Hollywood Sends Regards to Adolf and Benito

It is useless for America to try to let the people of Germany and Italy know how the actions of their governments are regarded on this side of the Atlantic, because those people aren't allowed to get any news that the men on top don't want them to get.

Nor would it make very much difference if that news did get to them, because they don't have anything to say about governmental policies anyway. So all the American government can do is make its protests to the head men in Berlin and Rome and hope that some day a change will be made.

And in this job a good deal of efficient help is being provided by Hollywood—of all places.

Hollywood does it deftly, quietly, and where it hurts. A little more than a year ago Vittorio Mussolini, son of Il Duce, went to Hollywood with some grand plans. He was going to make a thorough study of American film methods, so as to improve Italian film production on his return. He was going to negotiate with an American film magnate to produce films of Italian grand opera. He was going to do divers big things and make a profound impression on the whole movie colony.

But the whole business quickly turned out to be a flop. The movie colony resented the presence of Il Duce's son and was pretty blunt in letting him know about it. After a series of snubs, climaxed by the appearance in a trade paper of a full-page ad attacking him, Vittorio shook the dust of California from his shoes and departed for the homeland, unswayed.

Now another drama of the same sort has been enacted, this time with Leni Riefenstahl in the leading role.

This German actress seems to be a talented and pleasing young woman (but she came here—unfortunately—trade-marked as Hitler's girl friend. So Hollywood warmed up to her no more than it did to Vittorio. Most of the studios refused to let her in. A night club refused to sell reservations to her. The chill was put on in a big way, and her visit turned out to be quite as unhappy an affair as did Mussolini's.

All of this is considerably less than important, except for one thing.

It happens to be about as direct and effective a way as can be imagined to let the two great dictators know just how their policies are regarded in America.

There is an ironic justice in having the message delivered by Hollywood. For those dictators are actors—first, last and all the time. More than any other men alive, they ought to be sensitive to the reactions of the world's capital of drama.

World opinion beats in vain upon the closed gates of Rome and Berlin. If any group can get a message inside the walls it ought to be Hollywood. And Hollywood—be it remembered in its favor!—is in there trying.

Woman Directs a Combination Sales Company

CLEVELAND, O.—Miss Blanche G. Schwartz serves the world as the country's only known combination export manager.

A combination export manager handles exports for a number of companies. Miss Schwartz represents local companies and also one each in New York, Detroit and Louisville.

"To be a success in export work, a person always must remember that other cultures are not necessarily inferior to ours, just because they are different," she said.

"Without a broad tolerance we cannot have happy deals." She said that an undue assurance of American superiority prevents success in her field of work.

Miss Schwartz is the first woman in Cleveland to enter the export business. She opened her own office in 1924. She also teaches a class in foreign trade at Fenn College.

"The effect of the present unsettled international situation on exports? In many ways it is a handicap, but it also is causing a large number of buyers to look from a troubled area to an assured source of supply—which can be found here," Miss Schwartz said.

"Some buyers are offering to pay more for goods to replace Japanese and German merchandise, because of their unpopularity." She said that many Dutch East Indies firms are Chinese and so refuse to buy any Japanese goods.

The new nationalism, now prevailing in various nations, has caused new trade barriers, she added. These barriers include increased tariffs, quotas and currency control.

"Nowadays, before an order is sent out, the restrictions are checked and if they are too strict the order is not sent," Miss Schwartz said.

"The growing use of the airplane, however, is making possible the development of a new technique in export work. Orders are moved a lot faster than formerly, because of the plane.

"I can send an air-mail letter to my agent in Havana and have a cabled reply in 24 hours." A new lightweight paper—20 sheets of which weigh a half-ounce—also facilitates orders between the United States and foreign nations.

"The export field can be profitable to manufacturers the year as beach and garden furniture, around if they remember that south of the equator the seasons are directly the reverse of those north of the line," she said. "The reversal of seasons means that seasonal merchandise, such as swimming suits, sun glasses, ear-muffs and ice skates, can be marketed south of the Equator after they are out-of-season up north. Manufacturers thus can equalize the demand on their factories

Mitchells Make It Hard for Company to Keep Stewardess

By United Press

FORT WORTH, Tex.—The Mitchell "boys," all trained in Texas at San Antonio flying fields, are causing constant turnover of stewardesses for American Airlines.

The three American Airlines pilots named Mitchell—but unrelated—all have married the stewardesses on their passenger transport ships within a year, and each marriage meant that the company was forced to find and train a new stewardess.

C. C. Mitchell, Jr., graduate of Randolph Field and pilot on the Chicago-New York run, married Miss Adelaide McHenry last fall. They live in Chicago.

H. F. Mitchell, pilot on the Fort Worth-Los Angeles run who was trained at Kelly Field, married Miss Marguerite Renshaw in Los Angeles last spring. They live at Glendale, Cal.

During the Thanksgiving holidays, W. W. Mitchell, Randolph Field graduate, married Miss Nell Mitcham in Fort Worth. He is pilot on the Fort Worth-Chicago route.

Sun Bowl Stadium Is Being Enlarged

By United Press

EL PASO, Tex.—Permanent concrete boxes now under construction will increase the seating capacity of Kidd Field, scene of the annual Sun Bowl game, to 13,000.

With Utah University selected to meet the University of New Mexico in the gridiron finale of the annual Southwestern Sun Carnival, plans are underway to handle the crowd which last year overflowed Kidd Field, at the College of Mines.

Eighty boxes, with seats for 900 spectators, are being added. Other improvements provide for easier entrance and exit for fans.

Receipts from the Sun Bowl game finance the Sun Carnival, staged by a non-profit organization of 25 representative men of five El Paso service clubs.

After deduction of expenses incidental to bringing the football teams to meet in the Sun Bowl, the remainder of receipts from the ticket sales is diverted to advertising, float, band and other contest prizes and staging of the coronation of the Sun Queen.

Miss Schwartz said that her profession—instead of being overcrowded—offers many opportunities for alert women. As to future fields to be newly or further developed in the export line, she thinks that parts of the British Empire and the Netherlands' colonies are outstanding possibilities.

TWO more reader questions and two delicious answers. First: "How can I use left-over turkey in a salad for my bridge club?"

Turkey Orange Salad
(Serves 8)

Two and one-half cups turkey cut in dice (preferably white meat), 2 cups celery cut in dice, 2 cups orange slices cut in half, 3-4 cup freshly toasted almonds, mixed salad greens, including watercress, chicory and lettuce, 1 teaspoon minced parsley, 1-2 cup French dressing.

Combine turkey, celery and orange slices. Pour over French dressing and stand for 20 minutes. Add parsley just before serving. Line chilled bowl with chilled salad greens and fill with turkey mixture. Top with toasted almonds.

The second reader question is: "Please give me a novel recipe for using persimmons, but not in a salad." Here is a pudding recipe from French Lick.

SKI'S THE LIMIT BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

Copyright, 1938 NEA Service, Inc.

Yesterday Sally finds Dan a striking attractive fellow, earning his living as a ski instructor...

CHAPTER IV
Sally had predicted, Dan Reynolds came off with most of the honors...

Sally thought she had never seen a more magnificent, or impressive sight than the thousands of enthusiastic spectators...

None of the other of the Big Six, for there were representatives from Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Yale, and Brown...

THIS was after the meet, back in the fraternity house where the dinner-dance was in progress...

"That reminds me," he held Sally a little closer, gave her an unexpected whirl that nearly lifted her silver slippers from the floor...

Just you and yours truly, I've ordered a cutter, going to take you for a sleigh ride...

"It sounds almost too romantic," Sally returned demurely. But she meant it. She was not at all sure that she wanted to take a moonlight sleigh ride alone with Corey...

THE funny part, however, was that Sally had hoped to add Corey Porter to her list of admirers. She had hoped this week-end would accomplish just that...

Why wasn't she thrilled now, knowing that on this sleigh ride, Corey, without doubt, would ask her to be his girl, not just for tonight, but for always?

Now while Sally danced in her silver slippers and wide-skirted nestling over her heart, Dan would be washing dishes in a stuffy hot kitchen. When Corey tucked Sally under the big buffalo robe in the cutter behind a dancing, spirited team...

SALLY wondered, a bit wistfully, if in his dreams, perhaps, Dan might not think—just once—of her. For he had shown signs of thawing out, just a little, during those early morning lessons...

"Why the big sigh?" Corey asked, bending closer. They sat close together in the old-fashioned cutter, under the big robe. The sleigh bells jingled pleasantly in the crisp night air...

"Because it's so beautiful," Sally said. "Because this is the last night. Because everything has to come to an end." Because her heart said, tomorrow will be the last morning I shall get up to meet the dawn. And Dan.

Corey gave the horses their heads, allowing the reins to lie in one hand. He threw his free arm over the back of the seat, around Sally's shoulder...

This was the moment of Sally's biggest conquest. Her moment of triumph. But why didn't her heart beat faster? Why did she wish this moment was not so close at hand?

"You know what I mean, Sally," Corey's voice was exceedingly earnest for him, for Corey always spoke gaily without seriousness. "You're going to be my girl—for always. I'm crazy about you, Sally. You're the first girl I ever really fell for like this."

HE took it for granted that any girl would be thrilled to hear him say that. That no girl could refuse to accept to be his.

He did not notice that Sally drew away a little, was silent too long. He bent even closer, his arm tightening around her shoulders, his lips seeking hers.

But Sally, after a kiss too brief, too fleeting, turned away her head. It had not been too romantic. It had had no romance at all. That triumphant moment. It had proved to Sally that she could not be Corey's girl, no matter how sure he was, how right and fitting it might be.

It had proved something to Sally that made her frightened and glad, sorry and ashamed. For Sally, for the first time in her glamorous, blithe existence, had stopped to look deeply into her own heart, to wonder and question what lay hidden there.

"Oh, Corey, I'm sorry," Sally said. And her voice was earnest, too, not light and gay. "Terribly sorry. Truly I am. But I can't be your girl—ever." Because I am someone else's, her heart said. Someone who does not want me, who does not know that I am, who would not have me for his girl, if he did.

Had the tables turned? Was Sally's heart to be broken? Sally, who had broken so many hearts before this, who had never cared, or taken anything earnestly before, with this mixture of singing gladness and frightened despair.

Automobile Sales In November Up

AUSTIN, Tex.—Sales of new automobiles in Texas during November rose sharply over the preceding month and substantially over the corresponding month last year, according to the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Texas. Reports from seventeen representative Texas counties show an increase in sales of 88.1 per cent over October and 17.9 per cent over November last year. Aggregate sales in these counties during the entire eleven months of the year, however, were still 32.4 per cent below the corresponding period last year.

BY JERRY BRONFIELD NEA Service Sports Writer

OUT of the hedge-podge of routine business and bartering talent at the Minor League meeting in New Orleans, there'll be one item over which, sooner or later, everyone will be very much interested.

Baseball men will want to know what's to become of 19-year-old Freddie Hutchinson, the kid pitcher who won 25 games for the Seattle Rainiers.

The time is ripe for Hutchinson to be sold up to the majors and it's very likely that the coast star will be snapped up this winter. Seattle, an independently-owned club, has no big league entanglements. The Rainier management has set a price of $100,000 on Hutchinson and baseball men consider it likely that one of the major league clubs will barge in to the New Orleans meeting ready to pay the price—or one not too far removed from that figure.

Hutchinson is the greatest box office attraction the Coast League has ever had. Last season—he's first in organized baseball—he was named the loop's most valuable player. No other rookie has been honored that way before.

The biggest worry in the American League at present is that the Yankees will get their hooks on him. As if they didn't have enough already.

It wouldn't at all be a gross exaggeration to call Ace Parker the nation's top-ranking major sports athlete. How many others could you name who put in six months with a big league baseball team and then immediately jump to a starring role with one of the pro football outfits? ... which is what the former Duke flash does with the Athletics and the gridiron Dodgers. JOHN T. FLYNN

BY JOHN T. FLYNN NEA Service Staff Correspondent

IT is now obvious that the administration intends to step out in international affairs and play an aggressive role. The apparent intention of the President to scrap the Neutrality Act should remove any doubt as to that.

Of course we are not told that we are to do a little world policing. We are merely told the President will attempt to "amend" the Neutrality Act. The plan as reported is that the President has approved the amendment to the act which will permit him to embargo shipments to aggressor countries.

Maybe we should do this. Doubtless many good Americans think we should. But at least we ought to be frank with ourselves about it and know precisely what we are doing. Because it is a very serious step. It is a complete reversal of our international policy. And it is loaded with dynamite. Hence we will be very foolish if we attempt to disguise what we are doing under innocent looking words. The last word we should use is "neutrality."

We have a Neutrality Act. The policy of that act is to keep severely out of quarrels between other nations. It is based upon the well-founded fear that if two other nations go to war and we attempt to supply them with munitions, to make a profit out of the war trade, we will get into trouble and possibly war. At least that is the way we got into the last war.

Therefore the act provides that when the war starts the President shall proclaim the fact and thereafter we shall ship to neither. That is neutrality.

There is another doctrine—the exact opposite of this and the exact opposite of neutrality. That doctrine is to be un-neutral. It proposes to take sides. It proposes to permit this country to weigh the guilt in the event of war between two nations and then put ourselves on the side of one of them by refusing to sell to the aggressor—the guilty nation. You may favor that, but certainly you will not have the boldness to call it neutrality.

The President plans to "amend" the Neutrality Act to put that power into his hands. The way to deal honestly with the country is to scrap the Neutrality Act and pass a new act embodying this different and contradictory policy.

If we are to go in for such a policy, would it not be the course of prudence to leave that decision to Congress or the people who will have to fight the war if war begins?

Book On Review

"Mr. Despondency's Daughter" by Anne Parrish, to be found in the Eastland Public Library, open on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday afternoons, from 2 o'clock until 5:30.

The book has been reviewed as follows:

"A new Ann Parrish is revealed in this novel. Famous for her remorseless portrayals of men and women blind to their own devouring righteousness, she has here disclosed—in the story of a woman's regeneration—a new dimension, as it were, of the human spirit.

"The daughter of an adored and adoring father, the wife of a man whose love she had fully returned, a mother whose sacrifices were rewarded with loyalty and devotion—this was Lisa as she saw herself on a certain birthday late in life.

"The day had begun in sweetness; it ended in ashes when Lisa was told that love—like the wistaria vine that kills the tree it clings to—was destroying her grown son, Francis.

"In what way had she failed? "Searching the mirror of her memory, Lisa came upon the bitter truth. Her gradual awakening is one of the most moving things in recent literature, and the tenderness, understanding and subtlety with which it is set down throw fresh light on the creative powers of Anne Parrish."

"I wanted to write about a mother neither with idolatry nor with destruction," the author says of Mr. Despondency's daughter.

"I have tried to write about a mother who is also a human being, who did, at first, clutch and cling, but who then let go; who was shocked into seeing herself, not by tragedy, or divine light, but by a blow to that most vulnerable spot, her vanity. I have tried to show the growth of courage and honesty; that changed her from a destructive clinging vine, admired by most of her world, into a freed and freeing person, with her first true unselfishness, branded by her world as selfishness, and my theme is the difference between possessiveness and love."

New Type Wire Is Made to Feed a Fast Motor Spark

WASHINGTON. — Research work with complex mathematical equations at the National Bureau of Standards has resulted in the development of a new "easy flow" type wire cable for use in ignition equipment.

Using steel wire in place of the traditional copper wire, the Washington Institute of Technology produced a wire cable with minimum resistance and "low capacitance."

The technologists based their experiments with the new wire on a series of mathematical studies completed by Dr. Melville A. Peters, bureau of standards physicist.

In starting an ordinary automobile, scientists calculated, the new wire makes it possible to save 33 per cent on the amount of current used. The cable consists of seven strands of stainless steel.

The new ignition wire gives a hotter, faster spark which lasts longer, thus cutting down on the amount of current necessary to start a gasoline engine. The navy used the new wire for two years in naval aircraft, and found it so satisfactory the wire until recently was kept on the navy's secret list.
