'BIGGEST FOOL IN EASTLAND' IS SUBJECT

Of Sermon to Be Delivered at Baptist Church This Evening By Evangelist R. E. Day.

"The Biggest Fool in Eastland," will be the theme of the Tuesday night sermon by Evangelist R. E. Day at the Baptist revival services. The second week of the revival campaign started off well with a good Monday night crowd, according to Pastor W. T. Turner, who stated that there was one profession of conversion last night. There have been seven additions to the church to date. A noticeable feature of the meeting is that all who have joined the church are grown men and women. A number of children had joined previous to the beginning of the revival.

The Wednesday morning service will be dedicated to what Rev. Day has designated as Clean-Up Day. Every member of the church is urged to be present for this mid-week day service.

The revival will continue throughout the week with services daily at 10:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m.

Gomer Williams Dies At Cisco

Gomer S. Williams, 76, pioneer citizen of Cisco, died suddenly at his home here yesterday following an attack of acute indigestion. His death removed a man who for 48 years had been intimately associated with Cisco and its growth from a small village to a thriving West Texas city.

Twenty-one years of that period were spent as postmaster of Cisco prior to the Wilson administration. Mr. Williams was a life-long republican.

Funeral arrangements are being held up pending arrival of a son, John D. Williams, of Oklahoma City, who was expected to reach Cisco at noon today. Another son, Stuart L. Williams, of Pasadena, California, is expected tomorrow.

Mr. Williams appeared in splendid health until about noon yesterday. At 11 o'clock he had gone to the postoffice to mail a package. He came home complaining of not feeling well. A physician was called and after treatment appeared relieved. Near mid-afternoon, however, he was stricken with a severe attack and died shortly afterwards.

Mr. Williams was born in Scranton, Pa., July 3, 1854. He moved from Pennsylvania to Jacksboro, Texas, and then came to Cisco in 1882. September 6, 1887 he married Miss Isabelle H. Evans, a Cisco girl, at Fort Worth. Mrs. Williams survives him.

He was one of the earliest members of the First Presbyterian church of Cisco.

He was also a member of the Odd Fellows order. Had he lived six days longer he would have been an Odd Fellow for exactly 48 years.

In addition to Mrs. Williams and their two sons, Mr. Williams is survived by one sister, Mrs. Maggie Davis, of Scranton, Pa., and three grandchildren.

NORTON'S MOVE TO TENNESSEE

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Norton and family, formerly of Eastland, but residents of Stratford for the past year, have moved to Dayton, Tennessee, where Mr. Norton bought the Dayton Herald. He and his son, Mark, were connected with the Stratford Star in Stratford, which they have sold. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Norton will move to Dayton about July 1.

John D., Jr., Congratulates Son

NEA Boston Bureau
"Like father, like son" is borne out in this exclusive Telegram-NEA Service photo of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and his son, Nelson. It was taken as the oil magnate congratulated his son upon his graduation from Dartmouth College at Hanover, N. H., the other day. Note the strong resemblance between the two. Young Rockefeller will be married this month to Miss Mary Todhunter Clarke of Philadelphia.

Bus Schedule Here May Be Changed July 1

The bus schedule committee composed of men from Cisco, Ranger and Eastland, which went to Mineral Wells yesterday to attend a meeting of the bus division of the railroad commission, returned last night with the assurance that practically all the changes in the bus schedule which the committee recommended would be put in force.

Operators of bus lines, secretaries of chambers of commerce and business men from all over the western portion of Texas were present at the meeting to thrash out the difficulties in the present bus schedules and to make such changes as were thought necessary in order to give better service and insure better connections between the bus lines.

The schedule for Eastland will have six buses each day going east and six westbound buses. The schedule as worked out will be approximately as follows:

Eastbound	Westbound
Lv. 8:20 a. m.	Lv. 1:10 a. m.
Lv. 8:30 a. m.	Lv. 3:25 a. m.
Lv. 11:30 a. m.	Lv. 5:25 a. m.
Lv. 2:40 p. m.	Lv. 11:10 a. m.
Lv. 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 6:25 p. m.
Lv. 8:30 p. m.	Lv. 8:55 p. m.

These schedules are subject to slight changes before they go into effect, but it was said that none of the proposed leaving times would be changed more than one hour. It is possible that the bus leaving Eastland for Cisco, Baird and Abilene will leave at 6:30 a. m. instead of at 5:25 a. m., as shown on the above table, but other changes in the schedule will vary but a few minutes from the time given above.

Two unmasked men walked in to the Donley County State Bank during the noon hour yesterday, made the employees of the bank lie on the vault floor, and scooped up $7,500 and escaped.

Clarendon Bank Robbery Unolved

CLARENDON, Tex., June 24.—Clarendon's first bank robbery in history was an unsolved mystery today, with county officers admitting they didn't have a single clue to follow.

Two unmasked men walked in to the Donley County State Bank during the noon hour yesterday, made the employees of the bank lie on the vault floor, and scooped up $7,500 and escaped.

Lack Of Church Training Blamed For Crime Wave

Mrs. Flowers To Speak at Revival Meeting Tonight.

"When a nation spends annually one eighth of its income for crime it is about time the folk were sitting down and considering the situation," is the way Evangelist Flowers began his message on America's Crime Wave, at the Methodist church last night. He said "You cannot divorce religion and morals, for when you do your morals will fail. No wonder to me that we have such a disgraceful situation in this country."

"The people for fifteen years have been letting the churches alone. Preachers, judges, this country are preaching to empty pews while their members, many of them are gadding around having fun and let the old church go by. One of the results is criminals are on every hand."

Clint C. Small To Speak Here

Will Address Voters in the Interest of His Candidacy For Governor Tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

Supporters of Clint C. Small are making preparations for the speaking engagement of the West Texas gubernatorial candidate here at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday.

A "Small for Governor" club is in process of formation, Small's friends find that his platform is gaining for him a very splendid support.

It is understood that the candidate will be introduced by Frank Sparks of Eastland, former member of the legislature and also former county attorney.

"The rapid rise of Clint Small into prominence in State affairs has caused the so-called politicians of the state some alarm," Sparks said this morning. "His record in the State Senate as an advocate of sane and constructive measures has marked him as a statesman rather than a politician. In fact, his slogan 'Let's adjourn politics and develop Texas' is proving acceptable in all quarters."

It is conceded that the greatest panacea for the ills of today is hard work and plain living. There is a feeling that Senator Small would take into the governor's office a new vision, a vision of business rather than politics," Sparks continued, "and that Texas might experience an era of much needed rest from the harassing activities of politics at work."

It is expected that a large crowd will be interested in hearing the candidate discuss his views on needed legislation, law enforcement, taxation, public utilities, agriculture, highways, penitentiary reform, pardon policy, labor, education, court reform, prohibition and his plans for the general development of Texas.

Cooper Called To Bedside Of His Sick Daughter

Youth May Get Death For Killing The Wrong Man

EL PASO, Tex., June 24.—William J. Meers, youth who sought to avenge the death of his father and shot the wrong man, may receive a death penalty, it was indicated here today.

Judge Jesus Muehrarz, magistrate of the Supreme Court of Chihuahua, Mexico, who was to see Governor Francisco Almada about the case today, said that under Chihuahua law it was possible for him to be given death for the crime.

Meers is held in Juarez for the slaying last week of Antonio Visconti, a waiter in the Owl bar. He is understood to have thought Visconti was the leader of a band of desperados, who in 1923 shot to death his father in a mail train robbery.

Meers, when confronted by authorities with his deed, said simply that he wanted to kill the man.

Southern Cross Nears America This Afternoon

The monoplane Southern Cross throbbed steadily across the Atlantic this afternoon, beating her way triumphantly through fog toward the American continent on a flight from Dublin, Ireland to the United States.

At 1:15 p. m. EST Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith and his crew were radioed to the S.S. America of the United States Lines, a position less than 800 miles off New Foundland.

The Southern Cross at that time was making 80 miles an hour through fog. Even if the speed is held at that reduced rate—the monoplane previously had been making 100 miles an hour—the voyagers should be off Cape Race, N. F. about 11 o'clock tonight, EST.

The Southern Cross, in constant radio communication with ships and shore stations, was writing by radio a remarkable record of the perilous westward crossing of the Atlantic, which has cost so many lives and was only barely achieved once, when the Bremen foundered a lucky haven on barren Greenly Island off Labrador.

Flier Is Visitor
AMARILLO, Tex., June 24.—Zenzaku Azuma, Japanese aviator, left here at 6:30 a. m. today, bound for Wichita, Kansas, the next stop on his world air tour.

QUIT TALKING AND ACT
(Manufacturers Record)

Those hundreds of thousands of Americans who denounce the growing weight of taxes should realize that the solution to the problem is in their hands.

When we insist that public officials run the government as private officials run our great industries; that duplication of effort, outmoded methods and waste be outlawed; that extravagant government expenses be discontinued; and when economy and efficiency become the ruling forces, taxes will go down. Until then we cannot look for relief.

CITY OF HOMES AND CHURCHES

Brooklyn has a population of 2,594,154, an increase of 22 per cent in the last 10 years.

Brooklyn is a borough of homes and churches.

There are five boroughs in the autonomy of New York City. Now the republican leaders are going to adopt the tactics of Dwight H. Morrow of New Jersey to make New York state safe for the republicans in state as well as presidential election years.

That is what is going to nominate a wet candidate for the United States senate, cut loose from the Anti-Saloon league upstate and do their level best to capture voters in the five boroughs of the greater city.

Republicans use their brains. In wet states they are wet. In dry states they are dry. They battle for results and they handle the banks of office to the democrats.

LAMENT THE DOWNFALL OF MORROW

"Morrow has gone to his political doom." This is the verdict of Gen. Supt. P. Scott McBride of the Anti-Saloon league. It is the McBride theory that Ambassador Morrow has sacrificed his political future by joining the republicans in nomination for senator of New Jersey on a wet platform. "It takes away his last chance for the presidency," Gen. McBride admits that it was unfortunate "Morrow took the wet side as the republicans go farther by taking a dry candidate. It is a master of history that Dwight H. Morrow became a messenger boy. It is a likewise master of history that he has figured as a topnotcher in every field of human endeavor that he has invaded."

"I told the men they could kill me if they wanted to but not to harm grandma, grandpa, or 'Buddy,'" Miss Nelson declared.

Bishop Cannon a Bold and Fearless Man

Bishop Cannon has the floor. Cong. George Holden Tinkham, republican of Massachusetts, has dropped the cloak of congressional immunity and over his own signature issued to the American press a statement repeating all the charges he made against the southern churches in the floor debate of the house. It will be recalled that Tinkham was termed by Cannon, "A blustering cowardly congressman for making charges while enjoying immunity."

Neglect May Cause Death of Prisoner

TYLER, Tex., June 24—Failure of H. B. Harkness, a state prisoner held in the county jail, to get medical attention promptly may cost his life, authorities said today after Harkness had been operated on for appendicitis.

He was convicted on a charge of chicken theft last winter and sentenced to a year in prison. Crowded conditions at the state penitentiary, however, kept Harkness in the local jail and when he was stricken with appendicitis local officers had to obtain permission from prison officials for the operation.

The delay in getting the necessary authority for the operation is what resulted in Harkness' condition getting worse and physicians held little hope for his recovery.

Woman Wounded By Kidnapers

PELLICAN RAPIDS, Minn., June 24—Recovering from pen knife wounds about the face, Viola Nelson, 38, Norwegian Grove, today pleaded with representatives of the Minnesota Bureau of Criminal Apprehension "to be sure those men don't bother grandma, grandpa and 'Buddy.'"

Viola told the officers a story of how she was bound, slugged and stabbed when she went to meet three alleged blackmailers without the $20,000 that they demanded. The girl said she had received notes threatening her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Holl, wealthy retired farmer, and her brother, "Buddy."

She said she kept the suspicious so that harm would not come to her relatives.

Miss Nelson said she could identify the men but that she did not know their names.

Wheat Farmers In Predicament

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 24. Wheat farmers in the broad fields of the southwest were between two fires today.

Fast ripening grain demanded immediate cutting and low prices threatened loss to the farmers if they send the grain to market.

July wheat touched 89 1/2 cents in Chicago yesterday, a new low since 1914. In Kansas City July wheat sold at 82 cents. In some of the producing centers the price was as low as 70 cents.

The harvest was half completed today in Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle. Combined harvesting and threshing machines started work in northern Oklahoma and southern Kansas counties this week. Binding operations in Kansas worked northward toward Nebraska, where the harvest was scheduled to open within a few days.

More than 6,500 persons today reside along Borger's main street, an avenue two miles long. There are 18,000 more residing within a two-mile radius of here. W. A. Henderson, who sold the first townside lot in Borger in May, 1926, is mayor. He was elected on a platform of law enforcement.

Eighteen carbon black plants near here produce 320,000,000 pounds of the substance yearly, all but 190,000,000 pounds of the world's total output. The prices range from seven to 30 cents a pound. One gas line into Denver is operated from near Borger while another, feeding fuel clear from Texas to Lincoln, Neb., has been planned. The Phillips Petroleum interests have announced they will lay another gas pipe line from here to Chicago, serving the entire midwest.

Borger, only four years old but over her "growing pains," has taken a place among the industrial cities of Texas.

Bad Borger Settles Down As Law Wins

BORGER, Tex., June 24—Borger the two-gang rough and tumble oil boom town of West Texas whose lawless element was curbed by militiamen last fall following the assassination of a district attorney, now has become a peaceful city, the world's largest carbon black producing center.

Borger, the gateway to one of the largest oil fields in the country, was placed under martial law by Gov. Dan Moody after the bullet-riddled body of John A. Holmes, military district attorney, was found near his home. He had been killed, investigators said, to end his war against bootleg and narcotic rings which operated throughout the Southwestern petroleum district.

Criminals, gunmen, gamblers and fortune teller dance hall girls who thrived here with the discovery of oil, were given "until sundown" to leave town when martial law was declared. Civil city officers, many of whom were charged with

PROHIBITION FORCES TO HAVE FIGHTING LEADER

WASHINGTON, June 24—Selection of Amos W. Woodcock, U. S. district attorney for Maryland, to become chief of the prohibition unit under Attorney General Mitchell after July 1, means that a fighting executive will direct the government's supreme drive for dry law enforcement.

Woodcock, 44, is a lieutenant-colonel in the army reserve corps. He served on the Mexican border in 1914 and in the world war. For meritorious service in the front line he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel.

Woodcock's appointment, announced late yesterday was expect-

Wheat Farmers In Predicament

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 24. Wheat farmers in the broad fields of the southwest were between two fires today.

Fast ripening grain demanded immediate cutting and low prices threatened loss to the farmers if they send the grain to market.

July wheat touched 89 1/2 cents in Chicago yesterday, a new low since 1914. In Kansas City July wheat sold at 82 cents. In some of the producing centers the price was as low as 70 cents.

The harvest was half completed today in Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle. Combined harvesting and threshing machines started work in northern Oklahoma and southern Kansas counties this week. Binding operations in Kansas worked northward toward Nebraska, where the harvest was scheduled to open within a few days.

There are a number of causes of building codes that may get beyond control because of the nature or size of a building or because of the combustibility of its contents. Or, as was the case in the great Atlantic disaster, burning embers may fly through the air.

Wide streets and open spaces afford a measure of protection against fires spreading. However, as most exposure fires occur in thickly congested localities, the only protective factors are the ability of structures to withstand heat and flame and the quality and quantity of fire fighting organizations and their equipment.

It should be understood that there is no such thing as a "fire proof" building. The most serious fire in Chicago since 1871 occurred in 1922 in a $2,000,000, fifteen story office building constructed in the most approved modern manner. The fire started in a nearby structure and the upper floors of the modern building were subjected to such terrific heat that radiation through glass windows ignited the combustible contents of offices, flattened out metal desks and cabinets, and melted glass desk tops and metal fittings.

What we can do is build to resist fire. Masonry walls of adequate thickness with wired-glass windows afford the best fire-stop. Improved metal fire doors and shutters offer a high degree of protection, as do sprinkler systems.

Meet Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lyon!

NEA Los Angeles Bureau
Babe Daniels often has worn a bridal gown as the culmination of movie romances, but this was the first time it really meant anything to her. The picture shows Babe with her new husband, Ben Lyon, and the latter's mother, Mrs. Alvine W. Lyon, as they appeared after the wedding ceremony, an outstanding event of the season in Hollywood.

CHAPTER XI

He greeted her with a brisk that did not have time to out the coarseness of his and led her to a corner table grill room, temptingly laid in hors d'oeuvres, and with unch of crimson roses in the ung man, I suppose."

pointed to the far end of om, which was beginning to ng coffee and smoking, and to her was Alan. Chumback was to Judy, but the n her, though she asked her-

worn as to grudge Chum-

ook her seat with her to their table. She affected mense appetite, and her tugging lips bubbled inconly as the big, pale, blackman with the self-indulgent and the cross mouth sat and d her.

n shouldn't ask me to these places, really, Mr. Punch!"

she said. "I've no clothes. They thought I was the scrub woman
when I came in—nearly turned me out!"

"You will have all the clothes
you want if you accept my proposal, Miss Judy," Gideon answered.

"I don't know what is," she said. "You know, I've never had a dancing lesson in my life."
"That's easily remedied. I've been looking into matters. With your natural talent, it might not take you more than 18 months to get ready."

"Oh, but I love her so much!"
Judy replied.

At the same moment she looked toward the far corner, and saw
that Chummy and Alan had gone.
"You don't refuse my offer, do
you?" Gideon asked.

"Yes, I do."
"Not outright? Please, Miss Judy, think it over. Let's say a week. It is more than foolish of you to give up the idea of a career." Here he proved himself very glib. "Of course, I know that you could get a job any day in any company where there was dancing to be done, and work your way up; but it's a long job, even for a genius, and there's so much to be got over—jealousy and prejudice and pull and all that."

"I know. I don't really want to think it over at all, Mr. Gideon." Judy was very solemn now, and business like, too. "I'm quite happy as I am. I couldn't bear the idea of owing you such a lot of money, and perhaps never being able to pay it back. And—18 months!"

She made a little face of dismay that was almost comic. She had never studied anything in her life. She had never even tried to concentrate her thoughts for more than a moment at a time.
She was all instinct and impulse,
like a feather in the wind; her only ballast was her big, loving, loyal heart.

"I won't take no now, Miss Judy," Gideon gave her a light for her cigar. "Do think it over, please! My offer is open for a week."

As Judy and Gideon left the hotel, a woman passed them. Gideon waved his hand at her in a familiar greeting.

Judy at once recognized that long, sallow face, the bold, indefferent, half-humorous gaze, and the raven-black hair of Storn-way's portrait. The long drop earrings were of black, pear-shaped pearls today. The woman had a superb figure, and was dressed in black, with regal sable furs.

"My sister," Gideon said to Judy. "There is a charity bazaar on here today, and she has a booth."

Jud met his eyes with a blank stare. She was furious with him for making her realize that she was not of his world. He had not attempted to make her known to his sister. He would come and mix with her friends, but she was

"Eighteen months!" Judy stared at him.

"Eighteen months of practically constant work."

"And how am I to live, please?"
"That would be a matter of arrangement between you and me.
Let me say from the beginning that with me it's purely a matter of business. I am a business man.
I have been interested in theatrical concerns before—not all of them successful."

He smiled at her. There was a subtle difference in it to those first smiles that she had hated, and that had seemed to wish to grasp her in an undesired embrace.

"I am quite willing to advance the money for your training—that is to say, your lessons and your living expenses while you are at work."

Judy was so astonished that she spoke without full.

"How do you now I could ever pay you back?"

"I am sure you will. I have eyes in my head, and I know a lot about dancing, although I can't dance myself. I'm too much of an elephant's tusk for that. But if you make any plans, I will get you to dance before the person I propose as your teacher—M.
Guarvenius."

Judy gasped. She knew the name of the famous Russian.

She had sat and cried with delight when she had seen Marie Flomena dance. Flomena was the master's favorite pupil, and her dancing was a mixture of poems and clouds and dreams.

"He'd never take me on!" Judy said.

"Yes, he will. I have spoken to him. He is ready to see you dance at any time."

She was hushed for a moment.

"How do you know I'd be a success?" she asked.

"I am sure of it. To begin with,
it doesn't only depend on you.
With plenty of advertisement, the most suitable theater, a proper support, the best kind of music,
and all that, when you are ready, you're bound to draw all New York."

Judy looked at him, her little face fiery red with excitement.

"You mean that you could pay for all those things, and that you could make me a success?"

"No—it is you who will make the success," Gideon said.

"But supposing I die? You could make me one—that's what you mean?"

Gideon made a mistake.

"Something of the kind," he said. And then, seeing her furrowed brows, he corrected himself. "I mean, until you get the public to appreciate your art, Miss Judy."

She looked at him with the immense gravity of a child.

"You mean that you would pay for me to be a success. Why would you do it?"

"Because I am convinced that you are one of the world's greatest dancers," Gideon replied. "It is a business proposition, pure and simple."

Judy attacked the ice cream and the forced strawberries that the waiter had just placed before her.

"No, thank you, Mr. Punch," she said a moment later. "It would worry me too much. After all, I'm independent now. I ain't got much money, as they say, but I do see life. I never did have any fancy for responsibilities. I should owe you hundreds of dollars."

Gideon smiled at her simplicity.

"What about Miss Morley—wasn't she a responsibility?" he asked.

"Oh, but I love her so much!"
Judy replied.

At the same moment she looked
toward the far corner, and saw
that Chummy and Alan had gone.

"You don't refuse my offer, do
you?" Gideon asked.

"Yes, I do."
"Not outright? Please, Miss

Jud met his eyes with a blank

for making her realize that she was not of his world. He had not attempted to make her known to his sister. He would come and
mix with her friends, but she was not good enough for his.

"I must get back to Dickbread's," she said. "He was mad with me for coming."
"I'll drive you."

"No, thanks! I'll get on a bus."
He gave way, seeing that she was irritated. She would have been more furious still could she but have known that it never entered his head that she could be angry with him because he had not introduced her to his sister.

She would not shake hands at parting, and when he begged her to think well about his offer, she did not answer him.

The next afternoon, close on 5
o'clock, she stumbled out of Max Dickbread's studio, half dead with fatigue. The great man had finished his picture, and, raving at his badness and her hopelessness
as a model, had pushed a 50-dollar bill into her hand. This represented, riches to Judy, but she was too tired to think of the nice things
it would buy.

The acute financial crisis, indeed, was over. Judy could always earn enough for her own erratic needs, in which food played such a small part. Their rooms were ridiculously cheap, and now that Chummy had her little allowance and all her wits about her, and the doctor was paid, and everything was going smoothly, there was no need to worry about money at all.

It had been a wonderful day,
and Judy, though such a town bird, sighed for fresh air and trees and some open space. She boarded a bus to go down Fifth Avenue, but at Central Park she got out.

Almost the first person she met was Alan Stoyne.

Queen Mary's Linen Closet

Among the heirlooms and treasurers of the superb linen collection of Buckingham Palace, England, the most unique is the "mother cloth" of the palace, an especially woven for the wedding breakfast of Queen Victoria and was last used after the funeral of King Edward at a banquet given for the visiting royalty and their suites.

A legend has it that ill luck befalls anyone who chances to spill liquid on this cloth in the course of a meal. This superstition has been strengthened in the popular mind by the fact that, at the state banquet mentioned above, one of the dignitaries in the suite of the Emperor William of Germany accidentally spilled some wine upon

it. Since the making of the cloth nothing of the kind had ever happened and unimpressionable persons of the palace staff frequently discuss the incident.

The royal linen supply, the finest products of Irish and Scottish looms, comprises literally hundreds of table cloths, many of them precious heirlooms of great historical interest. Thousands of napkins of finest linen damask and other kinds of nappery are in the vast collection, valued by an expert appraiser to be worth at least $10,- 000.

Another famous heirloom in the collection is the treasured cloth made for the coronation dinner of Queen Anne. This cloth is carefully stored away and is only exhibited for the pleasure of important guests or connoisseurs. Its value alone has been estimated at $2,500.

It is the sole duty of two maids to attend to the linen room of the palace, where all the royal linen is stored in closets. The table cloths, napkins, sheets, etc., have each their individual closets.

QUIT TALKING AND ACT (Manufacturers Record) Those hundreds of thousands of Americans who denounce the growing weight of taxes should realize that the solution to the problem is in their hands. When we insist that public officials run the government as private officials run our great industries; that duplication of effort, outmoded methods and waste be outlawed; that extravagant government expenditures into the field of private business be discontinued; and when economy and efficiency, rather than political expediency, become the ruling forces, taxes will go down. Until then we cannot look for relief.

'CITY OF HOMES AND CHURCHES' Brooklyn has a population of 2,594,154, an increase of 22 per cent in the last 10 years. Brooklyn is a borough of homes and churches.

There are five boroughs in the autonomy of greater New York. Now the republican leaders are going to adopt the tactics of Dwight H. Morrow of New Jersey to make New York state safe for the republicans in state as well as presidential election years.

That is they are going to nominate a wet candidate for the United States senate, cut loose from the Anti-Saloon league upstate and do their level best to capture thousands of erstwhile democratic voters in the five boroughs of the greater city.

LAMENTS THE DOWNFALL OF MORROW Republians use their brains. In wet states they are wet. In dry states they are dry. They battle for results and they handle the husks of office to the democrats.

'Morrow has gone to his political doom.' This is the verdict of Gen. Supt. F. Scott McBride of the Anti-Saloon league. It is the McBride theory that Ambassador Morrow has sacrificed his political future by gaining the republican nomination for senator of New Jersey on a wet platform. This is the conclusion of Gen. McBride: 'It takes away his last chance for the presidency.' Gen. McBride admits that it was unfortunate 'Morrow took the wet side he could have gone farther by taking a dry stand. It is a matter of history that Dwight H. Morrow began a life as a messenger boy. It is a likewise matter of history that he has figured as a topnotcher in every field of human endeavor that he has invaded. News where will he go from the American senate?

It will be recalled that Tinkham was termed by Cannon, 'A blustering cowardly congressman' for making charges while enjoying immunity.

Bishop Cannon appears to have been mistaken in his man. Tinkham waived all rights and privileges. He repeated his charges outside of the house. Now Bishop Cannon has the American privilege of instructing his lawyers to institute proceedings against the republican floor leader of New England. He may take his choice and institute action for criminal libel, or, as Tinkham is of a wealthy and ancient Massachusetts family, file civil suits in the courts claiming damages for both mental and moral anguish and injury to character or reputation in Virginia or the wide world over wherever the proceedings of the American congress are carried by air of continuous flight.

It was learned that much emphasis was placed on the search for a missing secret service agent of Sheephead Bay, who was accustomed to ring out of his window at phantom enemies. The missing man was once a Sunday school superintendent and disappeared about a month ago.

Bad Borger Settles Down As Law Wins BORGER, Tex., June 24.—Borger the two-gun rough and tumble oil boom town of West Texas whose lawless element was curbed by militiamen last fall following the assassination of a district attorney, now has become a peaceful city, the world's largest carbon black producing center. Borger, the gateway to one of the largest oil fields in the country, was placed under martial law by Gov. Dan Moody after the bullet-riddled body of John A. Holmes, militaristic district attorney, was found near his home. He had been killed, investigators said, to end his war against bootleg and narcotic rings which operated throughout the southwestern petroleum district. Criminals, gunmen, gamblers and fortune-hunter dance hall girls who flocked here with the discovery of oil, were given "until sundown" to leave town when martial law was declared. Civil city officers, many of whom were charred with completely in liquor rings, were ousted and a force of Texas Rangers took charge. Borger was purged. More than 6,500 persons today reside along Borger's main street, an avenue two miles long. There are 10,000 more residing within a two-mile radius of here. W. A. Henderson, who sold the first townsite lot in Borger in May, 1926, is mayor. He was elected on a platform of law enforcement.

Combined harvesting and threshing machines started work in northern Oklahoma and southern Kansas counties this week. 'Exposure' Fires Cause Most Damage The greatest single cause of fire loss is what is known as "exposure." It is responsible for close to 70 million of our 500 million dollar annual waste. The term exposure is applied to any fire that extends from its place of origin to another building

There are a number of causes of such fires—a conflagration may get beyond control because of the nature of the combustibility of its contents. Or, as was the case in the great Atlantic disaster, burning embers may fly through the air. Wide streets and open spaces afford a measure of protection against fires spreading. However, as most exposure fires occur in thickly congested localities, the only protective factors are the ability of structures to withstand heat and flame and the quality and quantity of fire fighting organizations and their equipment. It should be understood that there is no such thing as a "fire proof" building. The most serious fire in Chicago since 1871 occurred in 1922 in a $3,000,000, fifteen story office building constructed in the most approved modern manner. The fire started in a nearby structure and the upper floors of the modern building were subjected to such terrific heat that radiation through glass windows ignited the combustible contents of offices, flattened out metal desks and cabinets, and melted glass desk tops and metal fittings. What we can do is build to resist fire. Masonry walls of adequate thickness with wired-glass windows afford the best fire-stop. Improved metal fire doors and shutters offer a high degree of protection, as do sprinkler systems. Every American city should have

Meet Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lyon!

NEA Los Angeles Bureau
Bebe Daniels often has worn a bridal gown as the culmination of movie romances, but this was the first time it really meant anything to her. The picture shows Bebe with her new husband, Ben Lyon, and the latter's mother, Mrs. Alvine W. Lyon, as they appeared after the wedding ceremony, an outstanding event of the season in Hollywood.

...IN HERE TODAY
Grant, beautiful artist's shares her Greenwich Village apartment with Chummy a lovely girl who lost her seven years ago when she was kidnapped. She has never regained her memory. Steyne suddenly and meets her, but Chummy falls to recognize him. He is in love with Judith, telling that he had never loved her and had not known she was his. Then, abruptly, her memory is restored, and Steyne enters the apartment day she throws herself at him. She takes it for granted she is married, but tells Judith again that he is Chummy, and again that he loves Judith, whom she marries. Judith remains, and goes to pose for successful portrait painter, S. Steynaway. He introduces Bebe Gideon, rich friend who becomes infatuated with her. She starts to dinner, and offers to star her as dancer in musical show.

...GO ON WITH THE STORY
turned up at the hotel ten minutes late. Gideon waiting for her in the vestibule. He greeted her with a brisk that did not have time to out the coarseness of his led her to a corner table grill room, tamplingly laid hors d'oeuvres, and with bunch of crimson roses in the friend is here, Miss were his first words. "With ung man, I suppose." pointed to the far end of om, which was beginning to ut. There sat Chummy, coffee and smoking, and to her was Alan. Chummy was to Judy, but the new what her friend's face. A fierce pang went to her, though she asked her with scorn whether she was worm as to grudge Chummy's happiness. Alan was look-his companion with his re-filled eyes.
she took her seat with her their table. She affected mense appetite, and her tugging lips babbled incoherently as the big, pale, black-man with the self-indulgent and the cross mouth sat and id her.
I shouldn't ask me to these places, really, Mr. Punch!"

she said. "I've no clothes. They thought I was the scrub woman when I came in—nearly turned me out."
"You will have all the clothes I want if you accept my proposal, Miss Judy," Gideon answered.

"Eighteen months!" Judy stared at him.
"Eighteen months of practically constant work."
"And how am I to live, please?"
"That would be a matter of arrangement between you and me. Let me say from the beginning that with me it's purely a matter of business. I am a business man. I have been interested in theatrical concerns before—not all of them successful."
He smiled at her. There was a subtle difference in it to those first smiles that she had hated, and that had seemed to wish to grasp her in an undesired embrace.
"I am quite willing to advance the money for your training—that is to say your lessons and your living expenses while you are at work."
Judy was so astonished that she spoke with her mouth full.
"How do you now I could ever pay you back?"
"I am sure you will. I have eyes in my head, and I know a lot about myself. I'm too much of an elephant, you see. Of course, before we make any plans, I would get you to dance before the person I propose as your teacher—M. Guarnivius."

Judy gasped. She knew the name of the famous Russian. She had sat and cried with delight when she had seen Marie Flomena dance. Flomena was the master's favorite pupil, and her dancing was a mixture of poems and clouds and dreams.
"He'd never take me on!" Judy said.
"Yes, he will. I have spoken to him. He is ready to see you dance at any time."
She was hushed for a moment.
"How do you know I'd be a success?" she asked.
"I am sure of it. To begin with, it doesn't only depend on you. With plenty of advertisement, the most suitable theater, a proper support, the best kind of music, and all that, when you are ready, you're bound to draw all New York."

Judy looked at him, her little face fiery red with excitement.
"You mean that you could pay for all those things, and that you could make me a success?"
"No—it is you who will make the success," Gideon said.
"But supposing I didn't? You could make me one—that's what you mean."
Gideon made a mistake.
"Something of the kind," he said. And then, seeing her furrowed brows, he corrected himself. "I mean, until we get the public to appreciate your art, Miss Judy."
She looked at him with the immense gravity of a child.
"You mean that you would pay for me to be a success. Why would you do it?"
"Because I am convinced that you are one of the world's greatest dancers," Gideon replied. "It is a business proposition, pure and simple."

Judy attacked the ice cream and the forced strawberries that the waiter had just placed before her.
"No, thank you, Mr. Punch," she said a moment later. "I would worry me too much. After all I'm independent now. I ain't got much money, as they say, but I do see life. I never did have any fancy for responsibilities. I should owe you hundreds of dollars."
Gideon smiled at her simplicity.
"What about Miss Morley—wasn't she a responsibility?" he asked.
"Oh, but I love her so much!" Judy replied.
At the same moment she looked toward the far corner, and saw that Chummy and Alan had gone.
"You don't refuse my offer, do you?" Gideon asked.
"Yes, I do."
"Not outright? Please, Miss Judy, think it over. Let me say a week. It is more than foolish of you to give up the idea of a career." Here he proved himself very gulleful. "Of course, I know that you could get a job any day in any company where there was dancing to be done, and work your way up; but it's a long job, even for a genius, and there's so much to be got over—jealousy and prejudice and pull and all that."
"I know. I don't really want to think it over at all, Mr. Gideon," Judy was very solemn now, and business like, too. "I'm quite happy as I am. I couldn't bear the idea of owing you such a lot of money, and perhaps never being able to pay it back. And—18 months!"
She made a little face of dismay that was almost comic. She had never studied anything in her life. She had never even tried to concentrate her thoughts for more than a moment at a time. She was all instinct and impulse, like a feather in the wind; her only ballast was her big, loving, loyal heart.
"I won't take no now, Miss Judy," Gideon gave her a light for her cigarette. "Do think it over, please! My offer is open for a week."
As Judy and Gideon left the hotel, a woman passed them. Gideon waved his hand at her in a familiar greeting.
Judy at once recognized that long, sallow face, the bold, indifferent, half-humorous gaze, and the raven-black hair of Sornaway's portrait. The long drop earrings were of black, pear-shaped pearls today. The woman had a superb figure, and was dressed in black, with regal black furs.
"My sister," Gideon said to Judy. "There is a charity bazaar on here today, and she has a booth."
Judy met his eyes with a blank stare. She was furious with him for making her realize that she was not of his world. He had not attempted to make her known to his sister. He would come and mix with her friends, but she was not good enough for his.

"I must get back to Dick-breads," she said. "He was mad with me for coming."
"I'll drive you."
"No, thanks! I'll get on a bus."
He gave way, seeing that she was irritated. She would have been more furious still could she but have known that it never entered his head that she could be angry with him because he had not introduced her to his sister. She would not shake hands at parting, and, when he begged her to think well about his offer, she did not answer him.
The next afternoon, close on 5 o'clock, she stumbled out of Max Dickbread's studio, half dead with fatigue. The great man had finished his picture, and, raving at its badness and her hopelessness as a model, had pushed a 50-dollar bill into her hand. This represented, riches to Judy, but she was too tired to think of the nice things it would buy.
The acute financial crisis, indeed, was over. Judy could always earn enough for her own erratic needs, in which food played such a small part. Their rooms were ridiculously cheap, and now that Chummy had her little allowance and all her wits about her, and the doctor was paid, and everything was going smoothly, there was no need to worry about money at all.
It had been a wonderful day, and Judy, though such a town bird, sighed for fresh air and trees and some open space. She boarded a bus to go down Fifth Avenue, but at Central Park she got out.

Almost the first person she met was Alan Steyne.

Queen Mary's Linen Closet

Among the heirlooms and treasures of the superb linen collection of Buckingham Palace, England, the most unique is the "mother cloth" of the palace. It was revealed recently through an evaluation of the royal linen taken recently by command of Queen Mary. This remarkable cloth of linen damask is large enough to cover a table seating 250 guests and is used only on occasions of great state importance. It was especially woven for the wedding breakfast of Queen Victoria and was last used after the funeral of King Edward at a banquet given for the visiting royalty and their suites.
A legend has it that ill luck befalls anyone who chances to spill liquid on this cloth in the course of a meal. This superstition has been strengthened in the popular mind by the fact that, at the state banquet mentioned above, one of the denturiers in the suite of the Emperor William of Germany accidentally spilled some wine upon lection, valued by an expert appraiser to be worth at least $40,000.

Another famous heirloom in the collection is the treasured cloth made for the coronation dinner of Queen Anne. This cloth is carefully stored away and is only exhibited for the pleasure of important guests or connoisseurs. Its value alone has been estimated at $2,500.
It is the sole duty of two maids to attend to the linen room of the palace, where all the royal linen is stored in closets. The table cloths, napkins, sheets, etc., have each their individual closets.

WHEN you want to get down-town in a hurry, you don't sprint ten or twenty blocks in order to be there on time. You take an automobile or a street car, of course.

When you want to ask a question of a friend who lives a mile or so away, you don't walk to his house to find out what you want to know. You call him on the telephone, of course.

And so it goes—in all the affairs of your daily life. You take the easy, intelligent means of accomplishment every time.

When you want to buy a refrigerator or a car or a piano, you don't need to look all over town to discover the kind you want. You read the advertisements in your newspaper. They bring you all the facts necessary to decide just which refrigerator or car or piano will give you the most satisfaction, how much to pay, where to buy it.

You buy through the advertisements because they save you time and effort. Because they enable you to command certain values. Because they assure you of getting reliable and economical products every time.

Mackintosh, Clan Charran Chieftain Is 79

Confederation Leader Spends Day In Moy Hall, His Ancient Palace.

BY UNITED PRESS
 INVERNESS, Scotland, June 24.—The Mackintosh of Mackintosh, chief of the Clan Charran, a confederation of 16 clans, including Mackintosh and MacPherson celebrated his 79th birthday today. It is one of the most ancient chieftainships, and is said to descend from Sheagh of Shaw, a son of Duncan Macduff, third Earl of Fife, who acquired the designation Mackintosh-ich, or the Thane's Son.

Although his title is The Mackintosh of Mackintosh, one addresses him simply as "Mackintosh" and it is said that the only thing that makes him cross is to be addressed as "Mr. Mackintosh." His wife, however, is always addressed as "Mrs. Mackintosh," although some of the ghillies and servants call her "Your Ladyship."

The Mackintosh's other names are Alfred Donald—spent today at Moy Hall, his ancient palace-like house, in the center of about 250,000 acres of estate, including some of the finest grouse-shooting moors in the world. He has entertained kings and princes during "the season," and King George was at one time a regular visitor, even as far back as 1906, when he was Prince of Wales. The present Prince of Wales, and the Duke of York have both been guests of The Mackintosh for the shooting.

Memories and legends cluster thickly around Moy Hall. It has been in possession of the Mackintoshs for nearly 600 years, and has seen many bloody clan feuds. At one time it housed Bonnie Prince Charlie, the pretender to the Scottish throne, and the present Mackintosh still has in his possession Prince Charlie's blue bonnet, and the table from which he dined on the eve of the battle of Culloden.

Gone now are the days when the chieftain of the clan was all powerful with even the right to execute, but The Mackintosh still preserves many of the old customs. He still wears the kilt and the Mackintosh tartan of red and dark blue, and his own piper plays the bagpipes around the house in the morning and evening, and in the dining room after dinner.

The Mackintosh, who is lord lieutenant and convener of the county of Inverness-shire, is the 25th chief of the Clan Mackintosh. He was born June 24, 1851, and succeeded his brother to the title in 1876.

In 1880 he married Ella Richards, only child and heiress of the late Edward Priest Richards of Plas Newydd, Glamorganshire. The Mackintoshes celebrated their golden wedding last April 14.

New Dishes to Relieve The Monotony of Meals

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
 Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company.

SOMETIMES we hesitate to try a new dish because we are afraid it will not appeal to the rest of the family, and we go on cooking the old standbys until our meals fall into a rut. This is foolish, because there are many hundreds of excellent recipes for dishes so good that very few people could help liking them. And by using a wide variety of recipes we not only relieve the monotony of our meals for those who must eat them, but also help keep up our own interest in cooking the regular three meals a day.

These recipes are all so good that you will want to use one of them every day until you have tried the entire list. I am sure:

Stuffed Ham Roll:—1 slice ham about 1/4 inch thick, 1 cup bread crumbs, a few grains of pepper, 1/2 teaspoon Prepared Mustard, 1 medium size can Cream of Tomato Soup, 1 tablespoon chopped onion and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce. Soak ham in water if salty. Make a dressing of crumbs, with enough liquid to moisten. Cover slice of ham with dressing, roll up like a jelly roll, and the firmly. Put in roasting pan or casserole, cover with water and 1/2 cup tomato ketchup. Mix the salt and pepper with the flour and pound into the meat. Brown the meat in a skillet, then add the onion, green pepper, boiling water and tomato. Cover closely and simmer slowly until done. This may be cooked in a casserole in the oven, or a skillet on the stove.

Baked Cottage Ham:—1 cottage ham, 1 dozen whole cloves, 3/4 cup granulated sugar, 1 table-

Beefsteak Pie:—Steak or roast beef cut into 1 inch cubes, 1 onion, 1/2 cup Tomato Ketchup, 1 teaspoon Beefsteak Sauce, a small amount of flour and water, salt and pepper, and 4 medium size potatoes. Cover cubes of steak with boiling water, add onion, Tomato Ketchup, and Beefsteak Sauce. Cook slowly for thirty minutes. Remove onion, thicken gravy with a small amount of flour and water, and add salt and pepper to taste. Add potatoes, which have been cut into 1/2 inch slices and parboiled in boiling salted water for eight minutes. Put into a buttered baking dish, cool slightly, and cover with baking powder biscuit dough or pie crust. Bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes and serve with Tomato Ketchup.

Fish Fillets with Tomato and Olive Sauce:—6 individual fish fillets, 1/3 cup crushed Rice Flakes, 4 tablespoons butter or Pure Spanish Olive Oil, and 1 beaten egg. Dip fillets in beaten egg, then in crushed Rice Flakes. Sauté in fat until tender and a golden brown. Serve with:

Tomato Sauce:—2 table- spoon butter, 1 small onion, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 small can Cream of Tomato Soup, 1 small bottle Spanish Olives (chopped), and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Melt butter, add and finely chopped onion. Cook until onions are tender, then add flour, and stir until smooth. Add Tomato Soup, chopped Olives, and salt, stirring until well blended and hot.

SEE TEXAS FIRST

There are innumerable attractions in Texas and the family planning a vacation should give serious thought to an outing in this state, for whether it is mountains, seashore, forest, streams, metropolitan amusements or historic spots—all are to be found in this state and can be reached in less time and with less expense than vacation spots in other states.

Every now and then, we will publish a little article about some Texas town that is unusual. These articles will give you information about your state and may help you in planning your vacation.

lined with cool stone buildings. An atmosphere of old world legends and peace seems to hover about Comfort. The visitor is not surprised to learn that in this community of thrifty, industrious descendants of settlers from Germany there are no jail and no officers.

In the cemetery is a monument to the men of Comfort who lost their lives as soldiers in the Civil War. The beautiful white shaft is said to be the only monument to federal soldiers in the South. In 1862, the soldiers left for Mexico, intending to join the northern forces but on the Neeces they were attacked and in the battle that followed many were killed in both forces. The wounded Unionists who were captured were put to death. Three years later, the bodies were brought back to Comfort and were placed at rest.

Some day, a Texan will write a poem or a novel that will do for this calm community of Comfort, with its tragic background of the Neeces massacre, what Longfellow did with the tale of the exiling of the Academics.

One of the quaintest institutions in Texas is located a few miles from Comfort. More than half a century ago, Carl Apelt, a basket maker, came from Germany and settled on a farm near Comfort. He filled the farm and, in spare moments, made baskets in the skillful way that he had learned in "the old country." But there was only a limited demand for baskets and so he could not spend a great deal of his time in the work as he loved.

One day, as he was returning from the field, Apelt saw a strange creature and killed it by hitting it in the head with a rock. He learned that it was an armadillo and his keen eye perceived that the shell would make an ideal basket and of the reply by bending the tail to meet the head, a handle could be formed.

And that was the beginning of the world's only armadillo farm, which has produced thousands of armadillo baskets that have gone to all parts of the globe. Many tourists visit the farm daily and see the queer animals.

PLOT OF "DEVIL-MAY-CARE" CENTERED ABOUT VIVID HISTORIC EVENTS

While "Devil-May-Care," Ramon Novarro's new M-G-M talking picture, was made mainly for romantic purposes, it will carry down to posterity a picture of one of the great moments of history.

The great scene when the Council of Allies met and read the formal abdication of Napoleon Bonaparte, has been filmed with fidelity covering the banishment of Bonaparte to the island of Elba.

This banishment, and the subsequent imprisonment of Napoleon's lieutenants, provides the excuse for the plot of "Devil-May-Care," adapted by Richard Schayer, Hans Kraly and Zelta Sears from the French play by Scribe and LeGouvé.

Novarro, a Bonapartist lieutenant, escapes from the guns of an execution squad and finds refuge in the chateau of a friend, the Countess. Attired in the disguise of a servant, Novarro plays every of a novel love story with the dainty Dorothy Jordan of dozens of musical comedies.

CONOCO

Celebrates its Conquest
 America's Greatest Motor Club

GERM-PROCESSED is the First Stock Motor to "place" in INDIANAPOLIS Speedway Race . . . Now PENETRATIVE LUBRICITY Proves Worth in the Terrific Punishment of Racing Motor

Dave Evans, driving a one hundred twenty-two cubic inch front drive Miller Special, placed sixth out of thirty-eight starters. Evans added less than one-half the amount of oil usually consumed in the average twenty-four minutes, fifty-four seconds of driving, at an average speed of 92.57 miles per hour.

More than one hundred and seventy thousand cheering, excited people, Friday, May 30, saw CONOCO do something that no other stock oil has ever done before. . . saw CONOCO's claims for the sensational new Germ-Processed oil verified beyond the shadow of a doubt. . . saw the supreme test applied to America's newest oil. . . saw Germ-Processed oil "place" among the leaders of the Indianapolis Race. . . saw CONOCO victorious in the domestic oil market of the Nation!

It was only good strategy for CONOCO to gain the bringing the superiority of Germ-Processed oil to your attention in this sensational way. At a time when motorists in every section of the country have been lending willing ears to the story of the Germ Processed oil, it is the first fundamental improvement in oils since 1901. . . reading the sensational disclosures of motor oil merit following the recent Pike's Peak Test. . . CONOCO, by this masterful stroke, crystallizes the already widespread conviction, that Germ-Processed Motor Oil is the safest oil for every-day driving in twenty-seven million cars.

For the Germ-Processed oil used in this race was the same stock oil that you can buy at any service station bearing the CONOCO Red Triangle logo. Never were you offered any other oil. . . Germ-Processed oil is the first stock oil "placed" in the CONOCO list.

CONOCO has confirmed its claims, justified this request of "If you value that motor, if you would operating costs, if you lubrication than any give you, go to the SPORTRiangle and ask for."
