If Fascism Comes, It Won't Be From Afar

Having examined the ways by which the Communists are trying to extend their influence in America, the Dies committee now takes up the matter of Fascists; and here, too, it uncovers horrid "plots" which will doubtless worry quite as many people as were worried by the revelations about the Communists—although they will probably be a different set of people.

True it is that the committee seems to have shown that Fascists agents are active in this country. Things have been done, under cover, which stem directly from Berlin and Rome. Soberly listed, they have an extremely unpleasant sound.

Yet one hardly needs to be a professional optimist to suspect that all of the activities of these foreign agents add up to very little as far as the future of our republic is concerned.

Fascism may be a dark cloud on our horizon; but if we ever do get Fascism in this country, we shan't get it because of the bought-and-paid-for machinations of any foreign agents. It will be a home-grown product. More than that, it will place tremendous emphasis on its pure and unadulterated Americanism.

Huey Long once remarked that America probably would have Fascism some day; but, he added, "when we get it we won't call it Fascism—we'll call it anti-Fascism." And Huey's wise-crack is much more worth remembering than are revelations of the Dies committee.

If we ever do get a serious Fascist movement in this country, no taint of German or Italian gold will be visible in it. Instead it will be a 100-per-cent-American move to "save the American way of life." It will mention the Constitution, stress patriotism, and voice a furious distrust of foreigners. It will almost certainly clamor for a bigger army and navy. It is quite likely that, as Huey predicted, it will actually present itself under the guise of an anti-Fascist movement.

All of that will be window dressing. Down underneath will be the meat of the thing. For while it gives lip service to democracy and democracy's institutions, it will insist that there is at hand a crisis which demands stern and drastic action. It will ask for centralized power in the hands of one man. It will pretend at the same time to be very radical and left-wingish, but its promise to the common man will be extremely vague and general.

Some such pattern as that is what we may expect a real Fascist movement in this country to follow.

A few of its characteristics have already appeared, but they haven't made much headway, and there doesn't seem to be much reason to expect that things will be much different in the future.

But we might as well remember what the stigmata are. It will at least keep us from worrying about the disclosures of the Dies committee.

WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON—Private industry is hiring WPA workers in considerable numbers, but available figures do not indicate the work-relief army is simmering down to an irreducible mass of workers who don't want other work or whom employers don't want to hire.

Federal officials are pleased with their latest WPA turnover figures for the country. In August, latest month for which figures can be had, 195,000 persons left WPA rolls and an estimated 130,000 took private industry jobs. About 55,000 actually said they were taking other jobs and 75,000 more quit without saying why. Officials can't see why those in the latter group quit unless it was to get better employment. Another 55,000 were discharged for inefficiency or laid off.

Although WPA has a present peak of 2,129,000 workers, only 15 per cent have been on the rolls steadily since the first peak in February, 1936. More than 6,000,000 persons have worked on WPA at one time or another.

About 53 per cent of those added to the rolls in August were going on WPA for the first time, approximately the percentage in previous months. The separation rate also has remained relatively steady, around 6 per cent. Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams says: "We're not just churning around with the same people. This is an economic problem."

SERIAL STORY

MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MYRNA DOMBEY—heroine, wife of the sensational swing band leader.
ROBERT TAIT—hero, newspaper photographer—detective.
ANNE LESTER—Myrna's closest friend.
DANNIE FEELEY—officer assigned to investigate Ludden Dombey's murder.

Yesterday, the taxi driver is knifed at the old factory building where Tait is called and Tait wonders about the perfume there, the same scent as used by the strange, exotic blond.

CHAPTER XVII

AT the first stair landing, Tait paused. The light, he discovered, came from a candle set on a floor in its own wax. He reached down and touched the wax in which it had been stuck. It was still warm and soft!

Tait stood up quickly, his back against the wall. The landing was bare. There were no openings. It simply doubled back to reach another series of stairs to the next floor. The stair well was typical of those built into the factories of two decades ago when modern health and fire protection weren't considered.

Cautiously, Tait peered up to the second landing. For a moment his heart wavered. It all seemed so much of an invitation to death—and yet—yet he could be very close to the murder of Ludden Dombey and the solution for Myrna's problems. Suddenly he snatched up the candle, snuffing it out as he did so. In one swift movement he leaped for the second series of stairs holding an arm ahead of him in the darkness. Every moment he expected to feel in his flesh the cold steel of a blade either thrust or driven.

candle. The room was absolutely deserted. A few machine bases were all the evidence that it had once held life, and certainly no one had been making a home of it.

In the dim light of the candle Tait noticed something odd. His own footprints were clearly visible on the dust-covered floor. But the path of the would-be murderer was of a different nature. It had been swept as he went, as if with a coat or scarf! Tait thought bitterly that the factory roofs were gravel on tar. There'd be no footprint there.

Grimly disappointed, he retraced his steps to the street. The astonished stare of the taxi driver sought him from the depths of the cab. "I never thought you'd be down here again on your feet, mister!" He was holding his shoulder now painfully. "Did you see anything of that so-and-so who sliced me?"

Tait shook his head. "No. And I'm sorry to have got you into this mess, old man. I'll make it right with you—and now we'll get some attention for that shoulder."
"You'll have to drive. And say, if I gotta stay in the hospital all night you'll have to explain it to my wife. She's funny that way."
Tait slid into the driver's seat. "I'll keep you out of the doghouse, pal."

"You were," said Dannie Feeley, "a double-barreled idiot to go up those stairs. But by golly, as long as you did it, I wish you'd got a look at the bird who wanted to cut into you."

musician. He might think that I'm out to gyp him, too."
"We'll go down to that factory building tomorrow and have a look at it in the daytime." Feeley rolled the car up before the wide steps of the General Hospital. "Do you think this taxi driver'll help us any?"

"I doubt it. I was sitting right in the car and it happened too fast for me. He didn't seem to know what hit him—but it's worth a try. Maybe he's collected his wits by now."

The pair were ushered to the driver's room by a nurse. At sight of Tait the man burst out, "Say, did you telephone my wife like I told you?"

Tait laughed. "I certainly did. And she believed me, too."
"I wish she'd believed me case in a while," sighed the injured man.

"This is Detective Feeley. He wants to ask you some questions about what happened. That is, if you feel all right now."

"I'm okay. The doc' fixed me up in good shape. But I don't remember nothing except the flash of that knife—and the way it felt when it hit me."

"Try hard," Feeley urged. "Didn't you see the arm? Couldn't you tell whether your assailant wore a long coat or a short one? When you struck the match didn't you see a face or a hat?"

"No-o-o. . . . You see, I just struck the match and I was lookin' up at the top of the doorway for the number. I—it kind of seems like the guy wore a long overcoat, but I don't know just how I got that idea. I'm sure I didn't see his mug."

"Tait here says he smelled perfume distinctly. Did you?"
"Perfume?" The man looked puzzled. "No. I don't think I smelled any perfume. But then, my nose ain't so good either."

Feeley sighed, and cast an oblique glance at Tait.
"I wish I could be more help, officer. But the fact is, it just happened so quick I don't know exactly how it was. I got a couple of slices and I dropped flat—maybe I was only scared. I just laid there on the pavement with that damn cat meowin' somewhere around me."

Tait started. "A cat? You hear a cat meowin'?"
"Yeah, I think so."
"Was it before or after you got knifed that you heard it?"
"Well . . . I can't be sure, but it seems to me like it started just when I struck the match."

Tait looked at Feeley. "Ever hear of 'The Cat's Meow'?"

THE EXTENT OF PERSONAL RIGHTS

Text: Ecclesiastes 2:1-3, 10, 11; Romans 6:17-23; 14:21

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D., Editor of Advance
THE question of personal rights and preferences in relation to social liberty and social welfare is one that has been persistent in every age. It has become increasingly complex under the conditions of modern civilization, but a book like the Bible—coming out of ancient times—reveals the extent to which it has always been emphasized.

What are the limits of personal liberty; and even where these liberties are well defined and approved, to what extent by voluntary action should the individual refrain from exercising the fullness of his liberty because of the possible effect of his conduct on other people or because of the influence of his example?

There is no uniform answer to the questions which arise. It is easy to lay down general principles, but it is not so easy to apply these in every case—and there is a wide range of conduct in which the individual must be free to choose his own course; otherwise, his conduct would be one of compulsion rather than of liberty.

It seems clear that the individual has no right to liberties which infringe upon similar liberties of other people. Such liberties, exercised by individuals, become matters of special privilege.

Dimly and slowly, but apparently surely, modern communities are recognizing this. The ruthless individualism, which yesterday was associated with individual right and liberties, tends to become a thing of the past. We no longer recognize the right of an individual to pursue his own course with disregard of the effect of that course upon the rights and interests of his fellow-men.

BUT a difficult problem arises, because undue regulation and regimentation mean the breaking down of initiative and the destruction of personal liberty if they are pushed too far. What is necessary is that men should see the problem of the attainment of liberty from angels, and should develop proper balance between rights and liberties of the individual and the welfare of society as a whole.

It is of no value to develop large liberty on the part of a few individuals which is used and exercised to make vast numbers their fellowmen virtual slaves. On the other hand, all individuals become virtual slaves if they live under a society where the individual has no rights or privileges at all.

Religion, as our lesson suggests, ought to have something to do with these issues; in fact, Christian religion has a special deal to do with them.

Christianity lays profound emphasis upon the love of man for man. It is a religion which when it is truly believed and followed, enjoins upon every individual in the early religious communities as the coming of the individual a great sense of freedom. Nothing is more evident than that in the history of Christian experience, but freedom becomes exercised wise self-restraint, action, a good judgment.

Paul understood this very well and wrote of it rather plainly when he discussed such questions in the early religious communities as the coming of the individual a great sense of freedom. Nothing is more evident than that in the history of Christian experience, but freedom becomes exercised wise self-restraint, action, a good judgment.

The Christian individual must determine these things for himself, and we must be careful about judging one another in manifold questions that are concerning the details of conduct.

his pistol as the posse burst into the room.

Austin is, of course, the politically-minded city in the State. Even when the headlines in Austin newspapers do not put upon some governmental or political event, the newswriters will upon some political story with small heading and base their shouts upon that. Particularly this true of the newswriters around hotel entrances.

They shout "All about State fiscal Zilch." If any issue is really printed about some of the officials at Austin, the copy would sell at two-bits apiece, and most of the buying would be done in a big hurry by the officials and their friends, intent upon suppressing the issue.

Just about the last work newspaper offices is the home that Col. George T. Spaulding built for his Graham Lee and Graham Daily Reporter, edited by H. I. Trout, widely-experienced journalist.

A fan big enough for an airplane propeller completely changes the air in the building every second. There is a fireproof vault to store the historic files of the Leader, founded 62 years ago. Alongside the building, is a courtyard formed by three structures, there is already a big tree, grass and flowers will be set to create a beautiful patio.

ENGLISH BAFFLES STUDENTS
By United Press
BERKELEY, Calif.—University of California professors wondering if English is ceasing to be used in the United States, of 2,897 prospective students took the required English test entering the university, 1,714 failed. Percentage of those who passed was 62.8, or 3 per cent less than last year.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN
BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer
Monday's Menu
BREAKFAST: Fruit bowl, oatmeal, raw brown sugar, cream, raisin bread toast, coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Cream of Brussels sprouts soup, ham rolls, ginger bread, apple sauce, tea, milk.
DINNER: Liver and bacon creamed potatoes, broiled matatoes, endive salad, apple brown Betty, ham sauce, coffee, milk.

Salt soups and meat sauces are fore cooking, in order to extract meat juices.
Poach eggs in well salted water to flavor the eggs and prevent whites from running. Boil in salted water to keep the whites from running out if the shells are cracked.
Potato Absorbs Excess Salt
If grapefruit is unusually salted, add a pinch of salt before eating. A very few grains of salt added to coffee, cocoa and chocolate will improve the flavor.
If food has been overcooked, add whenever possible a raw potato for the remainder of the cooking time. The potato will absorb much of the saltiness.

Telegram Invites Local Women to A Cooking School

The Eastland Telegram has scored again!

This newspaper has just been successful in securing the new Motion Picture Cooking School, "Star in My Kitchen," which will be presented at the Connellee Theatre, October 26-27-28.

Mark the days on your calendar because every woman and man in the community is hereby extended a cordial invitation to see, absolutely free, this fascinating picture which weaves helpful, intelligent lessons on cooking and home-making into a humorous and romantic plot.

The Motion Picture Cooking School is a brand new idea. First conceived last year, it has met with acclaim from women throughout the country, who like the happy combination of sparkling entertainment and close-up cooking instruction. Seats in the back row are as good as those in the front row—the motion picture permits everyone to hear and see every trick in frosting a cake, making a pie, or cooking bananas.

"Star in My Kitchen" was produced in Hollywood, and the audience will recognize many of the rising young actors and actresses who take part in it. Women young and old will appreciate the humanness of the romantic story, in which home problems are approached from an entirely new angle.

The Motion Picture Cooking School has graduated beyond the demonstration course in the wide

First Baptist Church school, 9:45 a. m.; morning service at 11 a. m.; B. T. U. at 6:15 and evening service at 7:30. Rev. Jared I. Cartledge, pastor.

Church of Christ school, 9:45; morning services at 11 a. m.; evening period at 7:30. Rev. Robert Waller, pastor.

Church of God School, 9:50 a. m.; morning period, 11 a. m.; evening worship at 7:30. Rev. H. C. Hathcoat, pastor.

variety of household equipment assembled in clear view of the audience. All of the practical equipment is seen in active use, and because "seeing is believing," the audience will soon learn that pies and cakes and salads can make them "stars in their kitchens."

Experienced housekeepers will thrill to the adventures of the young Dedece Abot, who suddenly finds herself with a large home to manage and several mouths to feed—as well as a handsome young movie actor to impress.

What happens when she tries to make a fluffy lemon meringue pie or a marshmallow chocolate cake? What happens when the "man of the hour" drops in for dinner?

To unravel the mystery in advance would be to rob this clever tale of its novel approach. However, the audience is due to share in a rollicking good story and to learn much about home-making at the same time.

Every listener will find a harvest of practical ideas among the suggestions for more efficient house-making, covering such daily problems as laundry, refrigeration, up-to-date entertaining, beauty secrets, news of modernized home equipment and tips on making these mechanical servants yield the highest degree of usefulness.

It will be a real cooking class, just as though the model kitchens were right on the stage, and all of the popular features of the old-time cooking shows are retained: free recipe sheets, the atmosphere of congenial informality, the wise counsel, the hints on clever short-cuts, and the distribution of daily gifts and real surprises.

Accept the invitation of the Eastland Telegram and plan to join your neighbors in the Connellee Theatre on October 26-27-28, at 9 a. m.
