Thus, as soon as the games are officially abandoned by Japan they will be transferred to Finland.

The Japanese Olympic committee reluctantly drafted a formal notice of cancellation to be delivered to the International Olympic congress. It had been impressed on them that prosecution of the war against China was of vital necessity and that it might continue two years longer, when western athletes would be invading the Far East if the games were held.

Illinois GOP to Rally August 31

PEORIA, Ill.—Illinois Republicans will rally behind new leadership at their state convention here August 21 to draft a program aiming at G.O.P. election victories next November.

Heading the party's slate for the 1938 campaign is Richard J. Lyons, youthful state Representative in the general assembly, who is seeking election to the U. S. senate.

The state convention will draft a platform, map plans for the campaign and nominate candidates for the University of Illinois board of trustees. All candidates for other offices were named in a primary last April.

Lyons and other candidates for offices to be filled in statewide elections next November will be in the convention spotlight, since a plan to bring in outstanding Republicans from other states to speak has been abandoned.

Leadership of the party in Illinois now is dominated by a recently formed organization of G.O.P. county chairmen in the state, who backed the winning primary slate and new officers of the state central committee.

The new leaders have directed their efforts to gain a Republican victory this year and wrested control from older leaders who were seeking to lay the groundwork to return the party to power in 1940.

Principal offices to be filled in November include one seat in the U. S. senate, state treasurer, the office of state superintendent of public instruction, 25 congressional seats, 151 in the lower house of the general assembly and 27 in the state senate.

Lyon's opponent will be Rep. Scott Lucas who won the primary nomination with state administration support against the candidate backed by the Chicago Democratic organization.

PROTEST UPON ARMAMENTS IS BEING IGNORED

By United Press
President Roosevelt's protest against the "disaster" of international armament competition, fell unheeded today on a world at war or preparing for war.

But the president's speech emphasized that the struggle to solve the world's problems by peaceful means will not be abandoned, regardless of the trend toward military might.

American authorities did not expect that Mr. Roosevelt's offer to join a world disarmament move would have any immediate effect on the greatest arms race in history. The president spoke to remind other nations of the United States' ability to arm.

Mr. Roosevelt's proposal to reduce armaments was termed a "Democratic echo on an electoral occasion," by an official Italian newspaper in Rome. It added, however, that none should turn down the suggestion "least of all Italy where a policy of moderation regarding armament is well known."

Meanwhile, on the world's trouble fronts:

China—Defending their capitol at Hankow, the Chinese military leaders reported they had stalled the Japanese offensive. Twenty Japanese bombers went out this morning to bomb Hankow, but never reached their objective, indicating possible defeat by the Chinese.

Spain—Rebels claimed more rapid progress in their offensive against Valencia, but the loyalists insisted the claims were exaggerated.

Italy—Jews fear fascist leaders are preparing a program to discriminate against them, although confident Italy would avoid such policies as pursued by Germany.

By United Press
COLUMBIA, S. C.—Last legal obstacles have been removed for inauguration of a "Little TVA" project in the lowlands of South Carolina.

Actual work is not expected to begin until early fall, but already preliminary steps have been taken, according to the South Carolina Public Service authority, administrative body for the development. Supreme Court ended the lengthy legal battle with a decision favorable to the project.

There a power plant with an output of 450,000,000 kilowatt hours annually, is to be constructed.

Silkworms Prove To Be a Problem

CLEVELAND — Probably the only silkworm grower in this part of the country is Patsy Semary, a WPA worker. Semary worked in steel mills formerly. When the mills closed he took to growing silkworms. The first were hatched in the spring. Early in the spring, he asked a friend, who was traveling abroad, to bring him some silkworm eggs from Italy. As a child he learned silkworm culture from his mother. His friend brought him a large number of eggs—more than Semary had expected. He selected a few dozen to hatch on shelves in one of the rooms in his home. The rest of the eggs he placed in a writing desk. Surprisingly, the eggs on the shelves and those in the desk hatched at the same time. He was the owner of thousands, instead of a few dozen, silkworms. Knowing that silkworms have a highly specialized diet, eating only mulberry leaves, Semary is kept extremely busy providing them with leaves. He picked bare the solitary mulberry tree on his street. He now is working a tree on a nearby street. He has tried unsuccessfully to obtain permission to pick other trees in Cleveland. In the meantime, the silkworms have started spinning their cocoons. Some have climbed the walls and have spun cocoons on the ceiling. Semary is glad that the silkworms stop eating when they begin to spin. Those not yet spinning, how-

"There's The doorbell again"

Suppose daily to your door came the butcher, the grocer, the clothier, the furrier, the furniture man, and every other merchant with whom you deal? What a tedium of doorbell answering that would mean!

It would be even more impractical for you to visit daily all these stores to find out what they have to offer and the price.

And yet you need those merchants' service quite as much as they need your patronage. Contact between seller and consumer is essential in the supplying of human needs. Before a sale can be closed the goods must be offered. Every day, through the advertising columns of this newspaper, the merchants of this city come to your home with their choicest wares. Easily, quickly, you get the news of all that is worth while in the market-places of the world.

They are not strangers at the door, but merchants you know and trust. You are always surer of high quality and fair price when you buy an article advertised by a reputable firm.

Good Neighbors Seek Compromises

The fourteen weeks since the expropriation of the foreign oil companies' properties in Mexico have given both parties a chance to see just where they stand. The passions and indignations of the act should be cooled some what. The time has come for settlement.

Neither party is happy as things stand now. The American companies have lost their property, including both the physical improvements they installed with American cash, and their rights to subsoil wealth in oil. The Mexican government has lost 14 weeks' valuable tax revenues; its tanks are full of oil which can not be sold abroad except in small dribbles to governments which are especially unsympathetic to Mexico. Production has been cut to 65 per cent of its former level. Many jobs have been lost. Improved labor conditions asked of foreign companies have not been furnished by the government, which asks the workers to carry on under less favorable conditions in the name of patriotism. Business stagnates throughout the country.

If that is not a situation that calls for settlement, it is hard to imagine one. Waiting decision before the highest Mexican courts is the foreign companies' plea that their property be restored. Yet such a decision would be a terrific come-uppance for the Cardenas government, and a blow at the patriotic spirit it has been building up.

The American State Department policy has been sympathetic and tolerant beyond expectation. But it can scarcely go farther than it has gone. With billions of American money invested throughout Central and South America, it can scarcely sanction the seizure of any and all such property at will without compensation.

What seems the sensible thing to do? First, to get an impartial estimate, through an international commission, of the value of what has been taken. Then let some arrangement be worked out for Mexico to keep her subsoil resources, but pay the expropriated companies in oil until the debt has been worked out.

Like all compromises, that requires yielding on both sides. But it also implies advantages to both sides which neither side is now getting. It would guarantee to the foreign companies some sort of realistic compensation for their very real services in having developed from scratch the Mexican oil industry. It would secure eventually to Mexico the rights to its subsoil resources, and a national oil industry, which is its desire.

Naturally, this is an oversimplified view of a very complicated problem. But for the oil companies to wait grimly and uncompromisingly for the Mexican government to collapse under the oil strain would benefit no one in the long run. And for the Mexican government to use its unquestioned sovereign power in a high-handed and unwise manner endangers its reputation and future as well.

A workable compromise would, on the other hand, smooth the path to "good neighbor" policies which have become a vital part of the place of the United States in the world.

Group Will Urge Wives to Resign Business Positions

By United Press

CLEVELAND.—Mrs. Elsie M. Fadden Fern, a jolly housewife, is busily promoting the Employment Reform Association—a national organization she has formed in favor of removing married women, whose husbands can support them, from business and the professions.

The association now is incorporated in Ohio. Mrs. Fern is one of the three trustees. The others are men, Lloyd Bennage and James Grant. "Mr. Bennage, my neighbor, first had the idea of incorporating," Mrs. Fern said. "As long ago as 1933 we used to talk about what a shame it was that so many young people in our neighborhood were out of jobs. We decided that this situation was partly the fault of married women working whose husbands were able to support them."

A slight frown marred the good nature of Mrs. Fern's round face. She indicated a pile of letters on a table before her. "I have a pathetic letter here from a widow," she said. "Her daughter, 18, became desperate when she couldn't get work. She finally said to her mother, 'Let's turn on the gas, mother—it's no use going on like this.'"

"I've received a lot of letters from young people, out of high school or college, who have tramped all over the city looking for a job. They couldn't find any." She said that her daughter, Dorothy, recently had been graduated from high school, but was as yet unemployed. "One night Mr. Bennage came over. 'Well, Mrs. Fern,' he said, 'the papers for incorporating our idea are awaiting your signature.'"

"And that was how the Employment Reform Association came into being." Mrs. Fern emphasized the fact that it is a non-profit organization. She has undertaken its management because both Bennage and

She started toward the door. "I have a pathetic letter here from a widow," she said. "Her daughter, 18, became desperate when she couldn't get work. She finally said to her mother, 'Let's turn on the gas, mother—it's no use going on like this.'"

Is Billy the Kid Man or a Ghost?

RATON, N. M.—A group of frontiersmen, headed by Maj. Gordon W. (Pawnee Bill) Lillie of Pawnee, Okla., has started tracking down recurrent reports that Billy the Kid, New Mexico's notorious outlaw before the turn of the century, is still alive.

Billy the Kid, whose six-guns made history in the grim Lincoln county war, was trapped and killed by Sheriff Pat Garrett in 1881—according to all historical accounts, which have been questioned repeatedly.

The group left here for Albuquerque. The frontiersmen planned to question Eliego Baca, territorial gunman and peace officer of the old cattle days. Eddie Botsford of Littlefield, Texas, the Rev. J. W. E. Airey of Tran pulled the lever of the autoclave and faced him beligerently. "Now you look here, Bob Benchley," she cut in. "I've got my living to make in this world, and—"

"But that's just it—you haven't. Honey, I've never told you yet what a damned lucky girl you are. I've got enough money for both of us."

THEN suddenly he was not laughing any more. His lean, young face was pale, and the light in his dark eyes was not impudent but pleading.

"Anyhow," he rushed on, "I have plenty to last a few years—till I get my big chance. . . . Oh, Tran, I could go places if I had you to stick around and root for me."

"And I suppose you think," Tran broke in—stomily, to give the lie to the melting at her heart—"that you're the only one around who wants to go places? Well, I'm ambitious, too. Some day I'm going to—"

"Sure! You don't have to tell me. Some day you're going to be top nurse for Old Sarge—like the perfect Miller. That's what every apron in this hospital prays for every night on bended knees. As if he'd ever give any of you a second look so long as Miller's around with that angel face of hers. He'd sell his soul for her if he didn't know she's a human glacier."

"You aren't fair to her," Tran flashed, and surprisingly found herself believing it. "A nurse can't afford to be emotional. Too many people depend on her keeping her head."

"All right," he flung out at her. "Go ahead and turn yourself into another starched apron with antiseptic fluid in your veins, and see where it gets you with Top Sarge."

When she knew that Bob had really gone, Tran sat down stiffly, her fingers holding to the edge of the chair seat. . . . Good thing he had gone, though. If he had stayed a minute longer, she might have told him the one thing she never meant anyone to find out. It was that she knew now that she had dedicated herself, like a priestess, to a higher, sterner destiny than sticking around and rooting for any young interne in the world.

The reason for this lay in something that had happened only that morning. (To Be Continued)

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON -- With every body hoping and praying that the country is about to move upward from the depression's bottom, economists and statisticians have gathered in enough facts and figures to permit them to present a fairly plausible and well-connected analysis of factors making for the present inertia.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES: Here came the biggest, quickest drop of all among factors tending to increase national income. Net excess of activity-creating federal expenditures over and above tax collections was four billion dollars in 1936. This excess dropped from about $33,000,000 a month through 1936 to less than $600,000,000 monthly from March to December, 1937. Bonus payment swelled the total in 1936 and collection of a billion social security taxes shrank the 1937 figure.

OTHER FACTORS

OTHER FACTORS: The speculative movement had to subside sooner or later; this one ended in April of last year. Pressure of inventories began to be felt and industries began to sell from accumulated stock instead of new production. Increased reserve requirements and Mr. Roosevelt's warning against certain high prices dampened inflationary sentiment -- "may have," says Currie.

NATIONAL INCOME

NATIONAL INCOME: From 1933 to 1936 forces tending to increase the national income were ascendant. Government kept adding to buying power more than it took in taxes. National income increased from less than 40 billion dollars in 1933 to 64 billions in 1936.

PRICES

PRICES: England's rearmament inspired speculation in certain raw materials and inspired inflationary sentiment. In a quick transition period, labor won substantial wage and hour concessions. A sellers' market resulted from anticipation of rising prices and fear of interruptions by strikes. Industries passed on higher costs in higher prices and some encouraged excessive forward buying by announcing price increases effective on future dates.

INVENTORIES

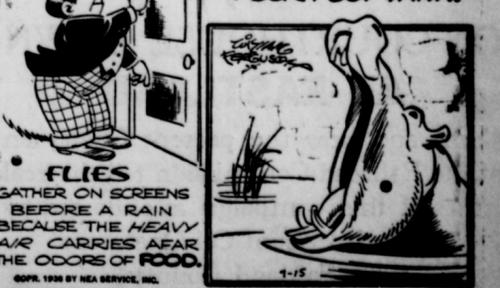

INVENTORIES: Dun and Bradstreet's survey covering 17,000 firms indicates that manufacturing and merchandising inventories increased by about two billion dollars in 1936 and three billions in 1937.

Miss Marguerite Adamson Becomes Bride of James Campbell Thursday In Twilight Ceremony at Eastland

The wedding ceremony of Miss Marguerite Adamson and James Campbell was read by Rev. G. Alfred Brown, minister of the Methodist church of Ranger, Thursday evening at seven-thirty before an improvised altar of greenery, flanked on each side by baskets of agapanthus lilies and bluebells with a natural setting of woodland and beds of gorgeous zinnias. Baskets of garden flowers, chiefly bluebells, were used over the lawn.

A bridal aisle was formed by Miss Alla Ray Kuykendall and Mrs. Roy Pentecost, Mrs. B. C. Pfeider and Mrs. J. W. Burrage, wearing pastel shades with blue flowers in their hair.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a cornflower blue chiffon dress with illusion veil from a halo of chiffon and tulle of the same shade. Her bouquet was made up of agapanthus lilies, tube roses and baby's breath. For something old she chose a bracelet her mother had worn at her wedding, this being the only jewelry used. Her going away costume consisted of a brown sheer dress, with jacket, trimmed with touches of white, small felt hat, brown patent sandals, white bag and gloves.

Mrs. C. I. Wolford was matron of honor and wore a dress of slightly darker shade of blue chiffon, with turban of the same shade. She carried a colonial bouquet of blue asters and stock.

The mother of the bride wore a rose lace dress with blue accents and corsage of blue asters, and the groom's mother was dressed in navy blue chiffon with a corsage of white dahlias.

The groom was attended by Mr. Lee Thompson of Breckenridge as best man.

Before the ceremony, Mrs. B. C. Pfeider, sister of the groom, sang "O Promise Me." She was accompanied by Misses Evelyn Long and Muri Dean Murrell, violinists. They played Wagner's "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin for the wedding march, and Schumann's "Traumerei" during the ceremony.

During the reception, for which the many guests remained, Mrs. Fred Warren, assisted by Mrs. B. C. Pfeider, presided at the dining table, which was laid with a lace cloth and centered with bluebells and baby's breath in a silver bowl. Silver candlesticks with white candles added to this lovely setting. The pretty three-tiered bride's cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom.

The bride's book was in charge of Miss Alla Ray Kuykendall. After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in Hugo, Oklahoma.

Eagles Are Chief Cause of Scarcity Of Mountain Sheep

By United Press
AUSTIN—Early reports to the State Game Department indicate that eagles are the chief cause of scarcity of mountain sheep in West Texas.

Robert Snow, field naturalist for the department, and Dr. Walter P. Taylor of A. & M. College have been studying the scarcity of Bighorn sheep in the Guadalupe, Beech and Sierra Diablo mountains. A closed season protects the sheep from hunters all year.

Residents blame mountain lions for killing the sheep, but the investigators saw few signs of lions and many eagles. The Bighorns became excited only when a band of eagles circled over them. Then they ran together as if for protection.

French police picked up the wrong man during a recent hunt for two escaped convicts. It turned out they were a couple of other felons.

War In Spain On Threshold Of Third Year

By H. A. PETERS
United Press Staff Correspondent

BARCELONA—The second year of the Spanish civil war, closing today, has brought home to Catalonia the full horror of armed conflict.

For nearly 18 months Barcelona retained a semblance of normalcy in contrast to the grim situation prevailing in Madrid and Valencia. When the first upheaval of the revolution passed, Catalonia's many factories resumed operations. Everybody was making and spending plenty of money, and the war seemed far away.

The struggle between the trade-labor groups and the government for domination of factories, which flared up in a sanguinary week in May, had been won by the Valencia government with a few thousand troops, and the industry of the province once more operated. But all that is changed now.

The need for tapping the resources of this wealthy province, however, and for bringing its production more into line with the needs of the republican army and the central government became more apparent as the war entered its second year.

By October, 1937, the Valencia government had resolved to move to Barcelona, despite the many interpretations abroad which were placed upon this act. The government came, established itself, and immediately began the task of harmonizing and coordinating the Catalonian government with itself in order to concentrate fully the industrial resources remaining to loyalist Spain on the fight in the Aragon and Central fronts.

Asturias and the northern provinces had been lost in the fall of 1937, despite stubborn resistance. The nationalist army reached the seat and cut off the north. Refugees soon began arriving in Barcelona, which then became the seat of three governments, the Republican, the Catalonian and the Basque.

A city normally of 1,000,000 people absorbed within a few weeks nearly a quarter more than its population. The problem of housing and feeding these additional residents became a heavy one before the winter ended.

Long queues could be seen before markets and food shops from dawn throughout the heat of the day. Often housewives who had taken their places at 3 A. M. would reach their turn at a counter or hours later only to find supplies exhausted.

The system of food cards and rationing was revised several times but duplications still continued and many families were able to obtain enough only by enlisting aid and by trading commodities among themselves. The supply of bread remained very steady although it was strictly rationed. Rice, a crop which remained almost entirely in loyalist Spain, became scarcer and scarcer largely due to the absence of harvest hands. Potatoes disappeared from even the best supplied tables early this year and, although Catalonia formerly exported large quantities, they were scarce even in the spring and summer. They had been absent from the average diet for more than a year.

Frozen meat was imported and rationed, but civilians, except those who patronized a few expensive restaurants and hotels, saw little of it. The average meal consisted of chick peas, fish, occasionally, carrots and green cabbage. Butter was not obtainable, and milk in limited quantities was only for children under 2. The average weight fell from one-tenth to one-fifth.

But the full horrors of war, however, were not brought home to Catalonia until air bombardments began soon after the New Year along the whole Catalonian coast. One of the worst was made on Barcelona on a January Sunday, when more than 600 were killed.

Barcelona suffered its worst bombardment on March 17, 18 and 19, when squadrons of nationalist planes criss-crossed above the city at regular intervals every three hours dropping projectiles on office buildings, dwellings and churches alike. More than 1,000, chiefly civilians, were killed.

The path of these raids could be traced diagonally across the city, one to each square block as if the intent were to create as widespread terror as possible.

These bombardments caused international discussions. The Atlantic City boardwalk is about to celebrate its 68th birthday. It's so used to being walked on it ought to be renamed Taxpayer Boulevard.

Girl Honks Horn, Routs Three Bandits

By United Press
YOUNGSTOWN, O. — The daughter of Robert G. King, a grocery store manager, honked her automobile horn when she saw her father being held up in his store and saved his day's receipts from bandits.

King told police that he was leaving his store when three men rushed him and knocked him down.

His daughter, waiting for him outside in her car, saw the assault and pressed on the car's horn. The bandits fled.

Monkeys Age Slowly Upon Vegetables And Fruit Diets

By United Press
BUFFALO, N. Y.—If you want to live to be 90 years old, go on a "monkey diet."

This suggestion is made by dietitians at Buffalo's zoo, who claim that meals prepared by them have quintupled the simians' life span. And, they declare, it ought to produce the same results for humans.

"Many monkeys have never known a sick day in their lives since they have lived on our special diet," one keeper declared.

"They live on vegetables and fruit. The diet never changes. And it is the same diet human beings should follow if they want to live beyond the average span."

"Some of the monkeys have reached the age of 35. The usual life of monkeys in captivity is equal to 90 to 100 years in the life of a human."
