

CHAMBERLAIN IS HOOTED BY LABOR GROUP

LONDON, England, Oct. 3.—British rear 'ment will continue on an increased scale, Prime Minister Chamberlain announced today as he defended, in the House of Commons, the price he paid for peace, against charges that he surrendered to the "bluster and blackmail" of Adolf Hitler.

Duff-Cooper, cheered by opposition forces, charged that the prime minister had:

1.—No right to sign the Munich declaration, symbolizing that there would never again be war between Britain and Germany.

2.—Committed Britain to defending the future borders of Czechoslovakia.

3.—Spoken to Hitler in the language of "sweet reasonableness" instead of the language of the "mailed fist."

4.—Failed to advise Germany, until the last minute, that Britain would fight.

5.—Let Hitler "get away" with demands that probably will lead to more demands, backed by the threat of force.

Duff Cooper emphasized that it was not Czechoslovakia for which Britain was called upon to fight, but the danger that Europe would be dominated by one power because of "brutal force."

Chamberlain replied that "I entered no pact, made no new commitments. There is no secret understanding."

Chamberlain announced that the government was advancing to Czechoslovakia about $48,000,000 in response to a Czech request for a loan to bolster the republic because of loss of some of its richest areas to Germany.

Chamberlain said that his main purpose had been "pacification of Europe."

Chamberlain was attacked verbally by Clement Attlee, labor leader, who said:

"The events of the last days constitute one of the greatest diplomatic defeats this country and France ever suffered. There is no doubt it was a tremendous victory for Hitler."

Chamberlain declared he had nothing to regret.

GERMANS ENTER CZECHOSLOVAKIA

The long-awaited German invasion of Czechoslovakia came peacefully soon after this picture was taken as Hitler's troops marched into the town of Deggendorf in the southern part of the Czech state bordering on Austria. Flashed by radio from London, this picture shows German troops at Deggendorf exchanging friendly greetings across the border with Sudeten Germans, members of the Czechoslovakia minority that precipitated the European crisis and brought continent nearer war than at any time since 1918. First reports from Europe stated that soon after this photo was made the German government issued a surprise order forbidding foreign photographers from taking pictures of the actual occupation.

Two cases which resulted from the 1936 17th district congressional campaign are under consideration in the 11th Court of Civil Appeals at Eastland.

Blanton in the Abilene hearing on a plea of privilege sought to keep the case in Taylor county.

Wayne Thurman of Cisco, a committee member aiding in the exhibit preparation, has gathered peanut products for inclusion in the display. These include peanut leaf meal, peanut hay, peanut cake, peanut meal, peanut oil, peanut cookies, peanut muffins, peanut butter, peanut candy and roasted peanuts.

The display also will explain poor grade peanuts average 15 bushels to the acre, inoculated yield 20 bushels and inoculated and fertilized 40 bushels to the acre. Inoculated, fertilized, seed selected and properly cultivated and harvested peanuts will average 60 bushels to the acre.

Peanuts' part in the finance picture of the county also will be shown by a replica of a three-story building. One story will represent a bank, another hay and another nuts.

Peanut Growers Association Will Have Warehouses

The Southwestern Peanut Growers Association expects to open storage warehouses at nine Texas points by Oct. 10, according to W. B. Starr, Dan Horn, association manager.

Starr will retire soon as manager, and Dick Weekes, Alameda, will succeed him. Headquarters of the association, which covers the Texas-Oklahoma territory, is at Eastland.

Starr explained that the association is a co-operative, working as a division of the AAA, buying and storing the surplus peanut crop to stabilize the market.

Whereas the present market price is 83 cents a bushel for No. 1 peanuts and 80 cents for No. 2 grade, the association, as soon as it obtains warehouse facilities, will pay 94.5 cents for No. 1 grade and 88.5 cents for No. 2, Starr said.

"The crop already is about 50 per cent harvested," Starr said. "I'd advise those farmers who have already threshed to hold their peanuts off the market until Oct. 10."

Starr said the Texas-Oklahoma peanut crop last year, about average, was 55,000 tons, and that the forecast for this year's crop is 80,000 tons.

The association, Starr explained, uses IFC funds and operates through the community credit division of the AAA. There are no crop reduction restrictions, but association members are charged a fee of 7 1/2 cents per acre.

Warehouses will be located at Tolar, Comanche, May, Rising Star, Ranger, Gorman, Abilene and Fort Worth.

SETTLEMENT OF BIG OIL SUIT BEING URGED

AUSTIN, Oct. 3.—State and defense attorneys agreed to meet today in an attempt to make a compromise settlement of Texas' $17,850,000 anti-trust penalty suit against the American Petroleum Institute, Texas Petroleum Marketers' Association and 15 major oil companies.

The conference was suggested by District Judge John D. Moore, before whom the suit was scheduled to begin trial today.

Judge Moore suggested that the amount be sufficient to pay the cost incurred by the state and some restitution for violations prior to abandonment of the petroleum code.

It is admitted, he said, that the code under which the state made its charges, has not been enforced for many years. The U. S. Supreme court recently approved such a compromise in a case charging violation of the federal anti-trust law.

Ethiopia Keeps on Being Difficult

A few years ago the poverty-stricken, land-hungry people of Italy set out to get a break for themselves by taking over the rich lands of Ethiopia.

Obviously they needed a break of some kind. Italy is full of mountains and rocks—and some 42 million people. The ordinary Italian works hard and doesn't get any too much to eat; no wonder he went for it when someone told him that there were fat farm lands and general riches to be had for the taking down in Africa.

So there was a war, and peace-loving folk on this side of the water took what comfort they could in the reflection that when the shooting and the killing stopped, things at least would be a little better for the common people of Italy.

But now it begins to look as if these Italians had bought a gold brick.

A dispatch from Rome to a New York newspaper reveals that the Italian government has given up its plans for the colonization of Ethiopia—for the time being, at any rate.

In the first place, the country isn't fully pacified yet. It won't be pacified until the natives have been secured in the possession of their own lands—and there happen to be about twice as many of these natives as the Italian high command had figured.

In addition, the riches that Ethiopia possesses aren't the kind that can be gathered quickly. General Attilio Teruzzi, undersecretary for Italian Africa, remarks that it will be years before the country can be made ready for colonization.

So the colonization campaign is off, and the government is trying to get the people to think about colonizing Libya instead.

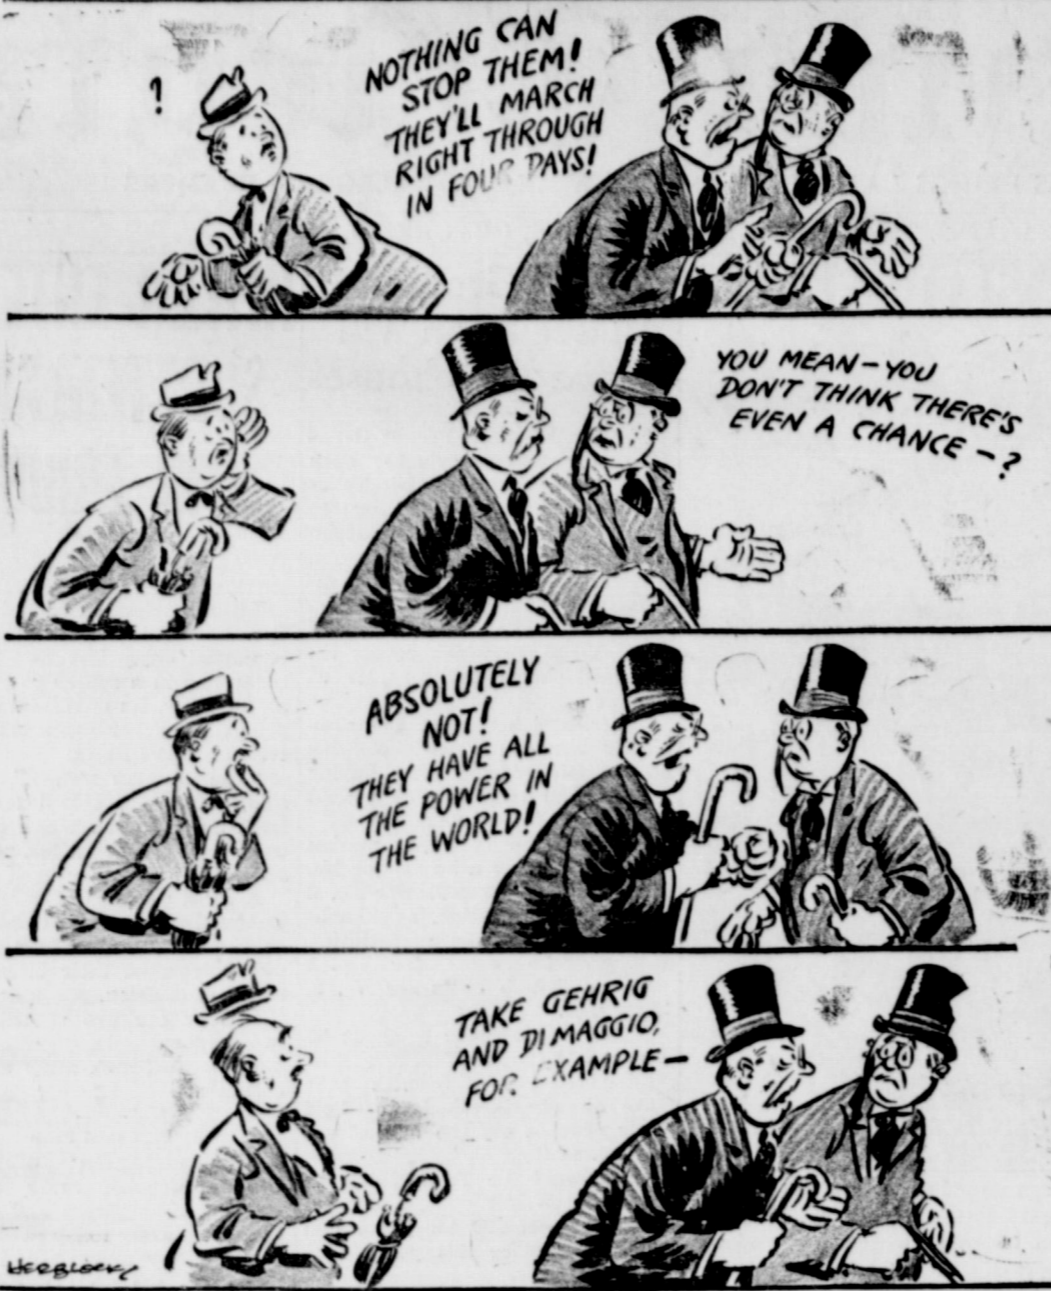

Which leaves the ordinary Italian who paid for the war sitting right back of the eight-ball, as nearly as it can be figured out from this distance.

It's easy to be wise after the fact, of course. But it doesn't hurt to point out that sort of thing is what a nation inevitably lets itself in for, when it gives up trying to think and turns all its problems over to a military dictator to solve.

The dictator is certain, sooner or later, to look for some "adventure" that will make people think that their troubles are being taken care of. And the adventure is very likely to end the way this Ethiopian conquest is ending—in general disillusionment.

The Japs and the Chinese seem to be applying old-fashioned industrial methods to warfare. The former go in for the speed-up, and the latter counter with the stretch-out.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX, NEA Service Staff Writer. DRESS your fish simply. It will taste smarter. Fresh fish needs no disguise, despite all the complicated talk you may have heard. Oysters, too, respond best to gentle treatment. They are their own reward in most cases.

Buy only 100 per cent fresh and quick frozen fish. It should be firm to the touch, have red firm gills and be moist of eye and have shiny scales.

Fish Baked in Milk (Serves 4 to 6)

Two pounds fish filets, 1 egg, 1-3 cup dry bread crumbs, 2 cups whole milk, 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-2 teaspoon minced garlic, 1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley.

Clean filets and wipe dry. Beat egg lightly and brush over one side of filets. Then sprinkle lightly with salt, bread crumbs and lemon juice. Lay in well-greased baking dish. Pour in milk. Add salt to taste and pepper if wanted. Then dot bread-crumbed fish with butter. Bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) for about 35 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley and serve very hot.

Tomorrow's Menu: BREAKFAST: Grape bowl, dry cereal, fried cornmeal, honey, coffee, milk. LUNCHEON: Pigs in blanket, lemon sections, cole slaw, orange cake, tea, milk. DINNER: Fish baked in milk, parsley potatoes, green peppers stuffed with eggplant, grapefruit and lettuce salad, steamed apricot pudding, coffee, milk.

Pigs in Blanket (Serves 4 to 6) One pint large oysters, 1-2 pound thinly sliced bacon, salt and pepper to taste, lemon sections. Clean oysters, carefully removing all bits of shells. Drain thoroughly and season delicately with salt and pepper. Wrap a strip of bacon around each oyster and secure with a toothpick. Use a shallow, lightly greased baking dish. Stand wrapped oysters on end. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about an hour, until bacon is crisp. Serve with sections of lemon and dishes of cole slaw.

SERIAL STORY

HIT-RUN LOVE

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER XV

A SUPPRESSED air of excitement hung over the traffic court. Groups of people clustered around the judge's closed door from which somehow a hint of unexpected developments had crept forth.

Inside Pat still sat on the big leather sofa near the window. Someone had thrown a wrap over her shoulders which sagged with a weariness not all physical.

She wondered dully what they were doing. It might be that she was seeing this room for the last time today. Perhaps she would be fired. It wasn't at all impossible, she thought, recalling again the blank astonishment on the faces of Tom and Church when she had stammeringly exploded the bombshell of her knowledge.

A twinge of sympathy for Larry went through her heart. Larry, too, was sitting down. He was over across the room with Officer Burke standing beside him, and he was watching the attorneys and detectives.

Knowing Tom had cared for her had lessened the ache of losing Larry, of the disillusionment that came from knowing his weakness.

But Tom's love had also been a thing of yesterday. That, too, must be all over. Looking at him, stern and engrossed, she felt that life had become an empty, futile thing.

Losing Larry had been hard. At moments when she understood what he had done to her the world seemed a drear place. But losing Tom made her see what real love was.

The men seemed to have reached some sort of a decision. They stood up, turned toward Larry while Tom spoke.

"You see, Kent, the whole situation has changed, but we want you to clearly understand your rights. You don't have to take the stand. You can rest the case on the people's evidence and permit the jury to make the decision. Or you can go ahead and take the stand as your attorney says he was prepared to have you do."

"If you submit to cross-examination it won't be a picnic due to these new developments. If you want Church to continue the case you may as well know that this witness," pointing toward Pat but not looking at her, "will also take the stand and give her information which, I gather, you know about."

Larry's eyes swung over to Pat. His face was white, his muscles in his jaw tense, the pupils in his blue eyes drawn to pin-points. He stared at her frightened face.

"She can't tell anything that will hurt me," he insisted bitterly. "That remains to be seen," Tom said quietly. "She told your attorney and me enough to make Church ask for a recess in which to get this mess straightened out. It's obvious that Miss McGraw wouldn't have gone this far if she didn't consider her evidence pretty important. I don't believe you understand what putting her on the stand is going to do to you," he added significantly.

"That's how it is," Tom continued. "The sensible thing to do is stop bluffing. You aren't the first defendant he could bluff his way free. If you're at all smart you'll change your plea."

LARRY looked at Pat. "Well, you've every reason to be satisfied," he said. "I might have known, though. And to remember how you used to pretend you weren't interested in society, or important people. I could see how things were shaping up, though, when Sweeney came over here to court. You knew he was going to run for prosecutor; you saw a chance to get in with someone who rates in this town. You thought that by pulling this today you'd get yourself a nice berth. Well, go ahead. I'm through."

Pat's gaze never left his face. His words hit, made her ache with the cruelty of the deliberate misinterpretation.

"You know that's not true, Larry," she broke in desperately. "I begged you to tell the truth. You know I would have stood by you. It wasn't until I saw you meant to use Bill, and me, too, that my love for you died. If only you'd given me a chance to prove that I cared. I wasn't trying to make anyone care—" her voice trailed off as Church interrupted.

"We aren't running a court for the lovers, Kent. You can settle the romance some place else. I'm not going to waste any more time on this case." Pat saw he was irritated. He took up his briefcase filled with papers and shuffled them angrily. "The girl is enough to put you in a bad spot. I advise you to come clean."

"Yes," Tom said, "I've sent the men from the A. I. B. out to check some facts. If Pat's right about where you were that afternoon you'll get tangled up worse and worse in your story. Better come clean."

After that Larry seemed to collapse. "Well, what should I do?" she heard him say.

TOM said something to Burke and the big officer came over to Pat. "Let's go in your office and let them finish up here," he told her, taking her out by the side door.

Alone in the privacy of her room she aimlessly fingered the papers on the desk, stared at the notes on her pad, tried to get her thoughts in order.

They would finish up. Larry would pay his price to society. Life would go on, but it would be empty, shorn of the glamor and romance that it had once worn. She touched the fading penicils that Tom had given her and that she had so carefully tended.

The petals fell, covering the desk with their color. The door opened and she looked up. It was Tom. She turned her head, afraid for him to see her face. The silence was too long.

"The—flowers are gone, too," she said tonelessly. They were words, spoken simply to fill the silence.

"There'll be others," he said. "And they'll be as sweet. Flowers fade, but there are some things in life that don't. Love doesn't fade; not real love. Pat. Not the kind I feel for you."

"How can you now, Tom? After I was so blind and weak? After I wasn't blind or weak to do what you did. Don't think I'm not aware of what it took to make you call Kent's bluff. It wasn't easy to let what you know, particularly when it involved the man you cared for. But you had the strength of your convictions."

"The things Larry said weren't true, Tom. I mean about telling simply to further my own ambitions."

"I know, darling. You gave him his chance. He just didn't know how to play your honest game. Maybe this will set him straight for the rest of his life. I'll do what I can to get him off easy. If he makes restitution to the family, well—I think perhaps a light sentence and probation will be punishment enough. You see he's already lost you."

"He couldn't see things the way we do," she said. "We do see life the same way, don't we?" Tom said gently. "That's why I need you. All our problems won't be solved so easily, but if we're together—"

The pressure of his hands on hers was strong and kind. The days ahead no longer seemed empty and meaningless. Even the petals on the old oak desk caught the sunlight from the window and recaptured the beauty of spring in their faded glory.

Where Poles Get Slice of Czecho

The Poles have passed the platter and the Czechs have sliced away another part of their fast-diminishing little land, agreeing to withdraw troops from the areas shaded in the map above. An international commission will draw up a new frontier, probably giving to Poland the areas 50 to 70 per cent Polish and leaving Czechoslovakia the region where Poles are 10 to 50 per cent of the population. Smaller map locates the disputed area.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY GERRY DICK
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—Both Republican and Democratic national committees are giving some high-powered attention to what the "little woman" thinks about politics these days.
At one time party leaders disturbed the domestic calm of the housewife's kitchen only on election day, when they sent someone around to persuade her to leave the baby or the pickled preserves long enough to visit the election booth.
But today both parties have full-time divisions that pay year-round attention to what women are thinking about government and politics between election days.
The Democrats entrust this job to Mrs. Dorothy McAllister, head of the women's division of the national committee, and the Republicans have Marion Martin directing women's activities for their national committee.
The education program for Democratic women brings lecturers on national affairs to local groups. Mrs. McAllister and her aides seek opinion by making reporters of party members throughout the country and these same members are informed on labor, international relations, agricultural policies, etc., so that they may lead discussions in Democratic groups.
Republican women will be kept informed by monthly bulletins from committee headquarters here giving pertinent facts about major legislation before Congress. The Republican program hasn't got under way, not in fact until the first meeting of the National Federation of Republican Women's Clubs in Chicago later this month.
Dorothy McAllister is young, talks well, rapidly, makes everything she says sound vitally important. She has brown hair, cut in a long bob, brown eyes, is attractive, keen, fashionably dressed. She likes to work with women near her own age and younger.
Marion Martin, directing the Republicans' modernized program, is about the same age, 30ish, buoyant, with a contagious freshness and forcefulness. Both women have tremendous enthusiasm for their jobs.
Both have a sense of humor. Miss Martin thought it hilarious one time when she was facing a large audience which had come expecting to see and hear Marion Davies.
And both women are young enough to think the hardships of organizing tours a lark. Mrs. McAllister laughs about the time she had just time for a shampoo in Washington and had to wait until she reached Boston. Touted but undismayed to get a wave.
They've both had the experience of motor breakdowns and have learned to thumb their way to a speaking engagement.
Watching them in action you decide what the modern woman needs to chase the blues away is not a new hat, but political activity.

BY HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service
NEW YORK.—Call out the Phi Beta Kappa boys. There's going to be a lot of thinking done on the college gridirons this fall. And a lot of severe headaches on the coaches' benches.
Take that on the word of Lou Little, Columbia University's professor of applied gridiron science who is drilling his students these days at Baker Field for their first recitation on Oct. 1 in the Yale Bowl, in the presence of rugged and unsympathetic Elis and some 60,000 spectators. The game is the first of the season for both. Says Little:
"This sport is getting to be a fast game of chess. We used to be able to scout a defense and know pretty much what to expect. Now we still scout them, but we've learned to expect anything and everything. College football today is certainly no place for the athlete who isn't alert and quick-thinking."
"The result is that the quarterback has no monopoly on generalship and brains in this game any more. You know, they used to say that all a lineman needed was a good strong back and a good pair of arms and legs. That's not true any more. The lineman, as well as the back, must be prepared to change blocking assignments constantly, at an instant's notice."
"It's a tough schedule," asserts Little, "especially with big games coming so early. But I'm convinced that that's the trend of modern football."
"Boys get more fun out of a real contest than from a game in which they're running against the 'south wind' and piling up 50 points against no opposition."
"That kind of game makes a boy careless—and then he's more likely than otherwise to be hurt."

Bare-chested J. Smith Ferebee apparently is pretty much in a hurry as he grabs a club from Art Caschetta, his caddy, at Lakeside Golf Club, Hollywood. The rush is brought on by the fact that Ferebee, wealthy Chicago broker, has wagered close to $100,000 that he can play 600 holes of golf from coast to coast in four days. Ferebee is making his dash in a private plane. The gentleman hurrying along in the rear with him is Reuben Trane, his backer.

Citrus Growers Do Not Approve of a Plan of Proration

By United Press
WESLACO, Texas.—Opening of another citrus season in the Lower Rio Grande Valley finds citrus interests faced with opposition to proration of citrus shipments but with both state and federal citrus marketing set up and amended for the 1938-39 season.

First meeting of the growers Industry Committee for the ensuing season brought a preliminary report on the probable size of the crop from Carl W. Vandervort, manager for the committee. He estimated the new grapefruit crop at 13,662,000 boxes or about 15 per cent greater than last season and the orange crop at 2,145,000 boxes or about 45 to 50 per cent greater than last year.

Cyclone Davis Is Denied Ballot Place

By United Press
AUSTIN, Oct. 3.—Secretary of State Edward Clark today notified Arlon "Cyclone" Davis, that he had declined to certify his name as a candidate for governor in the November general election.

pers Industry Committee did not believe the crop would be as large as estimated, the lowest figure suggested being 8,860,000 boxes. Last year's production amounted to 11,880,000 boxes of grapefruit and 1,430,000 boxes of oranges.

Most of the fruit in the 250 orchards included in the preliminary survey, Vandervort reported, checked size 126 or smaller, the figures showing 67 per cent of all fruit examined to be small sizes. About 18 per cent were size 96, 7 per cent size 80, 6 per cent size 70, and 2 per cent size 64. The large sizes, 64s and 70s, were found only in Duncan grapefruit and Foster pink grapefruit, he reported.

T. M. Malden of Mission, sales manager of the Texas Citrus Fruit Growers' Exchange, was named chairman of the Shippers Marketing Committee. Dorsey Cott of Mission was named vice chairman, and Frank Hall of Weslaco was elected secretary.
