MAN SAYS DIED VICTIM OF AN UNCLE

A woman was convinced that the victim of an accident Sunday afternoon was a great-uncle whom she had known for 34 years. A. Payne, the Cisco engineer viewing the body of the man who died Tuesday at the scene of the mishap, said she believed the man was her great-uncle, whom she had known for 34 years.

The woman came to Eastland to view the body after reading news reports of the accident. She was still being held at the home because of a belief that others, too, might be interested in the body.

Anton Firm Low Bidder On Work

Public Construction Company of Eastland was low bidder Tuesday for a job for 6.5 miles of flexible base and double asphalt treatment on Highway 193 from the junction of Highway 89, it was announced after tabulation of bids by the State Highway Department.

Cutting China's Life Lines

The fall of weakly-garrisoned Canton before a small Japanese expeditionary force cuts off the best source of supply of the Chinese armies via the Canton-Hankow railroad, and makes the fall of Hankow imminent. Chinese government and military headquarters are moving to Chungking, while the busy British island port of Hong Kong is completely cut off from the Chinese mainland. Arrows in above map indicate supply routes to Chinese troops.

PRESIDENT IS MISINFORMED DIES DECLARES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Chairman Dies of Texas of the House committee investigating un-American activities, charged today the President was misinformed concerning the inquiry and that cabinet members had aided "a campaign of misrepresentations" against the committee.

"That the President has been wholly misinformed is obvious," Dies said. "Of course, the President did not hear the testimony, and has not read the records. He is evidently relying on reports from prejudiced sources."

Fact-Finders Are Given More Time By The President

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—President Roosevelt today granted his fact-finding committee a 48-hour extension of time in which to report to him its recommendations in the railroad labor wage dispute.

EXPENSES OF COUNTY WILL BECOME MORE

Eastland county's expenses next year will show an increase over those of the current year, according to the 1939 budget on file in the county clerk's office. Expenses of the county from January 1 to December 1, 1939, according to the adopted budget, will be $320,495.80. The adopted budget for the current year provides for expenditure of $316,408.02. In 1937 expenditures were listed at $289,150.23.

While the expenditures show an increase next year, revenues, too, are expected to increase. The estimated tax revenue for this county next year is fixed at $321,762.50.

Texas September Toll of Highway Victims Was 126

With the September traffic toll up to 126, state patrol statisticians have pointed to several causes of most of the traffic tragedies, according to Criminal District Attorney, Earl Conner.

Of the 1,173 collisions reported last month, 146 occurred because drivers did not observe right-of-way regulations which permits vehicles approaching intersections from the right to pass first, provided intersections are not locally controlled.

EUROPE'S PLAN FOR PEACE IS GIVEN SETBACK

By United Press
Europe's plan for peace encountered new difficulties today as approaching the problem of returning Germany's pro-war colonies.

While the British cabinet was believed to have decided to put its friendship treaty with Italy into effect in November, as a move toward stabilizing peace, the German colonial demands appeared likely to provide a much more thorny question.

Germany lost more than a million square miles of possessions after the World War. They were divided up among victorious allies.

In Berlin semi-official statements said foreign reports that Germany would accept part of the Belgian Congo and part of Portuguese Angola in Africa as compensation for its lost colonies, were "pure conjecture." They said that "certain" British circles had made such indirect suggestions.

Meanwhile Great Britain sought to tighten empire ties by appointing the Duke of Kent as Governor General of Australia.

Japanese troops completed the peaceful occupation of Hankow, after fighting through Chinese defenses in the Yangtze Valley. Chinese forces reformed farther inland and were ready to fight on the government announced, and General Chiang Kai-shek will defy Japan's demands that he resign.

Movie Cooking School Is Praised by Those Attending

Women of Eastland and community were enthusiastic in their praise of the "Star in My Kitchen" motion picture cooking school which opened at the Connelley theatre Wednesday morning and will continue through Friday, at 9 a. m. each morning. It's all free and prizes are awarded each day to those who are present when their names are called.

The picture is romantic in its theme, and blends in with the everyday culinary demands of the families of people in all walks of life. It is entertaining and instructive and is well worth the time of any woman to go and see each morning.

State Relief Picture Is Not a Rosy One

AUSTIN, Texas — Adam R. Johnson, director of the Texas Relief Commission, does not view the relief picture in Texas—now and for some time to come—as a rosy one. When the depression first was felt it was thought $6,000,000 would put Texas through without trouble. A federal loan for that amount was obtained, repayment being made out of subsequent highway appropriations. Soon it became apparent the $6,000,000 was but a drop in the bucket. Bread bonds were issued to supply $20,000,000 more. To date an actual expenditure of $116,800,000 has been made and since Jan. 1, 1938, commodities worth $25,000,000 have been distributed to those on relief rolls.

To get the supplies and assignment of Texans to CCC and WPA projects a state certifying agency is required. This is being financed with the balance left from bread bonds. Johnson is trying to make the funds last until the next legislature can provide.

Dreams Haunt Two Tombstone Tumblers

OAKLAND, Cal.—Bad dreams, as a result of having turned over $6 tombstones in the Mountain View cemetery here, finally caused two men, to confess to the police that they were responsible. They explained they had been drinking, and had begun playing leap frog over the gravestones but finally decided that it was more fun to turn them over.

The Czechs Are Settled—Who's Next?

Assuming that the new four-power scheme to settle the Czech situation is finally put into effect, this question remains: Is the central European problem settled for good, or just for a while?

If the settlement is permanent—if the conflicting forces which nearly drove the continent to war have at last reached a stable equilibrium—then the world may indeed rejoice.

But if the settlement is only temporary, then nothing has really been settled at all, and the factors which provoked the recent crisis will presently provoke another.

The first thing to consider is the effect which lopping off the Sudeten lands will have on Czechoslovakia itself. There is more than a political question involved here; there is an economic factor also.

A current bulletin from the Alexander Hamilton Institute remarks: "The industries in Bohemia and Moravia are highly integrated, and a political division of these provinces would completely disrupt business conditions in what will be left of Czechoslovakia. . . . The question has even been raised as to whether Czechoslovakia can survive as an economic unit if a substantial portion of her territory is ceded to neighboring countries. Thus, while the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia may seem to be a solution to the European problem, it cannot constitute a permanent and definite solution."

There is something to consider. When all is said and done, the fact remains that Czech independence was guaranteed by binding treaties with what are commonly considered the anti-Fascist nations, and in the pinch these treaties collapsed. The small nations which are supported by similar treaties must presently realize that those treaties mean very little.

That, in turn, is very likely to be followed by a realignment of the nations. The smaller powers which have relied since the armistice on their alliances with France are extremely likely to turn now to Germany.

That all of central Europe will swing into the German orbit looks like a safe bet. For it has been demonstrated that Berlin's "mailed fist" policy gets results.

So we can look ahead, probably, to more or less complete German dominance of middle Europe—economic and political dominance, certainly, even if formal alliance is lacking. And then, with the grain, the oil and the materials of that rich region at his disposal, Hitler can be expected to go ahead toward world dominion along the lines laid down in "Mein Kampf."

If that drive is ever to be contested this Czech "settlement" has settled nothing.

It has, of course, provided a breathing space—a breathing space which will do Hitler more good than his opponents. But the real cause of tension in Europe has not been abated. On the contrary, we may look forward to a renewal of the tension at a not-distant date.

The Real Love of Sir Thomas Lipton's Life

When Sir Thomas Lipton died at his home in Osidge, London, on October 2, 1931, newspapers throughout the world carried the famous picture of Sir Thomas in his yachting cap and gave their readers the story of his life.

But these articles, in the main, stressed the story of his later years: Sir Thomas as great philanthropist, Sir Thomas as ambassador of good will, Sir Thomas as celebrated yachtsman; and forgot to emphasize the title of which he was proudest. This title was Thomas Lipton, Tea Planter, Ceylon.

For tea was the consuming interest of Thomas Lipton's life—from the day in 1889 when his first purchase of twenty thousand chests of tea arrived in Glasgow and the loads were drawn through the streets of that great Scottish city accompanied by brass bands and bag pipes, until the day 42 years later when the beloved old man passed away.

Up to the time of Lipton's entry into the tea business, most of the tea in the world came from China. The island of Ceylon was known as a great coffee-growing country. There was not a tea plant on the island. But in 1870, Ceylon was visited by a blight that snuffed out the life of every single coffee plant, and promised to spell economic disaster for Ceylon.

In the gloomy days that followed, young Thomas Lipton and some other adventurous souls thought: "Why not try to grow tea in this rich Ceylon soil and exceptionally gentle climate?" Tea plants were imported and cultivated with scientific care.

Never was experiment more successful. Ceylon proved to be one of the great tea-growing spots in the world. Here sprang from Mother Earth tea unsurpassed for delightful flavor. And, oddly enough, the finest of all the tea gardens in Ceylon were Thomas Lipton's.

With his own superb tea as a basis, Thomas Lipton mixed a blend so fine that it has carried off top honors in five world's fairs. And, at the Great Tea Exposition of Ceylon and India, Lipton's own tea was awarded the Gold Medal.

Lipton's Tea came to the attention of royalty, and he became "Tea Merchant by Appointment" to three different royal families. A day arrived when knighthood was bestowed upon him and he became Sir Thomas Lipton.

Today, T. O. M. Sopwith, Esq., instead of Sir Thomas, comes to America to try to win back the "America's Cup," symbol of yachting supremacy, but the memory of Sir Thomas is dear and his picture still familiar to Americans and other people of the world. This picture, appropriately enough, is seen most often accompanied by the thing he would like to be remembered for. It is printed on the familiar yellow labeled packages of his own tea. The signature below the picture reads, quite simply, "Thomas J. Lipton, Tea Planter, Ceylon."

Children Love Pancakes for Lunch

Every boy and girl thrills to a stack of piping hot pancakes. So if you want to keep the children happy, have a nourishing pancake lunch ready when they come in. Here's a thrifty luncheon menu that is packed with just the things youngsters need most. And it is so easy to prepare.

Tomato Juice
Aunt Jemima Hot Cakes
Syrup Bacon Milk

Of course it is important to know how to make good hot cakes. However, this is simple with these directions:

- Mix equal parts of Aunt Jemima's Ready-Mix with milk or water.
- Have griddle or skillet just hot enough. To test, put a drop of water on griddle. If it goes right up in a puff a steam, griddle is too hot. If it bubbles around a second before evaporating, griddle is hot enough.
- Use a pat to grease griddle lightly. Pour batter. Bake each side to a golden brown.

PREFER EASE? DON'T MILL FLOUR!

Modern Milling a Complicated, Exacting Business

One reason for the complexity of modern milling is this: a high-quality, all-purpose flour such as Pillsbury's Best, which is featured in the Motion Picture Cooking School, cannot be milled from a single type of wheat.

There are hundreds of kinds of wheat, each of which may vary from year to year, according to soil and climatic conditions. Yet the blend of choice wheats from which Pillsbury's Best Flour is milled must produce not only a flour that never varies in quality but one equally suited to all kinds of baking.

The first important step is taken by Pillsbury's grain scouts. At harvest time they survey the country's grain-raising districts, collecting samples of wheat. As samples of these wheats arrive at Pillsbury mills, they are ground in a small experimental mill. Chemical analyses of these flour samples determine what blend of wheats will match Pillsbury's ideal all-purpose "balanced" formula.

Then, as the actual milling of Pillsbury's Best Flour is done, still more tests are made. Every hour during the day, both chemists and bakers check the quality of the flour. No bag of Pillsbury's Best Flour can leave the mill until it has been proved perfect in quality and performance.

The milling of flour long ago ceased to be merely a matter of grinding wheat. It is a complex process requiring skilled technicians, highly specialized equipment, and years of experience.

Potato Salad Star In Its Own Right!

Few food families have as many cousins, and brothers, and in-laws as the potato salad family. Some are more at home at a picnic than anywhere else. Others put on party airs, and are worthy to appear at the most fashionable wedding suppers. Still others are friendly stand-bys for warm evenings, when more elaborate hot foods pall on the appetite.

Yes, there are dozens of members of this familiar old family. But for a year-round, all-star, never-failing potato salad to arouse enthusiasm in any audience, here's a trick to bring down the house every time. Try using "Miracle Whip" Salad Dressing in your favorite potato salad, and watch Timothy Spud and Lady Pomme de Terre respond to the treatment gratefully. Any potato salad is the better for the just-tart-enough, just mild enough flavors of "Miracle Whip," the salad dressing which was created especially to please the American taste. It is a combination of old-fashioned boiled

POTATO SALAD
4 cups sliced cooked potatoes
2 cups sliced celery
1/4 cup capers
Salt, pepper
Miracle Whip Salad Dressing
Lettuce
Baked or broiled ham
Stuffed olives

Toss together the potatoes, celery, capers, seasonings to taste, and salad dressing to moisten well. On a round chop plate place a border of crisp lettuce. Add a row of sliced ham, then fill the center of the plate with the moistened potato salad. Cut additional sliced ham into julienne strips and sprinkle them over the top of the salad. Garnish the plate with stuffed olives.

VANITY RULES HUNTERS
CANTON.—A report from the lieutenant governor of Papua is to the effect that one of the principal motives for head hunters is to please the girls. The latter have a preference for men who have demonstrated their ability to bring in a human head now and then.

Now Get This Straight, B

"What this country needs"—according to this emphatic young who emulates his father in discussing the economic situation—of ripe bananas! Bill, the listener, seems to be taking it in bits of the mellow fruit. A rugged individualist, he agrees a feat to peel his own.

WHEN your Junior or Jane takes time out to eat his favorite fruit, that's one time you need not worry. Bananas—the fully ripe ones with the brown flecks on the peel—are "good as gold" for the children and thoroughly digestible. The famous Dionne quintuplets were fed mashed ripe bananas before they were a year old. Doctors advise giving babies thoroughly ripe bananas as one of their first solid foods; the bananas are mashed, strained, whipped into milk or fed with a spoon.

MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS MYRNA DOMBEY—heroine, wife of the sensational swing and leader. ROBERT TAIT—hero, newspaper photographer—detective. NAVE LESTER—Myrna's close friend. DANIE FEELY—office assistant—investigate Ludden Dombey's murder.

Yesterday No trace is found of the missing musician. The prosecuting attorney seeks to tighten his case against Myrna.

CHAPTER XX

DISCONSOLATELY Bob Tait sat in his apartment, tearing the wrapper from a photo magazine. It was one to which he had added, some weeks before, a set of pictures snapped with his miniature camera in the Golden Bowl on the night that Ludden Dombey was murdered.

work in the world of newspaper, how effective those photographs might be against Myrna Dombey. In a trance of preoccupation he began studying the picture he had taken just after the fatal shooting of Ludden Dombey. Suddenly he noticed something that he had not seen in the "blowing up," something that in the "blowing up," necessary for the magazine reproduction stood out in startling relief. It was a slender, wisp-like pillar of smoke. Tait held the page nearer to his eyes. He went to his desk and took out an engraver's magnifying glass, studied the reproduction again. That snake-like wreath was not, he discovered, from a cigar or a cigar. In the first place, his character was not that of a spray of smoke from tobacco. In the second, the photograph showed quite clearly that nobody directly beneath that wisp of smoke was engaged in smoking tobacco in any form whatsoever.

Excitedly Tait tore out that page and shoved it in his pocket. An hour later he was at the Golden Bowl in the Pacific-Plaza Hotel. The early crowd of swing fans was just drifting in. Tait had no need to refer to the crumpled photo in his pocket. His mind's eye, through long practice, was his camera's eye. In the photograph, the wisp of smoke had been just in front of a palm which flanked the band's platform. Unerringly Tait found the spot, and found, too, the position from which the picture had been taken. He saw that the smoke had been at a point not more than two tables away from the one at which he had sat with Myrna and Anne and Harris Rogers. But his memory did not tell him the appearance of the occupants of that neighboring table.

HE signaled to one of the Golden Bowl's head waiters and the man hurried forward smiling. "Good evening, Mr. Tait. You're early." "Yes. I'll sit right here if it's not reserved, Fred." "There is no reservation until 9 o'clock, Mr. Tait." Bob nodded. "Do you suppose, Fred, you could find out who occupied that table over there on the night Lud Dombey was killed?" "The waiter looked disturbed. Tait could see that there had been instructions from the management that the murder of Dombey was not to be discussed, and Tait's question had come as a sort of shock.

"Table 24? Perhaps I can, Mr. Tait. Of course, sometimes there are no reservations. The tables are simply occupied early and the party stays through until we close.

Then often the table will be reserved under one name for a number of people. Occasionally," Fred smiled diplomatically, "occasionally the name will be a fictitious one."

"I understand." Tait waited, listening idly to The Swingers. There was no question about it, the band was as good as always. "Torchy" Stephens was all right. Perhaps he did not have quite the glamor of Ludden Dombey—but that would come later, after "Torchy" was surer of himself. At any rate, the jitterbugs who were here tonight seemed to be enjoying themselves quite as much as though Lud Dombey were up there waving the baton or piping into his clarinet.

Tait turned from the band and saw Fred weaving his way toward him. "I'll have to disappoint you, Mr. Tait. There was no reservation on that night for Table 24." "Thanks, Fred. I was afraid there wouldn't be." Tait sighed. "You see—"

TAIT stopped. His face went a little pale and he turned quickly in his chair. Unmistakably he had caught a trace of faint perfume—the perfume of the girl in the entrance to the Claremont. The perfume that drifted on the black night down in Millbay when someone had tried to kill him! His startled eyes picked out a small, slender blond dancing beyond his table. Her hair, however colored and perfectly done, shown from beneath a hat that would have been absurd on any other type of girl. Her eyes were half closed. She seemed unaware even of her partner, was lost in the magic of swing.

"Who is that blond?" Tait asked, trying to keep his voice steady. Fred looked. "Oh, that's Nelda Starr." "Nelda Starr? Any relation to Aaron Starr?" "Yes. They say he's worth millions. That's his daughter. She comes to the Golden Bowl almost every night. She—she used to be crazy about Mr. Dombey and for a while she tried to get a job singing in his band."

"Do you know the fellow with her?" Fred shook his head. "Sometimes she comes alone and just sits listening to the music unless someone she knows asks her to dance."

Tait was silent a moment. "I've got to meet her," he thought. His eyes began searching the big room. At a far table he spotted Archie Mackey, the syndicate gossip columnist. If anyone knew her, Archie would—and he'd introduce Tait.

Mothers who have children enrolled in the project acted as hostesses and escorted visitors through the building, pointing out features of activity. The mothers were Mmes. Greenhouse, Hughes, Everton, Bennett, Davenport, Ballard, Willingham, Rich, Franklin, Hogan, Cheatham, Ingie, Ellis, Barrett, Walker and Barcroft.

There are 50 children enrolled at the present time. A total of 80 children have been served since the project's inauguration, said Mrs. Stephen. This week graduation of several who have become 5, discharge age, will be held. Only children from 2 to 5 are enrolled for three months in the work.

Attendance average for the enrollees, it was said, is 45 per cent. Personnel of the project, part of the emergency education work of the WPA, is Mrs. Stephen; Mrs. Grace Burke, teacher; Julia Lindroy, nurse, and Lorene Hankins, dietitian. All have been employed in the work since its beginning. Elena Segovia is maid.

In keeping with the occasion, the project rooms were marked by Halloween decorations. Merchants patronized the past year donated food and refreshments on the anniversary. Cut flowers and roses were also in the rooms in abundance. A cake with one candle also was noted.

Out of 29 nurseries in the state, the Eastland project is adjudged by officials as having the best equipment. During the training period children usually gain from one to several pounds. In a recent case, however, one girl gained 11 pounds while enrolled in the work.

Fifty new suits and coats for the children were recently delivered. They were prepared in the Eastland WPA sewing room of which Mrs. E. C. Satterwhite is supervisor.

Mrs. Stephen thanked all who have cooperated in the work the past year and expressed appreciation for interest at the anniversary.

"OUT OUR WAY"

Worry Over Health Is Big Drawback For Many People

AUSTIN, Tex.—"One would consider that the average human being has sufficient real worries without borrowing imaginary ones. Yet there appears to be a fair proportion of persons who are not satisfied with the ordinary trials and tribulations that life presents but must reach out for non-existent ones. Among them are the people who 'enjoy' poor health," states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer.

"For no reason at all such persons insist on super-heated indoor air in winter time, they pick and peck at fancy foods and to some extent give the plain, reliable and needed provider the go-by. They overload themselves with clothing in temperate and sometimes in warm weather. And to top it all, they are on friendly terms with all sorts of gills and other concoctions on the misguided theory that doses of this kind that are far superior to fresh air, good food, exercise and healthy living in general.

"Since we only live once, it is a sad commentary on human nature that any person is so foolish as to make a psychological invalid of himself in this fashion. Obviously such unjustified fancies deny them of the real delight of a vigorous, zestful and vital existence to which they are justly entitled," Dr. Cox added.

"Misguided persons of this kind do not realize that the enjoyment of poor health is a woeful substitute for that abundant and zestful vitality which can be attained usually through the application of some common-sense and a bit of discipline.

"Rest and restraint, of course, are indicated in the presence of actual disease, and when advised by the physician in his treatment of illness. Moreover, convalescence emphatically calls for some physical restraint and care. But that is a far cry from the imaginary illnesses of which more persons in varying degrees are victims than is generally suspected."
