Come To Eastland Daily For Your Entertainment

HERE AND THERE

BY CECIL BARHAM

An Open Letter To— Mr. and Mrs. Eastland . . .

Today marks the end of my first six months in Eastland as manager of your theatres and during that time I have given you many hours of grand entertainment in such pictures as "Robin Hood," "Love Finds Andy Hardy," "Boy's Town," "Test Pilot," "Too Hot To Handle," "Sweet Hearts," "Valley of the Giants," "White Banners," "Four Daughters," "Little Miss Broadway," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "The Texans," "Arkansas Traveler," "Marie Antoinette," "You Can't Take It With You," "Stablemates," "The Young In Heart," "Trade Winds" and many others, and I guess a few that was not up to par, but all in all the good ones were so numerous that we could afford to forget a bad one now and then.

In my capacity as manager of your theatres, I have tried not to make the mistake that so many managers and press agents make and that is to tell you that every picture I play is just a little better than the ones before it, for I realize that if my advertising and my personal word is to be worth anything to me at the boxoffice, I must be truthful with you and although I recommended the majority of the above mentioned pictures as being good entertainment and well worth your time and money to see, and I believe you will agree with me that they were, I only recommended three of these over my personal signature as being such outstanding entertainment that they would be placed among the ten best of the year and the first of these was "Love Finds Andy Hardy" which won 6th place, the second, "Boy's Town" placed 7th and the third "You Can't Take It With You" won 4th place.

Now for the fourth time I personally recommended a picture to you that I think is outstanding and one that you should by all means see, that picture is "The Citadel" for I feel that after seeing it your life will be richer and to further stress how much I think of it, I will gladly refund your price of admission if you do not enjoy it. There is no guess work on my part as to it's being among the ten best as it has already been selected as the 5th best of the 1938 season.

"Heart of the North," the thrilling story of the Canadian Royal Mounted Police film in beautiful technicolor, playing at the Lyric today and Saturday will not be among the ten best of 1939 but it is good entertainment and I am sure that you will enjoy every minute of it. The Robert Taylor-Wallace Beery co-starring picture "Stand Up and Fight" playing at the Lyric Sunday and Monday will in my opinion be placed among the twenty best of 1939.

"Men With Wings," "Tomper Takes A Trip," "Idiots Delight," "Dawn Patrol," "Artists and Models," "Great Waltz," "Kentucky," "Jesse James" and "Son of Frankenstein" are pictures that assure us a good time during the next few weeks so watch this paper for their play dates.

Thanks for reading this letter and let me assure you again that "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment," if you don't believe it ask your neighbor.

Your friend,
CECIL BARHAM.

A PEEP INTO THIS WEEK'S ATTRACTIONS!

Torn from the pages of a great novel "The Citadel" is now brought thrillingly to life on the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. The scene above is from this smashing story made into a film by King Vidor with Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell in the leading roles. "THE CITADEL" has just been selected through a national poll as one of the ten best pictures of the 1938 season, which is one of the highest honors that can be given a picture. The cast includes in addition to Donat and Russell, the celebrated English actors, Ralph Richardson, Rex Harrison and Emlin Williams. "The Citadel" will be shown at the Lyric theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

A Royal Mountie seen in the Technicolor hit "Heart Of The North" at the Lyric today and Saturday.

George O'Brien and Kay Sutton in "The Lawless Valley" at the Connellee theatre today and Saturday.

The Wallace Beery-Robert Taylor free-for-all, anything-goes fist fight staged in "Stand Up and Fight," in which the stars are seen together for the first time on the Lyric screen, will probably go down in film history as one of the wildest and most realistic battles ever to take place before the cameras. Beery is a veteran in film battles, whereas Taylor gained considerable experience as a fighter in "The Crowd Roars." So it was an even match, with no punches pulled. "Stand Up and Fight" comes to the Lyric Sunday and Monday.

"The Citadel" Selected As The Fifth Best of 1938

"The Citadel," A. J. Cronin's dramatically powerful story of a young doctor who barbers his ideals for worldly riches, has been selected, by a national poll, as the fifth best picture of 1938 and one of the first West Texas showings of this fine picture will be at the Lyric Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday.

With superb portrayals upon the part of Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell in the principal roles and the understanding and incisive direction of King Vidor, the new picture becomes at once a tribute to its author, to the medical craft and to the art of motion pictures.

A dramatic love story is unfolded in the account of the young surgeon who struggles among the miners and marries a humble schoolmistress. There is agonizing suspense when he descends into a mine that has collapsed to amputate the arm of a man trapped beneath a fallen timber. There is drama when he deliberately dynamites a sewer that has been spreading disease but which authorities refuse to remove.

Cronin's moving story has become even more dramatic on the screen, without an alteration, but because of the added power of visible action. Donat is outstanding as the disillusioned young doctor and Miss Russell has the best role of her career as his sympathetic wife. Ralph Richardson and Rex Harrison, two of Britain's most capable actors, appear as fellow doctors with Donat and their performances are excellent. Much credit goes also to Emlin Williams as an official of the Miners' Medical Aid Society; Mary Clare as the sympathetic cafe proprietress and Penelope Dudley-Ward as the society girl. There are more than one hundred speaking parts in the cast.

"The Citadel" is one of the most popular novels in years, has topped the list here and abroad since its publication about a year ago. The M-G-M adaptation of it honor.

Guaranteed!

Your money back if you don't say "The Citadel" is one of the finest motion pictures ever made.

"STAND UP AND FIGHT" RATED THE GREATEST ADVENTURE DRAMA SINCE MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY!

Combining the punch of "The Crowd Roars" with the vigorous drama of "The Bad Man of Brimstone," the new outdoor drama, "Stand Up and Fight," co-starring Wallace Beery and Robert Taylor for the first time, comes to the screen as one of the fastest action stories ever to be filmed. It opens Sunday at the Lyric theatre.

Unique in that it combines authentic historical background of a period and locale hitherto untouched in motion pictures with the sort of rapid-fire pace that made the Westerns of silent days so perennially popular, "Stand Up and Fight" seems likely to be the forerunner of a cycle of stories of the kind, so sure is its hold on audiences who demand motion above all in their motion pictures.

Taylor's role of the bankrupt young Maryland aristocrat shanghaied into going to work for the stage coach line is a happy choice for it gives him an opportunity to combine romance appeal with the he-man type of characterization which won him laurels in "A Yank at Oxford" and "The Crowd Roars." Beery's role of the hard-boiled, often unscrupulous manager of the Bullet Line is another natural, a typical Beery part played to the hilt and comparable with any of his finest work.

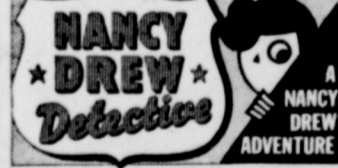

For Florence Rice the feminine lead is a sure augury of great success to come for she handles this, her finest major assignment, with a sure touch and appealing charm.

Never has she been photographed to greater advantage than in the hoopskirts and bonnets of the 1850's. Comedienne Helen Broderick is at her sardonic best, Charles Bickford and Barton MacLane are as villainous as could be wished of a "heavy," Clinton Rosemond embodies all the pathos of the Negro slave, and Charley Grapewin, John Qualen, Robert Glecker and others lend memorable support.

Besides keeping a fast-moving story always straight as a bullet in its objective, Director W. S. Van Dyke II has combined a warmth of atmosphere with the roughness of his backgrounds to a remarkable degree.

Rearmament Means Quality More Than Quantity

The one thing to avoid in the pending rearmament program is hysteria.

It is quite possible, the world being what it is and not what it ought to be, that it is desirable to build up a larger fighting force.

If that decision is made, then nothing but the best will do. Not necessarily the largest, but the best. Better no army at all than a second-best army.

Size of military establishment is no guarantee of anything. More and more it becomes apparent that modern war is a business of training and equipment.

In Spain, such advantages as the Rebels have gained have been won by tanks, air supremacy, and equipment against the devoted heroism of a Loyalist army which had to be improvised from scratch. In China, the millions of defenders availed little before the mechanical efficiency of the Japanese. In Russia, the armed forces are vast, but doubt as to their efficiency led several countries of Europe to question Russia's value as a prospective ally.

Ten thousand planes? Perhaps. But are they the best planes, the fastest, the newest, manned by pilots who have had the thorough and exacting training which modern air warfare demands? An expanded navy? Perhaps. But is it the best navy, ship for ship, and in maneuver training and gunnery? A bigger army? Perhaps. But has it the tanks, the improved small arms and machine guns, the thorough training and discipline, the modern-minded leadership that modern war demands?

These are questions more important than volume-expansion. What good are 10 slow, antiquated planes manned by novice pilots against one new ship, 50 miles an hour faster, piloted by a veteran who knows every trick?

More armaments if we must, but let them be designed to accomplish what we wish to accomplish, and no more. Let them be, as far as they go, the best in the world. In fields like this, politics have no place, partisanship no voice.

We can not afford to have anything in equipment or training that is less than the best. And that means to face the problem quite calmly, decide intelligent what needs to be done, and then do it, efficiently and well. Haste and hysteria are certain to breed trouble, not security.

Predictions are that the "mosquito navy" of the Philippines will be strong. If it's anything like that bunch at the lake last summer it will be unconquerable.

Fire broke out three doors from a movie house showing the following double bill: "Too Hot to Handle" and "Speed to Burn." What will the publicity boys think of next?

Nation Wide Sale Of Citrus Fruit Is Sponsored By Store

In eleven thousand stores that, 49 weeks out of the year do not handle groceries at all, a quarter of a million clerks will start this week-end on a country-wide sale to market the biggest crop of citrus fruits in history. The drive will continue three weeks, tying in during its last ten days with a sales campaign in food stores, all aimed to let the consuming public get the full, healthful benefit of a fruit crop in which the Rio Grande Valley alone is harvesting more than fifteen million boxes of grapefruit, in addition to the Texas orange and lemon crop.

Mail Clerk Retires To Continue Hobby As Violin Mender

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 15.—An important day in the life of J. E. Stamps, whose name is not familiar to a great many people but is an important one to many famous musicians. That day marked Stamps' retirement from his job as a railway mail clerk, which means that from now on he can devote his time to mending violins. For 35 years he has been working on the instruments, waiting for the day when he could give his full time to them. Because, he says, there is drama in the job, and sometimes excitement, frequently joy, and occasionally heartbreak.

Once, he recalls with laughter, he had the pleasure of serving a talented artist whose talent was mixed with temperament of the kind that makes certain golfers throw their golf clubs away when they dub a shot. The artist came to Stamps with a $50,000 violin which had been smashed to pieces. He got mad, the artist explained ruefully, and in his anger tried to tear up his fiddle. Fortunately, Stamps was able to repair it and the artist is still using it.

Stamps also worked on a $100,000 Stradivarius owned by Francis McMillan. He also handled another famous instrument belonging to the late Nicholas Longworth. But most of the people who believe they have famous violins are mistaken. "Hundreds of persons have come to me with violins which they hoped I would identify as Stradivari," he said. "Also invariably they were disappointed."

He says people should not be worried, however, when they find out that the violins they have are comparatively new. He argues that instruments 200 years old are not necessarily sweeter in tone than newer and cheaper ones. "Fifty years of seasoning is enough to give a violin a perfect tone," he says, "and many radio artists and symphony violinists use violins that I have made for them."

Is He Shielding Ransom Taxes?

Government attorneys sought to prove that Murray Humphreys of Chicago, whose appearance, owes $37,165 in back taxes—part of the sum representing tax on $50,000 they charge he received in kidnaping ransom in 1931. Humphreys was once a lieutenant for Al Capone.

Ruling On Wages And Hours Up To Country's Courts

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Most of the questions which have arisen connection with the federal wage hour law must depend for answers upon court decisions, according to J. E. Jackson, Representative for the wage-administration.

"Any opinions, even if from a legal department in Washington are good only until the court rule on them," he said at a formal hearing here. "What I tell you here is merely my own opinion. A lawyer's advice is valuable in the matters, but not necessarily correct."

Explaining why queries have been sent to Washington, in many cases, not been answered, Jackson said that the administration was being swamped with similar requests for opinion. He said that no employee of a firm subject to the law could work more than 44 hours in any week, unless paid time and a half for the overtime, and that the 2-cent minimum wage was merely minimum, and should not be a basis for figuring either regular wages or overtime.

Arthur Gerhke, of Waterloo, Wis., who for 27 years has been bed for the winter, is starting up this year, has bet $25 he'll "up and around" New Year's Day. That's more than a lot of wage-wager on ourselves.

A Train Conductor Retires With Record

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—William B. Spear, a Boston & Maine Railroad conductor who has retired after 54 years of service dating back to the era of wood-burning engines, is proud of the fact that no passenger ever was injured on a train of which he was conductor. However, he was burned severely on the feet and legs last April when his crack train, The Dartmouth, was derailed.

My Dog
I had a little dog.
His name was Block,
I put him in a chair
And he began to rock.

My Cat
I had a little cat
He caught a little rat, Down he sat and Ate the poor little rat.

What I Love
I love ice, I love rice,
I love you better than a cat loves mice.

My Dog
I had a little dog,
His name was Trix,
He ran after a rabbit
And jumped a fence.

A Thought
One ship sails east, and one sails west; by the selfsame winds that blow.

Next Year's Hunting Season
I guess it seems rather odd to start talking about next year's hunting season so close to the end of this year's season, but now is the time for the sportsman to start in earnest and think about where he is going to do his hunting next season. It has been true in too many cases this year during the quail season the hunter just starts with his car, gun and dog and then prays that he will happen up on some good-natured farmer, who will let him kill a few birds. Maybe this land owner has never seen you before, or he does remember that you hunted on his place on the closing day of the season last year, and you have not been back since.

More Activity Is Shown In Report On Farming Area

COLLEGE STATION, Jan. 19.—
A tremendous increase in all phases of extension work was revealed by the 1938 annual reports of county agricultural agents of Extension Service District 7, which is composed of 19 counties from Jones and Palo Pinto on the north to Gillespie and Blanco on the south.

The report for District 7 shows, among other lines of work, that more than 2,000 boys were enrolled in 4-H club work, that county agents ran terrace lines of 73,000 acres on 1,700 farms and contour lines on 129,000 acres on 1,000 farms, and that 1,361 trench silos were filled, according to W. I.
Glass, district agent of the Texas
A. & M. College Extension Service.

An example of the expansion of the work in the district is the doubling of the number of trench silos over 1937 totals. Of the 1,361 silos filled 707 were added in 1938 while the total number in the district at the end of 1937 was 654, Glass said.

Included in the 4-H Club demonstrations were 310 beef calves, 67 dairy heifers, 17 sheep, 435 pigs, 747 acres of cotton, and many projects with poultry, corn hegari, peanuts, and so on.

Five boys won trip to Chicago and the National 4-H Club Congress for excellence in their work when Neil Eaves, Eastland county;
Victor Lehmborg and Gordon
Grote, Mason county; Norbet Halfman, Runnels county, and Willie Everett, Taylor county, received state and sectional awards.
Grote also was awarded a $209 scholarship to Texas A. & M.
College for his beef calf record,
the second best in the United States.

The Kokomo 4-H Club of Eastland county was declared the best individual club in Texas.

In addition to doing outstanding work, District 7 club boys found time for recreation and gatherings as 250 of them attended the district 4-H encampment at Brownwood in June, 600 came in for county encampments, and others were visitors to the State Fair, Fort Worth Fat Stock Show, and the Wildlife Encampment at Rockport.

The agents cooperated with farmers and ranchmen in carrying out the provisions of the AAA programs. "For instance, they had a lot to do with locating and drawing up plans for the more than 2,000 tanks built under the range conservation program," Glass pointed out.

The counties in district 7, with their county agricultural agents, are Blanco, R. B. Jenkins; Brown,

Livestock Needs
Of State Stressed
By Packing Firm

FORT WORTH, Texas.—To assure Texas' future prosperity, the state must increase its livestock business and offer farmers greater opportunities for raising livestock feed, in the opinion of A. A.
Lund, general manager of Armour & Co., here.

Planting additional acres in livestock feed "so we can finish our own cattle and hogs," Lund said,
"would mean additional agricultural and livestock income and employment for the increased packing activity."

"It would keep many millions of dollars in Texas that now go to northern feeders and packers," he said. "As it is, about 70 per cent of the pork eaten in Texas is imported."

Lund explained that, while other industries have had great development in this state, Texas could still be called the cradle of the livestock industry, which is the main business of the state.

SERIAL STORY

NO TIME TO MARRY BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

Yesterday Janet is shocked to learn that her stock must pass up the dividend. How will she ever tell Lance? When she does, he'll counter by saying that there is something he hasn't told her yet.

CHAPTER XI
"I DIDN'T tell you before," Lance went on, "because I didn't see any reason for burdening you with business details. Of course you can't be expected to understand such matters. But I—well, you see, I bought the three lots on the hillside beyond ours as an investment. Sometime I'm going to sell them with Barstow-designed houses on them. I put all my savings into them, and I'm still paying. If it hadn't been for that, of course, this salary cut wouldn't matter so much."

So that was it! Even though Janet "couldn't" be expected to understand such matters, she had vaguely wondered why, after several years as Hallowell and Benton's most highly paid designer of private homes, Lance's salary cut had left him so completely without funds for financing their own home. . . . But just how had he expected to pay for all this in the beginning?

She almost asked him, but caught herself up in time to say very quietly, "Then, Lance, if my suggestion seems too impractical perhaps you will tell me what you think we ought to do."

Lance ruffled his blond hair in his boyish way she loved, and leaned his elbows on the table. His face slowly flushed.

"Well, I—this has all caught me so suddenly. . . . I'll have to have time to see what I can manage. . . . It's damnable, Janet, that it had to happen now—after the invitations are all out and everything."

Janet said steadily, hardly believing that it was her own voice speaking the words, "I suppose the invitations could be recalled—and everything."

He was silent so long, his eyes still bent on the fork, now motionless in his hand, that she thought she had hurt him beyond speech. Then he said incredibly, still without lifting his eyes, "You mean you'd—be willing to postpone the wedding for awhile?"

THERE was such inescapable relief in his tone that Janet had to clench her hands in her lap to steady her own voice before she answered. "Of course, Lance—if that's what you want."

"What I want? Janet, you know that isn't fair. If I let myself do what I want, we'd be married at once—tonight. What I'm asking myself is whether I have a right to let you in for marriage with things as they are. It's—surely you see what a risk we'd be taking. And the responsibility would be all mine."

"Oh, yes," Janet said gently. "I'm beginning to see."

"But, darling, you don't see. I can tell that from your face. . . . Really, Janet, don't you think you're being rather unreasonable about this?"

"I have told you that I will have Aunt Mary recall the invitations," Janet said. She even managed to smile. "What else do you want me to do—throw up my hat about it?"

"Oh, let's get out of here," Lance cried, getting abruptly to his feet.

As they went out into the crisp September air, Janet could not believe that it had all actually happened. She wished Lance wouldn't go home with her. . . . But that was being unreasonable. After all, they hadn't actually quarreled. They had only postponed their wedding as, no doubt, two sensible people ought to do under the circumstances. . . . But argue with herself as she might, her sense of hurt and humiliation persisted.

On the way home they talked about everything but their own affairs—about the European situation, about Sylvia Grant's luncheon, and finally about Cynthia and Timothy Benton.

"A swell time for him to be rushing off on a honeymoon—with things the way they are at the office," Lance said. "Are at the office," Lance said. "At his age, too."

"Well, I—this has all caught me so suddenly. . . . I'll have to have time to see what I can manage. . . . It's damnable, Janet, that it had to happen now—after the invitations are all out and everything."

Janet said steadily, hardly believing that it was her own voice speaking the words, "I suppose the invitations could be recalled—and everything."

He was silent so long, his eyes still bent on the fork, now motionless in his hand, that she thought she had hurt him beyond speech. Then he said incredibly, still without lifting his eyes, "You mean you'd—be willing to postpone the wedding for awhile?"

THERE was such inescapable relief in his tone that Janet had to clench her hands in her lap to steady her own voice before she answered. "Of course, Lance—if that's what you want."

"What I want? Janet, you know that isn't fair. If I let myself do what I want, we'd be married at once—tonight. What I'm asking words Lance had tried too late to catch back over the dinner table this evening: "But I always thought your money was in—"

And only the day before Lance had professed surprise at learning that she had any money at all. Stubbly she refused to allow her mind to wander the various threads into the pattern they seemed to want to form. Yet the odious memories would keep recurring in a vicious circle.

Recalling wedding invitations is not a cheerful business—nor returning wedding gifts. Janet went about it next morning with stony composure.

"But surely, Miss Janet, you ain't going to return all them lovely presents," Margy protested, aghast. "Anyhow, the wedding's only postponed, ain't it?"

"Rather indefinitely, Margy," Janet said.

Fortunately only a small fraction of the numbers of gifts she knew she would have received had yet appeared. One or two of them Janet hardly dared to look at—the Ming vase, and the two Meryon etchings which she had already envisioned hanging on either side of the stairway, a set of hand-made tools for the fireplace.

And of course she mustn't forget to notify the friends who were still to entertain for her. She dreaded that most of all. So difficult to achieve just the shading of disappointment and happy confidence in the future that was the correct note for the circumstances. . . . Or was there a correct note? . . . Leslie Pugh would be the hardest to fool. Leslie was giving a dinner dance for her and Lance at the end of the week.

LANCE had suggested, and it had been decided—with some misgivings on Janet's part—to explain to those intimate friends who were entitled to some explanation that because of the uncertainty of business conditions, it seemed better to wait until the house was nearer completion. . . . Because of course we can't go on living in a hotel forever, you know, Leslie, Janet finished.

Leslie wasn't exactly an intimate friend; but she had gone to the trouble of planning the dinner. "Well, I'm glad it isn't because of the fair-haired boy was stuck in the stock market," Leslie said with her usual blunt impertinence. "There seems to be an unpleasant epidemic of that sort of thing. But anyhow, why give up the dinner? By the time your house is finished I may be in the poorhouse, myself; and I hear they don't throw very lively parties there. I'll tell you—we'll call it a postponement party. I'll let it won't be the last one."

"I don't know what to say,"

CHAPTER XII
NEVERTHELESS, because the old lady's cheeks were pink with excitement, Janet asked, "Why, what is it, Aunt Mary?"

"I'm not going to leave the Breckenridge, after all."

"What?"

"I've been waited on by a special deputation, consisting of Mr. Sartorius, the owner of the building, and the house manager, and begged to remain. I gather, Aunt Mary interposed dryly, "that the financial state of the nation has started what threatens to be a general exodus from the Breckenridge to cheaper dwellings. It seems that our residence has actual advertising value to the management. (And of course, she quoted from an imaginary sales talk, "we have among our guests Mrs. Mary Cantrell, the widow of Senator Cantrell, and the socially prominent Miss Janet Dwight.")

"I don't believe it," Janet exclaimed. "But go on."

"And so," Aunt Mary continued, her black eyes dancing wickedly "after a suitable period of coyness, I graciously allowed myself to be persuaded. Since Cynthia will not be here, I am to have a smaller apartment, with all my cleaning free of charge, at a rent somewhat less than I should have paid at the Avalon. It will be somewhat restricted, but there will be ample space for my best things."

"Well," Janet said. "So there is a Santa Claus, after all."

"You should have seen fat little Mr. Sartorius in the role. He fairly perspired with anxiety until I consented to stay. . . . Well, if we're going to get all those notes off tomorrow we'd better be getting to bed."

JANET found sleep long in coming that night. She kept remembering things she was angry with herself for remembering—creeping, insinuating, hateful things: Lance's white, set face as he read the story of Cynthia's marriage to Timothy Benton. . . . His angry, "She doesn't really care for that roughneck. . . . Snatches of conversation from Sylvia Grant's luncheon party, "You don't mean you'd never heard that Cynthia and Lance were as thick as thieves before you came home and grabbed him?" Cynthia's eyes as she cried, "Why, you little fool, you don't imagine it was Barney I wanted, do you?" . . . But more hateful than all, those unguarded boys have a hard time maintaining driving the link between the past and the present. William J. Blondino, deciding on an auto instead of his horse for a trip to town, was arrested and jailed for drunken and reckless driving and was taken to the hospital.

Can you remember away back when they used to put a spoonful of whipped cream on top of a cup of hot chocolate instead of using a marshmallow?

I'm in favor of adding a course in shoe-fitting to our college curricula. You would think fitting a pair of shoes would be a fairly simple matter: there are the shoes, all sizes and shapes, and there is your foot in all its soaked glory, looming up like the Matterhorn or El Capitan. But of the last three pairs of shoes this commentator has purchased, two pairs fitted dreadfully.

Saw Julien C. Hyer of Fort Worth the other day. The past president of Lions International was more eloquent even than usual, his theme being the second annual Texas Lions' Good Will Pilgrimage to Mexico, March 23 to April 2.

"That's the 'time of flowers' in Mexico," said Hyer, chairman of the trip. "We're going to visit the orchid country, thousands growing like bluebonnets in Texas; we'll arrive in the City of Mexico on a Sunday morning (and Sunday is the 'great' day there) with cathedral bells pealing from dozens of towers. There'll be a voyage in the famous Floating Gardens in flower-decked boats with native boatmen and musicians."

Other highlights: Taxco with its artists' colony; tea in the summer palace of the ill-fated Empress Carlotta; lunch at the Pyramids; Puebla, "cit' of the angels"; Cholula, with its 365 churches; Hotel Garcia Crespo, most beautiful spa in America; the monastery that was concealed for 65 years; Monterey and San Luis Potosi. Non-Lions are welcome to go on the Lions' special train. And if wanting to go was sufficient, I know one strong prospect.

way Commission a politician who no longer ago than last August was repudiated by the people to the tune of a majority of 130,000 for his opponent.

That really was a wonderful crowd at the Plains Democrats Jackson Day dinner—as many as at the other two dinners combined, according to the figures in the press and Jerry A. Sadler, new member of the State Railroad Commission, delivered an able, straight from the shoulder speech that would have pleased plain-speaking "Old Hickory" himself. Chairman Lon A. Smith of the Railroad Commission referred to Sadler as "this young political athlete," a phrase that summed up the general impression made on the minds of the 1,500 Democrats present.

Thought for the day: "I'm glad the sky is painted blue; And the earth is painted green; And such a lot o' fine, fresh air! All sandwiched in between."

A Fort Worth lumber dealer's sign explains: "My friend runs a large sawmill. 'Odd name: The Toadstool Inn, on Dallas-Fort Worth highway. Unusual claim by Liberty Hotel, Cleburne: "Best water in seven states." Then there was the letterhead of the pre-boom, fram hotel in Olney: "All modern inconveniences; hot and cold water, hot in summer, cold in winter; rates after I look 'em over."

Human Side Of Job Held Interest Of Immigration Man

FORT WORTH, Tex.—It wasn't the spectacular part of his job which interested 69-year-old W. H. Robb, who will retire Feb. 1 after 25 years as a U. S. immigration inspector.

The human side of life, with all its happiness and sadness which he has witnessed from his station, was what fascinated Robb, who joined the service when it was first organized in 1903.

The fact that many of the immigrants he helped into this country have become grandparents,

"Take that Chinese girl in San Francisco who tried to commit suicide because she was going to be deported," he recalled. Robb said friends entered the case, kept the girl from being deported, and "today she is the wife of a San Francisco druggist and a very happy mother."

There were about 25 members present.

Book On Review

Following is a review on "The Rediscovery of Man," by Henry C. Link, author of "The Return to Religion," and director of the Psychological Service Center in New York.

"The most interesting thing about the psychology of recent years is its rediscovery of man and the powers of which he is capable when his mind has been freed from the prevailing fallacies about himself," says Dr. Link.

"Physics and chemistry picture the world as a machine in which man is but a cog. Astronomy reveals an infinite universe in which man is only a dot. Economics, geology, and political science define man as the helpless victim of his social environment. "This definition of man," Dr. Link continues, "is not only horribly degrading but fundamentally untrue. It is this concept which is destroying democracy and rushing mankind into fascism, communism and chaos."

"The noted psychologist proclaims the spiritual values of man and challenges him to discard his false isms and become again the captain of his soul. An "inferiority complex" is not a disease. Personality is not a gift but an achievement. Scientific psychology shows that man can be free and self-determined person, and charts the course to follow. Dr. Link demonstrates how men and women can transform their talents, develop their full powers, and mold their personalities. He presents a wealth of actual case studies which the reader can apply to toward the solution of his own pressing problems.

"The Return to Religion" continues to be the most widely read and discussed book of spiritual interest in a decade. Dr. Link's new book, "The Rediscovery of Man," goes a long step further in prescribing not only for the development of personality, but for the kind of society which will tolerate personalities.

This book and several other new ones have been added to the list of rental books at the Eastland Public Library, open Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday afternoons from 2 o'clock to 5:30.
