Legislature Has Nearing Halfway Mark of Session

AUSTIN, Mar. 4.—The Texas Legislature swung toward its half-way mark tonight, with attention focused upon the action of committees in the houses of representatives and upon the office of Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel.

The house committees are those considering old age pensions and their financing and the truck load limit. Definite action to bring bills on those subjects before the house will be taken Monday.

The withdrawal of J. C. Hunter of Abilene from the nomination as highway commissioner left O'Daniel with the job of making a third choice for that position and a second choice for life insurance commissioner.

It appeared that Gov. O'Daniel's pension recommendations would be followed. He asked that all eligible aged be assured of an income of at least $30 a month, based on need.

The truck load increase bills were halted temporarily in both house and senate but the house highways and motor traffic committee hoped to report a bill on that subject on Monday.

STIFF FIGHTS BEING WAGED FOR AGRI SITE

A stiff fight to secure an agricultural experiment station to be located "somewhere in the cross timber area" comprising parts of McCulloch, Mason, Llano, San Saba, Mills, Eastland, Brown, Calahan, Comanche, Erath, Parker, Palo Pinto and Montague counties was reported by Eastland county representatives at a recent senate committee hearing on the subject at Austin.

Five Rising Star men, including Farnk Robertson of the Rising Star chamber of commerce, attended the hearing before a subcommittee of the senate finance committee which is studying a proposed $50,000 appropriation for the station. The sandy land experiment station would be located by A. & M. college.

Robertson pointed out at the hearing that the Eastland county cotton crop last year was only 324 bales although the gin at Rising Star alone used to gin 6,000 bales annually. Half of the 1,700 farm families which once raised cotton are now on relief, he said.

It's Going to Be Nice When We Get Those Birds In

Lessons From New York Fascist Rally

Several things can be learned from the recent Fascist rally in New York's Madison Square Garden. They are things which the United States needs to learn, and to learn quickly.

1. The mask is off. The German-American Bund definitely seeks to do to America what Hitler's Nazi movement has done to Germany. Of all the sneaky, sleazy little Fascist movements in the country today, the Bund, flaunting its hyphenism, is easily first. Very well, now we know.

2. New York set a precedent in handling these things. For years, much-hated Communist and other radical movements have been given, generally speaking, their right to freedom of speech in the American tradition. Now the Nazis get it, too.

Mayor La Guardia, whose contempt for the amateur Hitlers is exceeded by nobody's, nevertheless guaranteed them their right to meet and speak. That was the American way.

But LaGuardia made this perfectly clear: the police department of the city would keep order, and nobody else. Self-appointed "storm troopers" would be given no right to do any policing. And the mayor turned out enough police to make certain that the preservation of public order was solely in the hands of public authority.

That is another lesson nowhere, at no time, under no circumstances, must the American republic allow the function of keeping public order to be usurped by private organizations.

That is what happened in Germany four short years ago. Communists and Nazis were allowed to go brawling up and down the public streets, with every brawl adding to the hatred each felt for the other, and causing supporters of the republic to split off and join one or the other until it was a fight between the two factions. Republican police were overawed and submerged between the "storm troops" of the Nazis and the "workers' militia" of the Communists.

This must not happen here. One republic, one public force charged with keeping public order. To this line we must grimly hew.

3. Those who oppose Fascism do better to stay away from its meetings. What made the New York rally a worldwide story? Not the meeting itself, but the efforts of private citizens to break it up.

However odious such meetings may be, it is playing into their organizers' hands to break them up violently. It is of such brawling that Fascist movements are spawned.

America is not yet governed in the streets, but in the Capitol. It is there that Nazism must be fought, not in public Donnybrooks.

Secret Sessions Of Senate Brings Out Varied Views

By United Press

AUSTIN, Texas.—Open sessions of the Texas Senate when the members vote on confirmation or rejection of a Governor's appointee may result from the disagreements between the present Senate and Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel about filling offices.

Senators generally do not favor holding an open session when nominees are being discussed. Two are on record for a public session when the vote is taken. Under present rules, any one Senator can keep all the proceedings secret, including the vote. The regulation says the injunction of secrecy can be removed only by unanimous vote.

A Senator violating the rule is liable to expulsion; an officer, to dismissal. Proceedings of the executive session are kept in a separate book. The final result of the session is placed on the public journal and reported to the Governor by the Senate secretary.

Many arguments have been heard over the secret sessions and leaks that have come from them. For the opening hearings, the argument is made that any person who seeks to hold public office ought to be willing that the public know all about him. Against it, the argument is made that unsustained charges might gain wide circulation or, that for fear of injuring appointees, Senators might be reluctant to question their fitness.

Giving the appointee a right to reply to any charge would seem to answer the first objection. Whether a Senator should make a charge secretly that he would not make openly is debatable. Whatever else it accomplished, an open hearing would prevent trading to put over a confirmation or to prevent it. Two-thirds vote is required for confirmation. There is also an unwritten rule that an appointee will be confirmed if the appointment is objectionable to the Senator in whose district the appointee lives. So there is little chance of confirmation of an appointee with any serious blemish, public or private.

Rejection is not a stigma in itself. It occurs frequently because of geographic reasons, because the nominee is considered temperamentally ill-adapted to the place. It may be because of youth or age or profession. Age, residence and professional status are items considered, particularly in considering appointments to boards or commissions. It is generally an objection which all the members would be youthful, all elderly, all from one part of the State or all from the same profession.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

By Bruce Catton
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Having been given a green light and a pat on the back by Congress, Martin Dies is all set to make his famous investigation bigger and better than ever before.

His committee is more experienced, it will have more time—and it will have $100,000 to spend. "We've got the outline," says Congressman Dies, "now we'll fill it in with hard facts." And he plans to begin with a quiet, systematic survey of the whole field before holding any public hearings.

Leaning back in his chair and chewing hard on a cigar, the stocky Texan recalls that two years ago he was roundly booed when he moved for a congressional investigation of the sit-down strikes. He mustered only 118 votes and lost.

A few days ago only 35 congressmen voted against extending the life of his committee. Mr. Dies looks on the change as indicative of one of the greatest shifts of sentiment in American political history.

"People are sick and tired of European ideologies," he says. "They don't want Communism, or Nazism, or war, or any kind of notions from abroad. They want the traditional, fundamental Americanism—and any public men who don't recognize this trend are going to be on the outside looking in after 1940."

Out of this trend, he believes, will come a balanced program that will lead the country to its greatest period of prosperity.

"The present administration has done some wonderful things," he says. "But there is such a thing as an overdose. It's like medicine; you've got to let nature do ninetenths of the healing. The field in which government can operate is limited, if government goes outside of that field it becomes an oppressor of the people."

"I believe in sane, practical progressivism. We have to stay between the reactionary on one side and the radical on the other."

Congressman Dies readily admits that the actual number of Communist party members in this country is small; but he declares that at least ten million people belong to organizations which are to a greater or lesser extent dominated and directed by the Communists.

"Those people don't want a big party membership," he explains. "The Communist looks instead for people who have no program, who are wandering in a daze. He has a program, and he sells it to the dissatisfied bourgeois—he uses them and then tosses them overboard."

Complaints that his committee has spent too much time investigating Communism and too little investigating Nazism leave Mr. Dies cold. He sees these issues as simply two facets of the same thing.

One, he says, is national socialism; the other, international socialism. Both, he feels, stem from the notion that government ought to cure all evils, that the individual can't solve any problems for himself; and this, he adds, is a notion commonly shared by many modern liberals.

"I don't call those liberals liberals at all," he remarks. "The past year has been a tough one on Mr. Dies. He lost 25 pounds in weight, and has got so that he doesn't sleep well. His daily routine for months has been home-office, office-home; only twice in six months has he even gone to a movie, he says.

He has a wife and three sons, and in the old days he was a good bit of a family man; now, he says, his family hardly sees anything of him.

But he feels that the worst of it is over. He won the formal approval of Congress by an overwhelming vote.

His committee now will have enough money so that he can spare himself some of the spade-work. From now on, he says, it will be going places.

PERMIT FILED FOR RANGER'S WATER SUPPLY

County Clerk R. V. Galloway announced Saturday that a permit to the City of Ranger to impound unappropriated waters of Russell Creek, a tributary of the Brazos, in Eastland County, has been filed for record in his office following presentation by the State Board of Water Engineers.

The City of Ranger, according to the permit, is to impound waters from the creek not to exceed 525 acre-feet per annum, "or so much thereof as may be necessary, when beneficially used for the purpose of domestic water supply."

Filing of the permit was after proceedings at Austin when a Travis County district court ruled it was without jurisdiction to restrain the board from granting Ranger permission to impound water from Russell Creek. Strawn had opposed granting the permission to the City of Ranger on grounds that part of the watershed area was in the watershed of a water supply for Strawn.

The permit granted Ranger by the State Board of Water Engineers explained the permission was given "Provided, that the said City of Ranger, the beneficiary, under this permit is authorized to construct a dam in and across the bed of Russell Creek, a tributary of the Brazos River, in Eastland County, Texas, said dam to be of earth fill type, 40 feet in height, 1,400 feet in length, having a top width of 20 feet and a bottom width of 235 feet, thus creating a reservoir having an average width of 1,700 feet, length of impounded water 5,100 feet, an average depth of stored water of 10 feet, and having a storage capacity of 2,000 acre-feet; said dam to be located at a point which bears S. 15 degrees, W. a distance of 900 feet from the S. E. corner of the A. Bradley original survey on the west bank of Russell Creek in Eastland County, Texas, and distant in a northeasterly direction from Ranger, Texas, about four miles; and to impound said reservoir from time to time, as date hereof."

The unappropriated flow of said Russell Creek is available and to divert said reservoir means of a pumping plant, to exceed 525 acre-feet of water per annum for the purpose stated.

The permit also stated: less otherwise ordered by board, construction on the described works must begin in one year, and must be completed within three years from date hereof."

SERIAL STORY

WOMEN WANT BEAUTY!

BY LOUISE HOLMES

Yesterday, Jeff came to visit Susie when she is ill, and some-thing about a particular com-fort in him. She forgets Dick.

CHAPTER XXV

"How long since you had your last square meal?" Jeff asked at last.

"About three months ago," she laughed.

"Been doing right by yourself lately?"

She shook her head. Her hair, not pinned into place, fluffed in a cloud around her head. In the lamp light it was pure gold.

"You look like a picked chicken to me," Jeff remarked, wanting to tell her how lovely she was in her green gown against the flowered slip cover. Things like that didn't come easy to Jeff. "A lamb chop or two would set you up."

Going to the telephone he ordered dinner for them both, to be served in Susie's room. "Lamb chops grilled over charcoal, baked potatoes, a green salad bowl, jasmine tea." Then raising his eyebrows at Susie, waiting for her nod, he added, "buttered Scotch pie," and Susie's mouth watered.

The waiter pulled a small table before the windows and spread it with a snowy cloth. Jeff seated Susie in a deep chair and placed a cushion behind her back. She could never remember being so contented and happy. Hours with Dick were emotional trials, leaving her empty and dissatisfied. With Jeff it was different. The answer being, of course, that she did not love Jeff.

Under Jeff's merciless eyes Susie ate her dinner, even burying a pat of butter in the flaky depths of her baked potato, something she hadn't done in months. She compromised by eating half her portion of pie and Jeff finished it. The old spirit of comradeship came back.

When the table had been removed and they were cozily talking again Jeff told her, with boyish shyness, how desperately lonely he was since Edna went away, how the walls of the flat pressed in on him, how the silence smothered him.

"And she isn't coming back," he ended wistfully. "That's the worst thing about it. I know what it means to be jealous because I'm jealous of the Chief. You see, Edna's the only woman I ever loved."

Susie, wanting to comfort him, searching for the right word, was interrupted by the whir of the telephone bell.

She walked to the bed, graceful in her slinky gown, the cloud of hair giving her a childish look. Jeff watched her through a haze of cigaret smoke.

"Yes?" she said on a sweetly rising inflection. Almost instantly her pale cheeks were dyed with rose, eagerness edged her voice.

"I'm perfect again," she said. "It takes more than a cold to get little Suzanne down." She laughed exultantly at the reply over the wire.

She went on. "Only Jeff. He dropped in and we had dinner. When did you get back?" dismissing "only Jeff" with a verbal wave of the hand.

Followed an interval of rapt little utterances, questions and answers, soft laughter, intimate unfinished sentences, assenting murmurs.

Finally she said, "I may get to see your California in the spring. Dick, I've had an offer to sing with Ted Ward's orchestra."

From where he sat Jeff could hear a jubilant shout. It was Dick. Walking to the window he stared unseeing at the cars, like shiny beetles with brilliant eyes, skimming back and forth on the drive. Susie hadn't told him of the offer—it meant she would go away.

He heard her say, "I'd love to go, Dick. I can think of nothing I'd rather do. Will I see you in the meantime?" Obviously his answer was more than satisfactory. She turned from the telephone with scarlet cheeks and star-filled eyes.

"That was Dick," she announced in the time-worn custom, dropping breathlessly to her chair.

"So I gathered," answered Jeff, dryly.

"The most wonderful thing, Jeff—it's like a novel. Dick asked me to drive with him to Riverton for a rush dance at his fraternity house. Drive up Tuesday and back Wednesday in time for my broadcast." She was more thrilled than the invitation warranted.

"What's so exciting about that?" "It's simply dramatic, that's all. Dick took me to a rush party in his freshman year. He was a pledge then and he has no idea that I am the same girl. Doesn't the set-up have fascinating angles?"

Again Jeff spoke dryly. "I'm almost as romantic."

"That's what I mean," Susie threw back her head, looking past Jeff with dream-weighed eyes.

The cozy companionship was gone. After a while Jeff took his departure. Standing at the door he said, "That's swell about the California offer. Why didn't you tell me about it?"

"Oh, there's been a dozen offers. I'm interested in this one because—well, just because—" She flushed and laughed consciously.

"I see." Jeff went away and Susie hardly noticed his going. Putting his car in the garage Jeff took a long walk before returning to the desolate apartment.

UPON waking in the morning Susie's spirits went into reverse. The radiant aspect of things had changed overnight. Go to Riverton and dig up her past for Dick's enlightenment? Without a doubt it was the worst possible move she could make.

She sat up in bed, propping her chin on both fists. Just about the most effective way to rob Suzanne of glamor was to place her in Susie's old niche. Well, she'd have to find an excuse for declining Dick's invitation. This solution was not at all to her liking. The trip was attractive from so many angles.

First, it meant two days with Dick, the long drive and return in his car. Second, it would be in the manner of a triumphant return, it held all the elements of the local-girl-makes-good complex. Lastly, attending the Delta Phi party as a conqueror would, after five years, obliterate the sting of ignominy left from her last entrance into fraternal society.

What to do—what to do—. If she told Dick in a casual, off-hand way, if she said, "Do you remember Susie in the waffle shop? Well—I'm Susie," or "You didn't think, when I used to serve you waffles, that some day I'd lose 30 pounds and learn to do my hair, did you?" or something like that, robbing the incident of importance, making Dick see it as the wonderful adventure it had been. She wondered what would happen.

After all, Susie thought, there was nothing to be ashamed of in making the most of one's self. All day her mind hurried back and forth over the problem. She comprehended that any small thing might tip the scales and she trembled at the enormity of the stakes. Her chance of happiness might lie in the next few hours. In her heart she knew the trip to Riverton was the deciding factor. It came down to this. Hours of close companionship with Dick which, she felt sure, would break down his reserve, against the possibility of shattering his interest by recollections of the past, recollections of tongue-tied stupidity and unlovely appearance.

At last, when she was dressing to dine with Dick after which he would take her to the broadcasting station, she decided upon a course.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS-

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

By William Ferguson

ALL FOR 50 CENTS SALLY RAND will be there—this time with a "Nude Ranch" where her lassies will wear sombreros and boots. A diving bell will lower patrons 40 feet in shark and octopus-infested sea water—and a rocket ship will simulate a journey through the heavens. The Scottish Village is going on a realistic bent—even to importing a million bottles of Scotch beer. The bucolic touch will be the 3200-pound horse from Iowa. The other "whopper" will be a 36-foot snake, while to the other extreme go the midget village and Jule Charbon's minute machinery.

Assuming you are in San Francisco or Oakland, it will cost you a dime to go to the Exposition by ferry. Or if you would go by auto, 50 cents will carry you and four other persons on the Bay Bridge to and from the Exposition. The admission is 50 cents—and thereafter, the costs are your tastes for amusements, your fancies for art goods, your fondness for souvenirs.

San Francisco has been called a gourmet's paradise. It is one of the few cities in the world where you can dine on shark's fin soup and Peking duck, escargot and crepes suzette, sukiyaki or tempura, minestrone and veal scalopini, tamales and eggs rancho, borsch and shashlik and fried chicken and candied yams.

Peter Delivered From Prison

Text: Acts 12:15-17

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

THE same influences and forces that sent Jesus to the Cross were soon manifest in the persecution of His disciples in the early days of the church. As in our own day much of intolerance and persecution is associated with the personal ambition of individuals, or the promotion of some partisan interest, by appealing to popular prejudices and bigotries, so, in the ancient days, religious persecution was frequently found associated with such aims and purposes.

The ruler in Palestine, who held his office and power by the favor of Rome, had the problem of currying favor at the same time with the Jewish leaders who were hostile to Roman domination. It was under circumstances like these that Pilate was willing to condemn Jesus to death, not because he wished to or because he was convinced of any guilt, but because he did not wish to displease those whose favor and support he sought.

AMONG the early martyrs was James, the brother of John; and when Herod Agrippa, grandson of Herod the Great, saw that the death of James was pleasing to certain Jews, he threw Peter into prison. It is under these circumstances that our lesson opens.

Herod was about to bring Peter forth, evidently with the intention of according him the same fate as James—but that very night as Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with chains and behind the closely guarded doors of the prison, an angel came and stood by him, aroused Peter, and, as his chains fell off, led him from the prison. They passed the first and second guards, and came to the iron gate leading into the city which opened to them of its own accord. Then the angel left Peter.

HE was somewhat dazed from his experience but, coming to himself, he realized the miraculous nature of his deliverance. He immediately sought the house of Mary, the mother of Mark who afterwards was for a time the companion of Paul, and who was the author of our second Gospel.

Here he found the disciples gathered together in prayer. When the little maid, Rhoda, came in answer to Peter's knock at the door, she was so amazed and so full of joy that in her excitement she forgot to let him in, but ran telling the company that Peter stood at the door. The whole experience was as amazing to the company as it is to us. Just what happened when Peter's absence was discovered does not appear, but Peter went on his way and probably was in hiding, undoubtedly carrying on his ministry even in the midst of danger.

IT is a miraculous story, involving all the questionings and problems that miraculous stories emphasize. As I have repeatedly pointed out, however, miracles would be no miracles if they could be explained. Their interest for us today is in spiritual suggestiveness and teaching that has little to do with any critical question involved. The real and essential fact is that God does encompass his saints with "songs of deliverance," whether it be in strange and miraculous ways, or in the ordinary and understood processes of life.

The first try-outs were held Saturday night at the City Hall auditorium, but no final decision will be made on any part in the play until all persons interested have had an opportunity to appear before the Casting Committee. Virginia B. Weaver, director of the play states that the Little Theatre is anxious to interest more persons in this new production since the 15 speaking parts provided in "The Night of January 16" offers an excellent chance for the "would be actors and actresses" of Eastland to display their abilities. The group is always in search of new talent to use in its plays and has issued a special invitation to those who have never been connected with the Little Theatre to come to the try-outs Monday.
