America's Pacifism Undergoes a Change

The solidest truth in American politics is that Americans are collectively a nation of pacifists. But a change has been coming over the face of the waters, of late.

One of the most significant developments of the year is the latest "sampling" of public opinion made by Fortune Magazine.

This survey indicates that the American public today believes in what is known as "collective security"—joint action by the democracies to restrain such aggressive statesmen as Hitler and Mussolini.

It shows that Americans would be willing to fight to prevent conquest of Canada, Mexico or the Philippines, but that they are not willing to take up arms in the defense of South America.

It shows that they disapprove of the Munich settlement but feel that it was justified as the sole means of preserving peace; but it shows that they also believe that a general European war will come before long anyhow, and that when it does come the United States will be drawn into it.

Assuming that the Fortune survey is accurate—and it has an excellent record for accuracy to date—American thinking has changed in a way that is little short of astounding.

The nation is still isolationist—but isolationist with a difference.

For one thing, it apparently realizes that its own fate is tied in with the fate of the rest of the world. The dismemberment of Czechoslovakia and the trend of world events since then seem to have set Americans thinking.

But the changed attitude is not simply one of pessimism. Pessimism in itself can be as blind and unthinkable as optimism. According to this survey, the American people are not at all resigned to the drift toward war.

Contrast this with the attitude of the post-war era, with the frantic screaming that went up when American adherence to the World Court was proposed, with the oratory of our self-appointed watchdogs who take the stump whenever a President or a secretary of state glances beyond our own borders.

No more important job faces the leaders of American politics and American thought than to check up on this shift, certify it or prove it wrong, and prepare to act accordingly.

Coffee has been added to the list of foodstuffs to be rationed to the public by the German government. If they try that with a certain other beverage, comes the revolution!

BUSINESS PULSE BEATS FASTER

New Year and Better Times Slated to March Arm-in-Arm, Say Leaders in Key American Industries

NEW YORK.—After 12 uncertain months for many an individual and for many a business, America can look forward in 1939 to greater employment, higher national income, increased industrial production and more purchasing power in farm communities, according to the views of leaders in key industries.

Peering optimistically at petroleum refining, electric power, tobacco products, and average hourly earnings of factory workers, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, noted economist and vice-president of Cleveland Trust Company, sees a chance for these to reach new high records.

For aluminum, the lightweight metal which when fabricated into pots, pans and many other conveniences today finds its way into every home, 1939 dawned as a year of encouraging prospects, says George J. Stanley, vice-president of the Aluminum Company of America.

As head of the largest unit among American automobile manufacturers, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., General Motors Corporation chairman, has become that industry's major spokesman.

Active development of producer-consumer campaigns indicates that 1939, other factors being equal, will be a better year for the nation's farmers, says John A. Hartford, president of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company.

John D. Biggers, president of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, the man who shouldered the task of counting the nation's unemployed in 1937 and turned back to the government $3,000,000 of the $5,000,000 allotted for the job, sees a good first quarter for the flat glass industry.

The steel industry enters 1939 with improved prospects, Walter S. Tower, executive secretary of the American Iron & Steel Institute, declares.

Speaking of sulphur, widely used in industry, science and agriculture, Langbourne M. Williams, Jr., president of Freeport Sulphur Company, says the industry confidently looks forward to 1939.

Forecasting 1939 developments in the rubber industry, which serves business and the consumer through more than 22,000 different products, David M. Goodrich, chairman, The B. F. Goodrich Company, a major unit in the industry, estimates a 12 per cent increase in sales of automobile tires.

American Petroleum Industry Is Looking Forward To A Big Year According To Leading Executives

TULSA, Okla.—America's 14-billion-dollar petroleum industry observing carefully the lessons learned during 1938, sees a brighter, more profitable outlook for 1939, contributors to the United Press annual oil review indicated. State officials, oil company executives, engineers, editors and veteran oil observers saw 1939 as a period of more profitable operation generally, but admitted that the industry would have to revise many outmoded systems if it expected to reap full benefits from opportunities offered.

Central theme of comment appeared to test in cooperation between producers, refiners, pipeline operators, marketers and the various State and Federal Government departments dealing with oil. Typical comment from leaders included: Axtell J. Byles, president of the American Petroleum Institute: "The industry looks forward to sharing with other industries the benefits of the expected improvement in the general economic situation."

Robert S. Kerr, president, Kansas Oklahoma division of the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas association: "Greater cooperation will result in a more thriving condition for the industry generally."

Crude oil prices and their relation to refined oil prices came in for a heavy share of attention. Typical comment came from Russell B. Brown, Washington, general counsel for the Independent Petroleum Association of America, who rapped lowering of crude oil prices as a means for improving the refinery market.

"We have repeatedly contended that this was true. When we lower the base by cutting the price of crude, we automatically lower the whole structure above it. This does not solve any problem but creates new ones and makes the old problems more difficult to solve. In the past it has encouraged over-production with a further depressing effect upon the entire price structure."

Any effort to deny them this must fail. Those in Illinois must choose the manner in which they will develop their properties. "While this is essentially and basically a local and State problem, Illinois producers must eventually recognize that the effect of their activities upon the health of an entire industry will in time return to them, bringing the fruits of the course they elect. Illinois may lose a great part of the potential benefits of the oil discoveries in that State should producers adopt careless and reckless methods. On the other hand, if intelligent accompaniment effort, both producers and the State of Illinois may obtain a proper place in the petroleum industry and establish a sound business based upon a foundation which will return advantages to the State for many years to come."

MEET SCHEDULED Ruth Ramey, county home agent, Tuesday morning will meet with the Ranger Co-Workers club at the home of Mrs. J. W. Parrish. That afternoon a meeting of the Romney club will be held at the home of Mrs. Gil Walker. Meetings Thursday will be held at New Hope and Bass Lake.

Drivers Sentenced To Junk Heap When Found Dilapidated

By United Press
CLEVELAND, O.—Reckless and dilapidated drivers here no longer fear a workhouse sentence as punishment, but instead may find their automobiles—if they fall into the dilapidated classification—sent to the junk pile.

Judge Joseph N. Ackerman, originator of the junking policy, has abandoned imprisonment as punishment, and instead has substituted a nominal loss of driving privilege, and junking as standard practice.

"The only persons I send to the workhouse are the habitual drunk and the homeless vagrants who appear before me," Judge Ackerman said.

He said that a workhouse sentence is not a deterrent to traffic violators and that severe fines and hardship on the family rather than the individual.

"There never has been a 're-formation' in my court in the nine months I have been here."

A study of court records covering a three-month period disclosed that in only 13 out of 350 cases were defendants sentenced to the workhouse.

In most of these the drivers were brought back to the court after they had served a few days, which time Judge Ackerman suspended the rest of their sentences.

"I don't believe in workhouse sentences as punishment to traffic violators. I won't and I don't intend to send them there except in extreme cases," he said.

"When a person is injured or property is damaged by a drunk or careless driver," the judge said, "my first consideration is the person who suffered injury or loss of money may be reimbursed."

"I insist on restitution and in doing so, effecting a curb on the driver. I always take away their licenses and that is another deterrent, far more effective than the threat of imprisonment."

"Finally, I worked out the junking policy. It has taken more than 500 dangerous, dilapidated cars off the streets. This policy alone has cut down the threat of accidents because of machines that are unsafe to drive."

Safety officials have commended the junking policy as a forward step in traffic safety.

In practice, the reckless or drunken driver of a dilapidated car is given two choices: He must pay a heavy fine, serve a workhouse sentence; or he may send his car to the junkpile. As the automobiles usually are worth not more than $10 or $15, they generally are junked.

Judge Ackerman said that, beyond his conviction that workhouse terms were not just or suitable punishment for traffic violations, he believed that persons other than the actual violator suffered most from such sentences.

"When I fine some poor driver of an accident car on a traffic charge, I take that money from his wife and family. Most of the defendants have been WPA workers," the judge said.

"If I imprison him, he loses his job and his family again suffers. When I junk his car and revoke his driving rights, I deprive only the individual."

SPORT GLANCES ——— By Grayson

BY JERRY BRONDFELD

BASKETBALL is the great equalizer.

It would take a long stretch of the imagination to envision a national football title for Bradley Tech of Peoria, Ill. . . . and it would be just as far-fetched to think of Long Island University humbling Pitt, Notre Dame, and other greats of the gridiron.

This is the time of the year, however, that the Peoria Braves and the Long Island Blackbirds play the part of giant-killer, by cutting a huge swath through big-league circles.

In the last few seasons these two schools have risen to the top of the basketball heap. A year ago, Bradley, coached by A. J. Robertson who heads the Braves for the 19th year, won 18 and lost one in its regular campaign, defeating Indiana, Nebraska and Utah among others, and losing only to Northwestern by the margin of a single field goal.

The uprising are Dar Hutchins, 6-foot-4-inch center who is headed for national honors, and Ted Panish, a great guard who was named on the little All-American football team last fall as a half-back.

BRADLEY uses a lightning-fast break and a man-for-man defense. Robertson adapts his style to his material and this year he is extremely fortunate. He has a bunch of smooth ball-handlers who can do anything.

Clair Bee, Long Island major-domo, finds himself in the same situation as regards material. His basketball floor is cluttered up with it, and as a result the Blackbirds, who won 23 of 27 last season, are headed for the heights again.

And to reach the peak Bee's boys had nothing more than Southern California, California, Kentucky, Marquette, Duquesne and a dozen other top-notchers to overcome.

Benefit Planned For Uniforms of E. H. S. Band Group

Having assumed responsibility for the purchase of new uniforms, the Band Booster Club is bringing to the high school auditorium in Eastland Tuesday night, Jan. 31, Marquis the Magician, that he may "turn his tricks to treasure" for the uniform fund.

Marquis, according to advance notices, is one of the most famous magicians in the nation.

Lynn M. Parks, business manager for the magician, was in Eastland recently and all arrangements for the show were completed.

Prior to the program Jan. 31 in the school auditorium Marquis will be presented at the Lions Club that noon.

Marquis will also appear at the high school assembly and both ward schools and present a brief "preview" program.

France Guarding Her Colorful Lore

PARIS.—French provincial architecture, costumes and household goods soon will be assembled to give a broad panorama of national life in the National Folklore Museum, situated in the new Trocadero Palace now nearing completion.

The Trocadero already houses a fine Natural History museum, the Folklore museum being designed to supplement the compilation of visual French history by assembling the customs and daily habits of each of the district provinces.

Going from room to room the visitor will be able to see all the varied aspects of French life, from the fisherman's hut of Brittany to Alpine lodges, the Strasbourgh burghers house to the Latin home and costumes of Nice. There will be large vestibule designed to summarize the folklore and popular history of French customs, after which each room will concentrate on each distinct province. A Calendar room will depict the great festivals of the year, the costumes and way in which they are celebrated.

The curator of the museum, Georges Riviera aims to give a full panorama of the people of France through the exhibits, each exhibit being perfect and accurate in every detail; wax models copied directly from life, costumes of the region, household articles and the interiors of rooms will all be taken directly from the original regions. Each year various provinces will put on special provincial exhibits in rooms reserved for this purpose, in which the treasures from provincial museums and products of the region will be shown.

Folklore will be shown as science and art, and will afford a synthesis for study of French folklore. The greatest folklore library in France, containing thousands of documents, photographs, sketches and paintings of every phase of life in every corner of France will

Army Reserve Is Taking Its Place Among Defenses

WASHINGTON.—After a lapse of exactly 18 years the national defense forces of the United States again include a Regular Army Reserve. Not since June 30, 1920, has the War Department carried in its records a Regular Army reservist. The new Regular Army Reserve came into being on July 1, 1938 in accordance with an act of Congress passed on April 25, 1938.

The Regular Army Reserve of today is a revival of the "Minute Men" of the Revolutionary War. These "Minute Men" of today will provide the Regular Army with immediate reinforcements in the event of an emergency just as the Continental Army with trained reinforcements in the Revolutionary War.

Within four years it is expected that the Regular Army Reserve will count 75,000 men—all trained — as its ranks are open only to former soldiers of the Regular Army who are under 36 years of age at time of enlistment in the Reserve and whose services in the Regular Army have been honest and faithful and terminated by honorable discharge after at least one year's continuous service.

This newly formed Regular Army Reserve is expected to prove popular with men who leave the active ranks of the Regular Army to return to civil life but who desire to continue their connection with the Army. Obviously, such a Reserve force of trained men constitutes a notable bulwark for the defense of the Nation.

Unlike the 1920 reservist, who received no pay, the Regular Army reservist of today is paid a monthly enlistment allowance of two dollars a month payable at four-month intervals. In return for this allowance the reservist had only to keep the War Department informed of his address.

The civil pursuits of the reservist are in no way interfered with as he is required to undergo no further training and only in the event of an emergency declared by the President of the United States is he subject to call to active duty. But in the event of such call the reservist stands to gain. The Congressional Act creating the Regular Army Reserve provides that each reservist called to active duty who is found physically qualified and is accepted for such duty will receive, in addition to his two dollar monthly enlistment allowance, an additional lump sum at the rate of three dollars a month for each month he has served in the Regular Army Reserve, the total not to exceed $150.00. If accepted, the reservist immediately enters upon the full pay and allowance status of a soldier of the Regular Army.

Among reservists who reside in the Dallas Recruiting District, who have been enlisted by the local recruiting officer, Major Sidney J. Cutler, are Porter L. Fanning, Route 6, Dallas; Fred H. Denton, Route 3, Valley Mills; Johnny Carr, Route 4, Fort Worth; Johnnie B. Hale, Route 1, Mabank; Eugene B. Harred, Dike, Texas; Burl E. Rankin, Mt. Solman; Cecil S. Martin, Paris; Hubert J. Muncus, Henderson; George L. Colson, Route 1, Irving, and Homer Breedlove, Route 1, Terrell.

Machines to Chart Faults In Speech

By United Press
STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Dr. Herbert Koepf-Baker, head of Pennsylvania State College speech clinic, has invented a machine designed to record accurately "the mechanism of speech."

The device, which Dr. Koepf-Baker calls an "electrical phonokinesigraph," or "sound-movement-writer," is capable of tracing graphically the spasms of stutters and stammerers and the faulty tongue movements of lispers, and is said by the inventor to be "very useful in aiding deaf mutes in acquiring speech."

Dr. Koepf-Baker said the machine can also be used to "explore the articulatory vagaries" of racial groups. For instance, he said, it will show why the Japanese find "L" elusive and over-stresses "S"; how the French produce their characteristic "R," and why the Celts' speech is "fuzzy" rather than clipped, like the Englishman's.

Explaining that other instruments for recording speech movements antedate his invention, Dr. Koepf-Baker said they were all

Peter's Three-Fold Acknowledgment

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance THE words of Peter, "I go a-fishing," after his denial of Jesus and his bitter repentance have usually been interpreted as marking Peter's deep discouragement and sense of failure, both in himself and in the cause, and Leader in whom he had trusted.

Barney McKnight Lounged In

Barney McKnight lounged in once or twice in his casual, loose-jointed way, raiding the ice box for what Aunt Mary called "pieces," and making the old lady giggle like a girl. He turned up the night before they moved into the smaller apartment, and taking off his coat, helped to pack some of the lighter things Aunt Mary was putting into storage.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer

WHAT goes into a pie crust is only half the story. Good pastry is needed to bring the tale to a flaky end.

Pastry tricks are easy. Be gentle and be delicate in handling the dough, use only a little flour on rolling board and put a stockinet covering on rolling pin. This will prevent sticking. Use very little water. If pastry cracks in rolling, use fingers to pinch together again. Make slits in top crust so the steam can escape.

Do you understand how shortening reacts with the other ingredients? To be an expert, you must. Here's the story.

In making pastry, the fat is cut into the flour and the flour particles are covered by films of fat. Not all the fat is taken up nor all the flour particles covered by fat. These uncovered flour particles absorb the water which is added after the fat is cut in. The gluten thus formed holds the mixture together.

During mixing, some air is incorporated. When the pastry is rolled out, the fat which has not been taken up by the flour particles is flattened out.

Why Dough Raises

In baking, the fat melts and is taken up in part by the gluten and other constituents of the flour. The air expands and this, together with the steam generated, raises the dough.

Thus it is that pastry which is both tender and flaky is made. Tenderness results when most of the particles of flour are separated

Monday's Menu

BREAKFAST: Tangerine juice, crisp bacon, toasted cornmeal muffins, currant jelly, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Black bean soup, frankfurter riags, hard rolls, fruit cup, nut cookies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Tomato juice, liver and bacon, creamed potatoes, lima beans, applesauce pie, whipped cream, coffee, milk.

by fat and flakiness is due to the layers of unabsorbed fat. This is possible only with a fat which is a mixture of liquid and solid fats in the proper proportions.

Good manipulation is necessary with even the best shortening agent, or a poor pastry will result. Too much handling tends to develop excessive amount of gluten and the pastry will be tough. Flakiness may or may not be affected by decrease in tenderness.

Trapped Air Toughens Dough

If the fat is worked so thoroughly into flour that there are no unabsorbed particles of fat, there will be a decrease in flakiness. With the development of much gluten in pastry, the enclosed air has no way of escape and it will expand in baking and raise the gluten which hardens and encloses the air, making the pastry flaky but not tender.

Too much water in pastry makes a dough which is difficult to roll and a poor pastry may result unless the cook possesses considerable technique.

Jitterbugs Are Classed with Jungle Natives On Congo

By United Press

DALLAS, Texas—Jitterbugs, in the opinion of an admitted pessimist, are not much different from the jungle natives of the Belgian Congo.

The pessimist is Homer Rodehaver, for 24 years the song leader of Billy Sunday's evangelistic services and more recently a music publisher in Chicago. He returned recently from a 1,600 mile trip into the Congo jungles with the Rev. Arthur J. Smith of San Antonio, a Methodist bishop, and is frankly discouraged.

"Dances of the jitterbugs," he said, "are surprisingly close to the antics of the savages of the Congo as they whirl and chant around a funeral casket."

"The trend of music and dancing in the United States is alarming. A few years ago, when 'cheek to cheek' dancing was introduced, we thought that was getting pretty bad. But now look at the jitterbugs! Whether the situation is going to get worse is hard to say, but I don't see how it can."

Rodehaver also went right about the origin of Negro spirituals.

"Most of us are mistaken about Negro spirituals having come from Africa," he said. "I have yet to find, in my trips around the world, any heathen people who have melody. They have only rhythm."

Juvenile Crime Is Problem Of Nation

By United Press

DALLAS, Texas—Major W. H. Drane Lester, inspector of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told Junior Chamber of Commerce members here that juvenile crime is one of the gravest problems facing the United States and must have the individual and combined attention of citizens before it can be solved.

"Although bureau of investigation, being a law enforcement agency, is not directly concerned with juvenile delinquency, it is extremely interested in it," the stocky, G-man said.

"There is a solution to juvenile crime. First, child training must begin early in the home. Second, proper education, instilling respect for the law into the youth's mind, must be available.

"And third, the criminal must be 'debunked.' His halo of glory must be removed from his head."

Lester, who admits he looks like a sissy but insists that he can prove he is not, declared that the individuals who form the American public are responsible for crime.

He declared that there can be no hope for an adequate reduction in crime until the criminal "has been exposed as a dirty, sneiveling coward."

"The newspapers, the radio and the movies combine to glorify the criminal with their gan and crime stories," he said.

THE PROOF OF THE PUDDING IS IN THE EATING!

The connoisseurs of good foods are right, and the same line of reasoning may apply to homes as well as foods. No one knows better the inner joys of the family fireside than those who experience them. Moving from place to place, from one rented house to another, affords one but little opportunity to get ahead, to really live, and to enjoy many of the pleasures and comforts that are so abundant in the quiet, settled homes of millions who enjoy their pudding while they eat it.

So own your own home! Here in Eastland is an excellent place to live. Every enjoyment and convenience, we have, including many simple but attractive and well-kept homes, good schools and churches, paved streets and roads, and above all a friendly sympathetic attitude toward those who are so unfortunate as to live elsewhere.
