Calvert

Robert W. Calvert of Hill county, candidate for Attorney General will speak Thursday night at 8 o'clock on the south side of the courthouse square in Eastland. A concert by the Eastland High school band will be a feature of the meeting which is expected to attract persons from over the county.

The towns would be the center of six square miles of land on which factories would be erected; enough fruit, vegetables and milk would be produced to feed the inhabitants. Each town would house about 50,000 people in two-story houses with individual gardens and sun-roofs.

Sites for the towns already have been chosen. Seventy-six are in England, 15 in Scotland and 9 in Wales.

It is planned to relieve London of 2,000,000 inhabitants, 1,500,000 from other large cities, and 1,500,000 from ribbon development estates.

The plan has been drawn up by the Hundred New Towns Association, and is being backed by Lord Esher, Admiral Sir William Good-enough, Sir Edwin Lutyens, famous architect, and others. The plan would cost $10,000,000, half of which would be used over a period of 10 years.

"Existing industrial expansion is now proceeding without any kind of national plan; workers are living in inconvenient places and the country is being disfigured," an official of the association said. "Our plan will save this by collecting scattered people into compact areas."

It's the little humble things that make a house a HOME

THOSE careless marks of his baby fingers . . . could any one buy them from you now? The knee-high smudges on the door! The pencil scratches on the wall that showed his growth from two to a little man of six! The nicked nursery bed where you two watched for hours one night until a sprawled, feverish form slipped into healing slumber!

Yes, a home is seasoned with smiles and tears, mellowed by memories and flavored with hopes. Each room has well-loved articles that have grown dearer with the years. And there are new things that you are working and planning for. It may be an occasional table for the living-room. New drapes for the breakfast nook. A summer rug. Porch and lawn furniture.

The advertisements in this newspaper bring you news of furnishings to freshen your home. Study them and save shopping steps and budget dollars. They will help you add to the gracious charm of your home . . . that little world which is your very own!
