Economics, 1900 and 1939

On the front page of a metropolitan newspaper recently appeared two articles whose contrast serves better than all the tomes of experts to accentuate the clash between economic thought of today and that of yesteryear.

The first was an interview with a white-haired, spirited widow of 89, whose husband had been an early associate of John D. Rockefeller in the grain and oil business. When the husband died at the turn of the century, he left his widow stocks in the city's privately owned traction company, which had regularly paid 6% dividends.

"I lived on the dividend for a long time," she said. "But now there has been no dividend for two years. The city and the company are deadlocked over a new franchise. People complain about the street car service when there's a car every three minutes. We used to think ourselves lucky to have a car every 20 minutes."

"It used to be that I could get an able-bodied man to do my gardening. Now I have to take old men of 70. The young men don't want to work. Manual work is not good enough any more. People all want to take it easy."

"Almost within hearing distance of this widow's home, a young and vigorous Catholic priest whose parish and problems lie in a great industrial community, lashed out from a convention rostrum in an attack on the "cupidity of wealth."

"Accustomed to respond only to self-interest and profit," he declared, "ignorant or contemptuous of all notions of stewardship and social function, and yet living under hallucinations of moral grandeur, wealth daily perpetrates a horror of mass starvation and exposure."

"The poor who have no purchasing power can make no appeal to the cupidity of wealth. There is nothing for it to do except change the system of control. America must erect a system in which wealth will not have the only way."

Neither of these persons is important in the political fight which is raging over attempted reformation of our economic system. It is a struggle which Americans of this generation probably will see settled in their lifetime.

The millions of citizens who are identified with neither camp, but who seek only the right to live in peace, happiness and reasonable security, hope that in between these two contrasting points of view a solution can be found without resort to violent political upheaval.

One often wonders why fellows choose the U. S. Naval Academy in preference to college—until the annual look at that June Week color girl.

Termites have undermined a school in California. The teachers are looking for a boy who might have brought them into the building in a bottle.

STRAWN, July 1.—Plenty of fireworks will be going off thick and fast here at the Greyhound Athletic Field Tuesday afternoon, July 4, when the Strawn Red Sox tangle with a highly touted all-star nine from Fort Worth in a double-header scheduled to get under way at 2:30 o'clock sharp.

The Fort Worthians will be led by Jake (Lefty) Blomer, sensational youth southpaw hurler, who was recently offered a contract with the Fort Worth Cats, Texas League club.

Blomer's appearance here Tuesday afternoon as he hurls the first game for the Fort Worth stars will mark his last trip to the mound as a semi-pro pitcher. Blomer's record thus far this season is 75 strikeouts in 41 innings. And his most recent achievement which made history in Fort Worth baseball circles was his performance of two weeks ago when he fanned 23 batters in nine innings.

Woodrow Duckworth, T. C. U. star, will pitch the nightcap for Fort Worth.

Manager Joe Lovera of the Strawn club announced that Gene Forgy, formerly of Palo Pinto and highly talented "knuckle ball" hurler, would pitch for the Red Sox during the first game, opposing the Fort Worth ace. Eno Vescutin, versatile southpaw and veteran of Oil Belt competition, will start the nightcap.

The Red Sox make their season debut Sunday afternoon at the Greyhound Athletic Field at 2:30 o'clock when they meet Brad and Unity nines in a double-header bill. Ladies and children will be admitted free. Sam Heath will pitch for Brad and Luke Fulfer will be on the mound for Unity.

That Reminds Me

(Continued from Page 1). comes a time that rewards for efforts come in small doses first and then they begin to come in bunches.

Gold Medal products manufactured by the Eastland Dairy Products Company of Eastland are beginning to become synonymous with quality both in and out of Eastland. J. A. Beard and Harvey Bouchillon are in control of the active management of the plant and they are assisted by capable and experienced men in every capacity required to place on the market a product second to none in this entire section.

The salaries of ten employees of this progressive firm find their way into Eastland channels as they spend their money here. Gasoline, oil, tires, upkeep of trucks and cars amount to over $300 per month spent with local dealers. Supplies to be manufactured and milk products bought from the farmers in this territory amount to more than $3,000.00 per month.

This sums up to the fact that the industry could double their payroll; double their purchases from local farmers, yes folks the amount would be unlimited if only the home folks will ask for and demand these high quality products that are manufactured from the purest ingredients under the strictest sanitary conditions.

community means a more secure foundation for the success of the community. Don't build payrolls in other cities. They do you no good and the money never comes back. Think twice before you purchase and if it's made at home buy it. There is no better quality manufactured. The plant is operated 100 per cent by Eastland people who make their permanent home here. The plant is open approximately 18 hours each day, including Sunday.

SERIAL STORY

PAR IS LOVE

BY EDWIN RUTT
COPYRIGHT, 1939.
NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Royalton bids Ronald, Wilfrid's brother, so Ronald offers Roy $100 to teach Wilfrid the wrong lessons. "I didn't say I would!" Roy replies, sinking deeper in the affair.

CHAPTER VIII

"WELL then," exclaimed Roy excitedly, "will you? Come on! Speak up!"

"Don't rush me," said Roy. "I'm thinking. Your argument appears reasonable. Your brother tries to put one over on you. You forestall him cleverly. I really think you should be rewarded for your perspicacity."

"What?"

"Let it go," advised Roy. "I mean that I may do it." The fried fillet of sole came out and seized his hand. "You will? Gee, that's great."

"I will, on one condition."

"Any condition you like," cried Roy joyfully.

"Well, that is that you take this match a little more seriously. You'll have to give me your word to spend more time practicing. And you must be in bed by 8 o'clock tonight. Those are my terms. If you don't like them, I withdraw."

"Brother," said Roy heartily, "don't worry. I'm going off to practice so fast you won't be able to see me for dust." He paused. "Explain to Babs—Miss Ganning for me, will you? We were going over to town. But I see it's foolish. By the way, you might give me a few pointers on this game later. Good ones, I mean. But first, teach Wilfrid how not to play it, will you?"

"That," said Roy, "is the softest assignment I ever had. But see here, no tricks tonight! Sleep is important."

"If anybody sees me at 8:30," said Roy, almost gaily, "they'll think I'm Rip Van Winkle." And he departed with satisfying speed.

Roy waited till he was out of sight. Then he walked slowly toward the garage, well pleased with himself. Things were going nicely. Now if only... He paused in his ruminations. Babs Ganning slipped out of the garage door. She smiled up at him.

Roy gazed at her and his heart went up and down like a pump handle. "Well, did I come through?"

"Like a true Herring. Now are you coming to town with me?"

"I wish," said Roy fervently, "somebody would try to stop me."

J. PEMBERTON GANNING sat brooding over a fossil. In order to do this, he had sidled from the drawing-room after coffee, leaving his wife and daughter to entertain what he had come to look upon as perpetual guests, the twins, Ronald and Wilfrid Peyton. And, with the even four of them left, it seemed as if bridge or some lesser form of amusement would be in full swing presently.

Not so, however. Shortly after Mr. Pemberton's withdrawal an amazing phenomenon occurred. Mr. Wilfrid Peyton, setting down his coffee cup and shifting from one foot to the other, begged to be excused. He had, he said, a slight headache. He thought, perhaps, that he would be better off in bed. Whereupon he slunk from the room, leaving a vindictive and exultant glance at his brother as he went.

Phenomenon number two took place several minutes after Wilfrid's departure.

"I'm sleepy," said Ron. "Mrs. Ganning started."

"Good heavens," she exclaimed. "What is the matter with you boys tonight?"

"Nothing," said Ron. "Er—that is, nothing's the matter with me. I'm just sleepy, that's all."

Mrs. J. Pemberton Ganning was not the woman to brook shilly-shally and bubble-and-squeak.

"Well then," she said decisively, "you'd better go to bed, Ronald."

"Yes, ma'am," Ronald said respectfully. "I think I'd better."

He went out and Mrs. Ganning lifted an inquisitory eyebrow at her daughter.

"What on earth is the matter with them?" she demanded. "Search me. You don't suppose there was anything wrong with the food, do you?"

"Of course not. Those twins are dizzy, that's all."

"Their mother was a Rumsford," said Mrs. Ganning thoughtfully. "Of course, one never heard of the Peytons. But... where are you going, Barbara?"

"Oh, just out," said Babs vaguely, hesitating in the doorway.

MR. ROYALTON AUGUSTUS HERRING, lurking near the house like a dervish off an island, perceived a shadow in white coming down the steps. His heart, snared and enslaved though it was, achieved a fairly good bounce. The shadow approached.

"Babs," he breathed. She appeared surprised. "Oh, I—I didn't know anyone was here."

"Liar," trembled on Roy's lips. He changed it for a four-letter word meaning something entirely different.

"Dear—er—that is, Barbara, are you alone?"

"Like Robinson Crusoe before Friday came. The other members of the troupe are indisposed."

"Ah!"

"They stood me up in favor of going to bed. Are you having pity tonight on a poor lonely girl?"

"Well, I don't know. I really ought to see Baskerville. Family obligations, you know. But I might give you a few minutes."

"Sweet of you. Where shall we go?"

"Oh, let's wander over your governor's—ahem—father's estate. I want to talk to you about things."

She took his arm and fell into step by his side. She radiated, he thought, a sweetness that should have made the flowers pack up and go bloom elsewhere.

"I'm glad you're tall," he said. "Like 'em tall?"

"Uh-huh! And dark-haired." "Not a blond hound?"

"Nope. Can't see 'em with a telescope. But I like violet eyes."

"How thrilling! Tell me about her."

HE told her. He was still telling her an hour later when they returned to the veranda and found a darkened corner. He would probably have continued his theme until the leering moon slunk out of the sky had she not injected a question.

"How are you getting on with your—er—destructive operations?" she asked.

"Pretty well," Roy said. "But I'm fighting a tough enemy. Time."

"You'd better think fast, Captain Flagg."

"I'll break it up," said Roy sagely, "if I have to knock those two chumps on the head."

"Desperado."

"And how! Look here, Babs, this match mustn't be."

"Well, it's up to you. You've got a whole day and a night. Why, the battle of Waterloo took less than eight hours."

"Who do you think I am, the Duke of Wellington?"

"Well, of course, you may turn out to be Napoleon. It remains to be seen."

"Haven't I done pretty well already?"

"Possibly. But I'm expecting greater things."

"But I ought to get a reward for what I've done to date. Think of it! I put the twins to bed."

"Quite an accomplishment. So you want—something on account?" Her lips were dangerously close.

"I not only want it. I've got to have it." He kissed her two seconds sooner than she expected.

Held by Police in Murder Case

When on Dec. 29, 1875, Custer City was founded, he was named on a committee to stake out its boundaries. The group did the work with tape line and stakes.

Elected coroner of Custer City, Taylor was the first man to hold that job in the Black Hills. He was a friend of Poker Annie, cigar smoking woman gambler, and the Dalton brothers, notorious stage coach robbers. In New Mexico territory, he played cards with Billy the Kid shortly before the Kid was involved in a war between sheepmen and cattlemen and became an outlaw.

He was one of the first white men in the Oklahoma territory, and helped organize the first fire department in Guthrie, Okla. Later he moved westward to Colorado and Idaho and finally to California. Here he was one of the men who pioneered the rich Coalinga oilfields.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS

Black Hills Pioneer Relates Of Wild Bill Hickok's Demise

United Press Staff Correspondent COALINGA, Cal.—John Taylor, pioneer resident of the Black Hills who recalls the shooting of Wild Bill Hickok, famous two-gun frontier marshal, as clearly as if it had happened yesterday, is thinking of settling down now that he has reached the age of 88.

Still an active real estate operator, Taylor has a clear memory of the historic events in which he took part during a lifetime spent in frontier settlements. His friends say he can dive from the high springboard as well as the average youth of 20.

The most interesting of his many stories is the tale of the shooting of Wild Bill Hickok, whose feats are part of the Wild West of tradition and fiction, in Leadville, S. D.

While Hickok sat in a saloon playing poker, and Taylor stood talking to his friend, Tim Brady, on a nearby street corner, Jack McCall, a miner, entered the bar and shot Wild Bill. The two men had quarreled over a gambling debt.

A moment later McCall, gun in hand, came running down the street to where his horse was fastened to a hitching post only a few feet from Taylor and Brady. A loose cinch and a slipping saddle prevented him from getting on the animal.

With Taylor, Brady, the bartender and saloon frequenters in pursuit, McCall ran on down the street. His pursuers cornered him in a grocery in the next block, and for want of a jail, held him prisoner there until his trial the next day.

Taylor said he and others placed the body of Hickok on a door and carried it away for burial. The next day Taylor sat in the rude log theater while McCall was tried by a jury of miners without benefit of a judge. The miner was acquitted when the jury could not agree, but taken into custody a month later, he was tried and sentenced to death by a judge in Yankton.

Taylor's first contact with Calamity Jane, famous frontier dance hall hostess who later became his close friend, was in a Custer City bath house. He was in a tub in one room while Jane and a woman companion were bathing in an adjoining compartment. Through the thin wood partition, he said, floated some of the most colorful profanity he had ever heard.

Taylor was in Philadelphia when he joined a band of adventurous men who were among the first to enter the Black Hills territory.

Mental Patient Is Steamroller Diver

MONTREAL.—John Ralph Wilson, 33-year-old patient at a local hospital under medical observation, was sent out to wander about the grounds in an effort to cure a depressed mood.

While crossing the lawn he spied a steamroller working on the hospital driveway. Dashing across the grounds, he dove head first under the front roller, which passed completely over his body.

Texas Scheduled To Share Expected U.S. Business Hike

AUSTIN, Tex.—Full sharing in the upward movement of the national business cycle may be expected of Texas, Dr. F. A. Buechel, University of Texas economist, said today.

The national gain is expected to be confined mainly to expansion in consumer goods industries during the next few months at least, Dr. Buechel, assistant Bureau of Business Research director, predicted. In this movement, Texas will likely participate fully, he said.

"If sustained recovery is finally achieved throughout the country, and activity in the capital goods industries gains momentum, an additional impulse will be given to Texas business," he said.

Past experience, however, indicates that "the rise in the indexes of industry and trade in this state will be a slower rate than in the North and East," he added.

The composite business index for Texas, compiled by the University Bureau from such factors as employment, pay rolls, miscellaneous freight car loadings, runs of crude oil to stills, department store sales, and electric power consumption, stood at 96 during May, a substantial increase over the April index of 94.3. All of the factors except department store sales gained over the preceding month.

Jailer's 'Courtesy' Is Not For Prisoners

By United Press EL PASO, Texas—Sheriff Chris P. Fox believes that the best is none too good for the prisoners in his care. So he has added an electrically-operated door to the jail. All that a person has to do to open the barred door is to push a button; when he lifts his finger the door goes shut again.

The only catch to it, as far as the boarders at his hotel are concerned, is that the button is on the outside of the door, so that no prisoner can get to it.
