The Business of War Goes Deeper Into the Red

The machines which man has devised for killing his fellows in time of war may have reached a frightening peak of efficiency, but war itself remains the most inefficient means of settling disputes ever invented. In fact, "remains" isn't quite the word; war seems to be getting constantly less efficient.

A Washington correspondent for a New York paper recently dug into the records to find out just how the costs of war stand these days, and he made some surprising and morbidly interesting discoveries.

To take the life of one enemy soldier always was an expensive business; but it is getting so much more expensive that one is forced to wonder how a supposedly intelligent race can go on putting up with the institution.

This correspondent compared the expenses the United States incurred in two wars—the War Between the States, in 1861-65, and in the World War in 1917-18.

In the earlier war, the federal army fired some 5,000,000 rounds of ammunition, making casualties out of 340,000 Confederates. During the World War, the British, French and American armies fired upwards of 600,000,000 rounds of ammunition, with which they killed 3,400,000 of their enemies. If you will do a little arithmetic, you will see that it takes about 12 times as many rounds of ammunition now to kill a man as it did in the days of the smooth-bore muzzle-loaders.

All of this means a tremendous increase in the cost of running a war. In the Civil War, it cost the northern government approximately $12,800 for each Confederate soldier slain; in the World War, the cost per casualty had jumped to $36,000. In the earlier war, the government spent just a little more than $3,480,000 a day; in the World War, its daily expense ran to more than $28,000,000. In the Civil War, a federal battery fired on an average four rounds per day, from start to finish; in the World War, the average had jumped to 30 rounds per day.

If the institution under consideration were anything but war, a set of figures like these would mean a public scandal—followed by a drastic shakeup. But war, by its very nature, is the most expensive, inefficient, and illogical way possible of settling a dispute.

It kills off a nation's best men and lets its least fit survive. It creates two new quarrels for every one it disposes of. It is disastrous to the winner as well as to the loser. It creates debts that are never paid off and destroys in a year more than can be built up in a generation of peace. It is living and terrible proof that for all his high attainments man is still only a little way out of the jungle.

So need we be surprised to learn that it is steadily getting less and less efficient?

Late news from the European countries seems to indicate that it may be months before they actually get down to brass hats.

SAVING SOIL IS DISCUSSED BY E. V. COOK

"Winter Cover Saves Our Soil," Says County Agent.

Protecting our sandy land against blowing and washing in the Winter and Spring by the use of a cover crop is one of the greatest forward steps our Eastland County farmers can take in soil saving, is the belief of County Agent Cook who is pointing out several individuals in the County who have either been using this practice for years or who plan to start it now.

Some are planning to protect the land and at the same time add badly needed humus to the soil by growing grasses such as Italian rye grass and Abruzzi rye and turning them under in the Spring in time to prepare the land for planting.

Others are planning to go still farther in soil building by planting legumes such as hairy winter vetch, southern giant bur clover, and Austrian winter peas which when turned under not only add humus to the soil but also enrich the nitrogen content of the soil by sustaining on their roots bacteria which take nitrogen from the air and add it to the soil.

Regardless of whether grasses or legumes are planted it is necessary to have a fairly firm, well prepared seed bed ready to plant just as soon as it rains, is the advice of Cook. Italian rye grass can be broadcast on land where peanuts have been harvested without any further preparation and a light harrowing used to cover the seed shallow. Abruzzi rye can be drilled or the same method used as for the Italian rye. 20 to 30 pounds of either seed per acre are sufficient. A small acreage of the grasses should be harvested when the seed mature for a seed supply for another year. The remainder SOMETHING different for breakfast? Also a recipe for chocolate steamed pudding? Here are the answers.

Fried Hominy Grits
(Serves 4 to 6)

Stir one cup of flour into one cup of hominy grits. Pour slowly into boiling salted water (1 teaspoon salt to each quart of water) in top of double boiler. Set over boiling water and cook until grits are tender and water absorbed—about one hour.

Pour into mold which has been rinsed with cold water. When mixture is thoroughly cold and firm, cut into slices and saute in butter until crisp and golden brown. Serve hot with butter and corn syrup, to pour on top.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding
(10 servings)

Two cups sifted cake flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup butter or other shortening, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 egg well beaten, 3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted, 1 cup milk.

Sift flour, once, measure baking powder, soda and salt together three times. Cut butter, add sugar gradually, cream together thoroughly, egg and chocolate, beating smooth. Add flour, alternate with milk, a small amount at a time, beating well after each addition.

Turn into greased mold, 2-3 full, cover tightly and steam 2 hours. Serve hot with sauce, whipped cream or sauce.

Tomorrow's Menu
BREAKFAST: Cereal, grapes, fried hominy, corn syrup, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Tomato juice, green peppers, stuffed baked beans, fruit bowl, coffee, tea, milk.
DINNER: Veal birds, mushroom sauce, stuffed baked potatoes, spinach, lettuce, steamed chocolate pudding, foamy sauce, coffee, milk.

If middles are furrowed just before the seed matures the ripe burr roll into the furrow where can be swept into piles where There will even then be enough seed left to be reseeded the Southern giant bur clover nearly enough to be turned under before Spring planting time.

Austrian winter peas have proved as successful in East county as was expected probably because the land was not fertile and the seed were not always culated. They should be planted much the same manner as southern cowpeas except at least twice

SERIAL STORY MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES
COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MYRA DOMBEY—heroine, the girl who was murdered.
ROBERT TAIT—hero, newspaper photographer—detective.
DANNIE FEELEY—officer assigned to investigate Ludden Dombey's murder.

CHAPTER XIII
DANNIE FEELEY'S preference to the flowers which he had ordered. "If you are looking up the women for the month of May it will keep you pretty busy. I have an idea to run across a lot of florists in this bunch of stuff."

"That was right. There were bills for florists by the dozens—and sometimes there were letters from them, very pointed ones, inquiring as to when payment could be expected. There were the same old letters from tailors and shoemakers."

"This guy Dombey certainly let me see a lot of change whenever creditors caught up with him," Dannie said.
"He did not answer at once. In his hand he held a sheet of yellow paper and he was studying it intently. 'Here,' he said at last, in response to Feeley's inquiring gaze, 'we're getting at something.'"

"What is it?"
"The contract with the fellow who wrote the song 'The Cat's Paw.'"

"Well, what about it?"
"Just this: Ludden Dombey was supposed to have written the song. He made a big hit. But he didn't write it. An unknown, down-and-out musician wrote it, and he made a contract with Dombey to use it. Dombey got behind in the payments, too."

"How'd you know that, and why in the world didn't you tell me?"
"I haven't known it long enough to tell anybody. But Harris Rogers told me, and that's why I was anxious to get hold of these records."

"Now maybe we've got something." Feeley cried, snatching at the yellow sheet. "Does it give the guy's name?"
Tait nodded. "I take that signature to be George K. Weeks."

FEELEY grabbed for the telephone. "They ought to have his address at the musicians' union." He whirled a mechanical number pad on his desk, began dialing furiously. Then into the phone he barked. "Let me talk to Jamison . . . Hello, Jamie? . . . This is Feeley down at headquarters. Have you got the address of a musician by the name of George K. Weeks?" Feeley drummed the desk, waiting. Then: "Okay. Thanks, Jamie." He replaced the instrument in its cradle and turned to Tait. "Hasn't paid his dues for a year and isn't a member any longer. The address they have for him is in the south end—lodging house district. He may still be there." Feeley reached for his hat. "Want to leave this a while and see what luck we have?"

"Sure thing."
The two climbed into one of the headquarters' cars and sped toward the south end. Feeley was a demon at the wheel, and his police siren effectively took care of the traffic. "How long do I have to work for the force before I can have a police siren?" Tait asked humorously.
Feeley spat over his shoulder. "You got to get a car to put it on first."
"I've had cars," said Tait. "I've had cars a darned lot better than this crate. Of course right now I'm renting one."
"Say—" Feeley began hesitatingly. "That is, I probably could get you on the payroll, photographing evidence and that stuff." The big Irishman was embarrassed at his own kindness.
"Thanks, pal. I'd rather stick to a newspaper. And right now I'm too busy to find a job."
Feeley looked at him. "What you going to get out of this? A girl?"
"Listen, Dannie. You're the second guy that's made that crack to me. The first one who made it almost got a sock in the puss. Only the fact that I love you so much saves you from the same fate."
"Also the fact that I'd take all your wheels out and scatter them down the road," mentioned Feeley imperturbably. He wheeled toward the curb. "This is the block."

THEY stopped in front of a dingy gray flat with the inevitable badly-lettered sign: Room to Let. Feeley and Tait got out, and in another moment were rapping at the weather-beaten door.
The woman who answered looked amazingly like the place she kept. "Wanta room?" she said, somewhat suspiciously.
"No, thanks," Feeley told her. "We want to see an old friend of ours by the name of Weeks—George K. Weeks."
The woman snorted. "He ain't been here for a long time. And he owes me rent, too!"
"Do you know where he went?"
"If I did," snapped the woman, arms akimbo, "I'd be getting what he owes me or know the reason why."
"When did he skip?"
"On the night of the 14th, it was," said the landlady. "Sometime between 11 and 11:30 when I was over visitin' Mrs. Kremer. I know when it was exactly, because I'd been keepin' an eye on him. I thought he was still in the room, but he must have got away on me. And he owes me seventeen dollars and eight-fifty cents. I ought to charge him two dollars for scuffing the table, but I'd be satisfied to get my rent and bid goodby to him."
"Well, we want him, too, sister," said Dannie Feeley. "And if we find him we'll remind him about the rent."
"I'll bet you will," answered the woman, her tone plainly indicating that she would wager quite the contrary.

AS they climbed into the car, Feeley said: "He beat it to the 14th, between 11 and 11:30. Did you get that?"
"I did. That was about when Ludden Dombey took his last bow."
"Yeah. Looks like you hit something hot, son."
Tait nodded. "Only we don't know where it is. Mind if I ask a question, professor?"
"Shoot," said Feeley, shoving the car into gear.
"Why didn't you ask that woman what Weeks looked like?"
Feeley grunted. "Never ask a landlady about the appearance of a bird who's run away owing her money. She'd say he was a weazened, sneaky-looking guy with cross eyes. I'd rather trust a description from Jamie—and maybe he's got a picture. Suppose you go back to Dombey's records, and I'll bust over to the union office?"
"Right. There's another skeleton I want to find among those papers." (To Be Continued)

THE dance, to be staged Friday night, October 21, in connection with the second annual Ranger homecoming, will be at the old Elks building next door to the Arcadia Theatre, it was stated today by D. M. Cooper, chairman of the dance committee.

It was stated that the dance would start approximately 30 minutes after the game in order that those who desired to do so could have time to go home and change for the dance.

The Homecoming Dance to Be In Old Elks Building

THE dance, to be staged Friday night, October 21, in connection with the second annual Ranger homecoming, will be at the old Elks building next door to the Arcadia Theatre, it was stated today by D. M. Cooper, chairman of the dance committee.
Bob Blackman and his Varsitonians, a 12-piece orchestra with a girl vocalist, has been secured for the dance, which will start after the Ranger-Breckenridge football game, which is to be played that night.
It was stated that the dance would start approximately 30 minutes after the game in order that those who desired to do so could have time to go home and change for the dance.

Peanut Warehouse Bond Being Sought

J. E. Meroney and C. E. May were in Dallas today, contacting a bonding company there in reference to raising the bond for the Ranger Bonded warehouse. Over 1,000,000 pounds of peanuts have been stored in the warehouse, and operations have been shut down until arrangements could be made for more bond.
It was estimated that there were nearly 800,000 pounds of peanuts still in the Ranger area which have not been stored.

THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Can you conceive of Adolf Hitler as an exponent of peace on earth and good will to men?
Some of the State Department masterminds had to stretch their imaginations considerably, but they did. At least, they imagined a Hitler who could so picture himself in moments of introspection.
This story is given only for what it's worth. But it's a fact that men who worked on President Roosevelt's second cablegram to Hitler actually tried a little long-distance psychoanalysis of the Fuehrer.
Clearing their minds of personal prejudice, they checked closely with Foreign Service men who thought they knew something of the Hitler character. The analysis produced, to be brief, a picture of a soldier with Nietzsche in his philosophical background—a man who considers himself godlike. A man with possibilities of philosophical ecstasy which at best could blaze into fine idealism and at worst into sheer insanity.
In other words, the boys figured that there might be a side of the Hitler character that they could appeal to. What Mr. Roosevelt thought of it all is not known to this writer. But it was the basis of a special appeal, evidenced especially by assurance to Hitler that a grateful world would rise up and call him blessed if he would only call off the dogs of war.

That no one has any great faith that Hitler is now a reformed character or that the second Roosevelt message appealed to his better nature is indicated by the way Rooseveltians sort-ped earlier attempts to make F. D. R. the hero of the occasion. No one wants to take credit for what may prove to be a grave dug for democracy.
DON'T be surprised if Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace gets a tryout as the next Deal fair-haired boy for the 1940 Democratic nomination. And don't be surprised if he doesn't. The less talk you hear about Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson and Harry Hopkins, both more or less ruled out when incipient booms to make first one and then the other governor of New York fizzled, the more you hear about Wallace.
Wallace has been in the White House doghouse since he failed to support Congressman Otha Wozard against Senator Guy Gillette in the Iowa primaries. But his attitude in that contest didn't injure his presidential possibilities. If he survives the present farm program storm you may find Roosevelt and Wallace getting chummy and chummy.
But Wallace hasn't a prayer for the 1940 nomination unless Roosevelt does get behind him.

NEW YORK.—Sid Luckman is the first real 1938 candidate for an All-America position.
He plays more left halfback than what is good for opponents of Columbia's spectacular Light Blues, whom experts say could not have repulsed Yale without him.
Luckman was a towering figure on a weak team last fall.
Old-timers, including Ducky Pond, the Yale coach, can recall no individual . . . not even the Elis' Clint Frank . . . who ever stood out so magnificently in a game as Luckman did against the Blue Devils.
He gave a demonstration of the aerial art which would cause a Sammy Baugh, Benny Friedman, Harry Newman, or Dixie Howell to snort with envy, completing 10 of 17 for a total of 169 yards. He did not make a poor pass. Not once did he miss his man. The passes that were incomplete were dropped or bobbed.
Luckman carried 20 times for 103 yards. He punted seven times for an average of 35 yards from the line of scrimmage, which means an average of 48 yards. One kick was blocked. He thrice picked up extra points with place-kicks.

LUCKMAN is no gazelle, but he is far from being slow and is a determined runner. He is a blocker, a tackler, an imaginative and commanding field general and signal-caller, a safety man who makes no mistakes, and the slickest kind of a faker.
You drag out the dictionary of superlatives in discussing Luckman. Grizzled observers consider his 50-yard pass in the Yale game the most unusual football feat they ever witnessed.
Thirty seconds before the half, fourth down, with six yards to go, Luckman went back in kick formation, faked a run, faked a short pass, shook off two tacklers who apparently had him pinned and made his Titanic toss. The ball settled in Frank Stulgaitis' arms in the end zone for a touchdown.
That wasn't the way the play was supposed to go, but Luckman is an instinctive athlete capable of making his own way and picking his spots when something goes awry.

LUCKMAN stands 5 feet 11 inches and comes in at 194 pounds, six of which he lost in the Yale game and picked right up again. He is a product of Erasmus Hall High School of Brooklyn. He plays no other varsity sport or two but not very well.
Luckman was football-minded as a boy, when his idol was Ken Strong, famous New York University and New York Giant back.
Modest to extreme, he is unaffected by sports page comment. Someone said to him just before the Yale game: "I hope you get a good start toward an All-America berth."
"I'd trade that All-America stuff right now for two touchdowns against Yale," replied Luckman.
He scored the first of four and engineered the other three.
You have to see Sid Luckman to believe what you hear and read about him.

AUSTIN, Texas — A limited amount of funds allotted to Texas for a venereal disease control program will be available November 1 for part financing of municipal venereal disease clinics where the cities have made available local funds for the project, it was announced at Austin this week by Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

Cities that have appropriated local funds and are qualified to receive the supplementary state funds for the clinics are Dallas,
Fort Worth and Houston.

Clinics will begin operating under the plan November 1, at Beaumont, Port Arthur, Galveston and Corpus Christi.

Other cities over the state are studying their local venereal disease control problem and will qualify for assistance as soon as they appropriate the local funds prerequisite to state financial participation.

The state funds have been allotted the State Department of Health by the United States Public Health Service under the provisions of the LaFollette-Bulwinkle bill passed by the 75th congress.

No funds for venereal disease control have been appropriated by the state legislature and this lack of state funds curtails the amount of USPHS funds which can be allotted for the program in Texas.
The present program, therefore, is a small one designed to cope with the program as adequately as possible in view of the limited funds available.

The municipal venereal disease clinics are charged specifically with treating venereal diseases
among the indigent class at no cost to the indigents. Blood tests are run and treatments secured for all indigents found syphilitic.

Doctor Cox states that free ar-senicals for the treatment of syph-ilitic indigents are being distributed to more than twenty rural and semi-rural sections of the state where no clinics are in operation.

"Our present venereal disease program is the opening wedge to control of the genito-infectious diseases. The funds available are totally inadequate to care for the venereal disease problem in a state that has six and a half million population and probably three hundred thousand persons infected with syphilis. It is of the utmost importance that the state legislature, at its next meeting, appropriate money for venereal disease control. Our Federal funds will be greatly curtailed next year
if a state appropriation for venereal disease work is not forthcoming to supplement them. Without adequate funds the program inaugurated at this time will collapse and our statewide venereal disease control program will be almost at a standstill," Doctor Cox concluded.

Watch The Kiddies! This Could Have Been Your Son

In its campaign to reduce this type of tragedy the Department of Public Safety urges parents and others in charge of children to not permit them to play in streets and to otherwise provide for their safety. This young fellow could have grown into useful manhood had he not chased the fumbled football into the street.

Chemical Science
Is Most Important
In Next Big War

By United Press
EL PASO, Texas. — Chemical science will be more important than industrial science in the next great war, Dr. Gerald Wendt, research scientist who is director of science for the New York World

Fair, predicted in lectures here.

He claimed that Germany could last four years under siege, and called Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's boast that Germany could stand a siege for 30 years "ninety per cent bluff."

Dr. Wendt pointed out that Germany's manufacture of foodstuffs, clothing and war munitions would be replaced in event of war by a need for natural materials, and that those would last hardly longer than four years.

"Ten per cent of the sugar served in Germany is manufactured from wood, yet Germany has sugar beets and cane," Wendt said, using that as an example. "Why does she preserve her supply and use the synthetic? Because, in war time, the natural materials would be needed."

In the early stages of the next war, he predicted, gas will be used to a great extent, both on armed forces and civilian populations. Then would come incendiary bombs which would "spread fire everywhere so fast that the flames can not be controlled."

"Gas, as a military weapon, never will be used with great success
on civilian populations," Dr.
Wendt said, declaring that war students estimate a gas attack on New York City by 1,000 planes would result in less than 100 persons being killed by the chemical.

"However," he added, "many times this number of persons would be killed in the ensuing panic. For this reason it is important that men, women and children should study handling equipment and proceed

an attack."
The lecturer said also is so precious it should as fuel, but should be for chemical usage. He dicted that the day will
"sunshine will be con-electricity."

It's an Act, But Plenty Good

Brown University has traveled pretty far along the comeback trail and the chief reason is the father and son act being put on by Coach Tuss McLaughry, left, and Johnny. In addition to playing a bangup game at fullback for the Bruins, young McLaughry also is a national junior hammer-throw champion. The two of them probably are the outstanding father and son combination in collegiate football today.
