WEATHER MAY BE SLIGHTLY COOLER SOON

By United Press
The above normal temperatures that have plagued the state virtually all week, will subside only slightly, according to the weather bureau.

The hint of a promise that relief from the heat may come soon was caused Friday by the pressure of cooler weather in the mountain region. The government forecasters said that the first day in the area to feel a slight relief in the heat Saturday.

and Texans are not being persecuted more than the neighboring states of the Central States of Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas. Mrs. Jire temperatures have been 90 at parallel.

Ethel Henrietta, Texas, had 110 degrees Thursday. Other temperatures included San Angelo 104, Shepley Stockton 106, Wichita Falls 100, Fort Worth 100 and San Antonio 102.

Poles Believe Bountiful Harvest Is Sure Forerunner of Another Big War Possibly Before The Coming Winter

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE, JR.
United Press Staff Correspondent

WARSAW, Poland, July 7.—Poland's primitive economic system—regarded by some foreigners as the weakest spot in national defense—appears to have weathered the first shock of war threats as the farm population prepares to harvest a bumper grain crop.

Mile after mile of six-foot barley and rippling wheat stretches across the nation's great plains and, if you listen to what the peasants say, it means war before the snow flies.

The peasants, looking over the yellow fields, argue in this way: There was a record crop in 1912. That year brought Napoleon's armies. The harvest again was high in 1914. That year saw the beginning of the World War.

In some ways, the attitude of the peasant is typical of Poland's fatalism, born of centuries of suffering as the battleground between east and west. But now there is added to that fatalism a publicly expressed determination to save today's united Poland and assure its future.

On a tree-shaded slope close under the walls of the old brick Russian fortress on the banks of the Vistula are 230 white crosses. They mark the graves of Poles executed in the uprising of 1905. There, too, are the gallows on which the martyrs were hanged. Spots like this and like "Kosciuszko Mount" as Cracow, formed by hands full of dirt deposited by patriots as a revolutionary memorial, are symbols of new significance to Poles this summer.

As for the economic outlook, the Polish experts claim they can stand up against an indefinite "crisis" pressure and that the national economy will not crack even under prolonged mobilization at a cost of probably $1,000,000 a day. Foreigners take the viewpoint that the economic problem may well be solved if foreign credits, for which Poland has been negotiating in London, can be found within the next few weeks.

Deflation is considered one of the biggest dangers. When the reich first stated her demands there were runs on the Polish banks, hoarding of commodities and a slump in buying.

Then came the national defense loan to which a million persons—chiefly voluntarily but sometimes under pressure or official suggestion—subscribed 400,000,000 zlotys ($76,000,000), payable in five monthly installments.

Such a sum withdrawn even by degrees from money in circulation was certain to affect markets and national life. But according to the Polish economic experts, the nation's simplified and predominantly agricultural economic structure has absorbed the blow and readjusted itself with a sign at present of cracking.

"There was some disruption at first," it was explained at the ministry of finance. "People wanted to provide themselves with reserve supplies and industry wanted to lay in stocks. They withdrew funds from the banks. They stopped buying what was not essential. But during the last three months we have reached a new equilibrium.

"Now the indices of production are up again and people are buying and again depositing money in the banks.

"We believe that the crisis is

O'Daniel's Chances Of Being Elected Are Big Puzzle

By United Press

AUSTIN, Tex.—Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel's chance to be reelected is a much discussed topic around the state capitol since the 46th Legislature adjourned.

That he will run again is taken for granted. The legislature's defeat of the plan, approved by the governor, to finance old age pensions and other social security projects with the assistance of a sales tax may help rather than hurt his prospects for another term.

If it had won, old folks disappointed at not receiving the full $30-a-month of which O'Daniel talked in his campaign might have turned against him. Now they are more likely to place the blame on someone else.

Had the sales tax been ordered, the people who would have had to pay the tax would have been grumbling, if the effect in other states is any indication.

The failure of the plan, therefore, leaves him at least as well off politically as success for it would have done.

O'Daniel's opponents, of course, will point out that the sales tax by constitutional amendments was one of many possible ways to finance old age assistance. They will point to the statutory taxes that were killed summarily in the Senate by senators whom the governor cited on his "honor roll."

They will point out that he denounced "horse trading" in the Legislature but later said all legislation is the result of compromise and accepted the sales tax which he has opposed in his campaign.

Having called for political war on the 56 representatives who prevented passage of the resolution for a sales tax amendment, the governor must expect them to retaliate. They already are planning to keep the battle alive.

A testimonial dinner for the "56" is to be held in Dallas within a few days. It will afford them an opportunity to map a campaign. Apparently the strategy will be to carry the fight to the governor.

As a candidate for reelection he must therefore be prepared to hear them read his speeches of the previous campaign and make comparisons with his performance.

Many about Austin believe the governor's hardest hurdle is yet to be encountered. After his insistence that the "56" surrender their judgment and wishes to the majority, it is pointed out that he will be in a difficult position if he vetoes bills passed by the legislature or reduces their appropriations. Such action would be the judgment and will of one man thwarting the majority.

The constitution gives the governor veto power. The constitution also gave the "56" the same right by permitting submission of constitutional amendments only if two-thirds of both senators and representatives approved.

More Floods Are Feared In Kentucky

By United Press

MOREHEAD, Ky., July 7.—Threats of additional floods spurred rescue workers today in their search for the dead in the flood-devastated northeastern Kentucky hill section.

They already had recovered 54 bodies and reported 117 missing. Rain hampered the search last night and sent swollen rivers and creeks steadily higher. The U. S. Weather Bureau predicted thundershowers for the area today.

Rescuers hourly found more bodies in the silt and debris and believed fatalities finally would reach more than 100.

ONE YEAR TO GO PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

BY BRUCE CATTON

Paul McNutt—has heavy obstacles.

If driving force, brilliant organizing ability, and a good record as a campaigner could, of themselves, win the presidency, Paul V. McNutt of Indiana would have the inside track for the Democratic nomination.

All of those things Mr. McNutt has, in full measure. He is handsome, an effective speaker, a talented executive; he has been governor of Indiana and he is just now retiring as governor general of the Philippines. . . but his drive for the White House has some heavy obstacles to overcome.

One is common to all Democratic aspirants. He doesn't know what President Roosevelt will do.

Mr. McNutt is on record to the effect that he won't make the race if Mr. Roosevelt is a candidate for a third term. Until the President definitely declares himself, the McNutt campaign is handicapped.

If the President does finally eliminate himself, the McNutt forces can be counted on to make the fur fly. Some of it, probably, will fly from the corner occupied by Postmaster General Farley, who has remarked that McNutt will get the nomination only over his (Farley's) body. However that may be, the ex-governor of Indiana is a shrewd politician and a campaigner who must be reckoned with.

HIS ASSETS: The qualities above mentioned, plus a number of important friendships, plus an effective organization, plus a pretty fair record in office.

HIS LIABILITIES: The probable intense opposition of organized labor; the distrust of liberal groups generally; the enmity of Mr. Farley.

HIS CHANCES: If Mr. Roosevelt takes himself out of the equation, Mr. McNutt's chances might turn out to be very good indeed.

SECRETARY SWANSON DIES SUDDENLY AT CAMP IN VIRGINIA

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, under whose administration United States fleets underwent the greatest expansion in peace time history, died today in a mountain camp in his native Virginia.

A state funeral for the 77-year-old elder statesman of the Democratic party, will be held in the senate chamber Monday.

President Roosevelt, with "profound regret" announced the news of Swanson's death. The cabinet member died at the fishing camp at Rapidan, Va., which was created by President Hoover.

He suffered a stroke at 7 a. m. yesterday, and died shortly after 8 a. m. today.

Charles Edison, assistant secretary of the navy, immediately became acting secretary, and flashed news of Swanson's death to United States war vessels in all quarters of the world.

Swanson's death, the third of a cabinet member in Roosevelt's administration, raises a difficult political problem in selection of his successor. Edison, who during Swanson's long illness has been virtually acting secretary, has been mentioned. Gov. Lloyd Stark of Missouri also was a possibility.

The news of Swanson's death reached the capitol without warning and brought universal expressions of regret from the president, cabinet members, federal officials and members of congress.

The senate adjourned after a 15-minute session during which it adopted a resolution authorizing a state funeral Monday. The sen-

British Bombers To Practice Over France and Belgium

By United Press

LONDON, July 7.—Great Britain and France are negotiating an agreement under which British bombing planes would make long-distance training flights over France, it was understood today.

This disclosure was made as the squadron of 10 crack Royal Air Force bombers prepared to leave for Belgium on the first of a series of "courtesy visits" to friendly nations, and to serve notice on the world that Britain's fighting forces were now ready for action.

Under the agreement British planes would make non-stop flights to Southern France and back to England, thus providing a longer range for practice flights and giving experience for British pilots over France, where they would be operating in event of war.

142nd Infantry Is Selected To Put On Demonstration

The 142nd infantry regiment, Texas National Guard, has been selected by the war department to stage a protective mobilization demonstration during the annual national guard encampment at Palacios, August 5, regimental officers have announced.

Selection of the 142nd infantry was made on the basis of its rating during the federal inspection held several months ago.

The 142nd is composed of three battalions of four letter companies and a headquarters company each, and a howitzer company, regimental headquarters company and regimental service-band company.

Col. John W. Page of Ft. Worth is commanding officer of the 142nd and Fort Worth is regimental headquarters. Battalion headquarters are at Coleman, Stamford and Snyder. There are companies at Amarillo, Brownwood, Santa Anna, Coleman, Ballinger, Stephenville, Sweetwater, Canyon, Snyder, Breckenridge, Abilene, Ranger, Stamford, Wichita Falls and Electra.

The first battalion of the 142nd infantry sponsored the military field day and demonstration held in Coleman several weeks ago.

Fire Reveals The Secret of Purple X Society

CANTON, O.—Headquarters of the "Purple X Secret Society" were damaged slightly by fire, but Fire Chief George Jacob thinks the organization still can exist.

In a vacant house Jacob found some charred paper after an alarm had been turned in, but also uncovered a membership list—Chief Thunker, Capt. Smokey, and Corporals Bony and Pewee.

"There also was a primitive bookkeeping system—but no dues were entered," Chief Jacob said. "There was a book of 'black marks' against members who failed to keep their pledges.

"I hated to reveal all this—because I belonged to a similar organization when I was a kid."

Bathtub Is On Its Way Out Plumber Tells A Meeting

EL PASO, Tex.—The bathtub is on its way out, and there will come a day when state laws will prohibit bathtubs in hotels and other public buildings.

That is the prediction of R. C. Malitz of Galveston, a real veteran plumber who attended the annual convention here of the Master Plumbers Association of Texas.

Malitz, who started hooking up pipes in the days when tin and copper bathtubs were fashionable in swanky homes, said, "The shower bath is the only sanitary bath. The bathtub in public buildings will go."

Forty years ago, Malitz said, he installed the plumbing and heating for the Galveston courthouse. He also believes he installed the first water heater in a Galveston home.

JAPS PROTEST AND THREATEN BRITISH RIOT

By United Press

TOKYO, Japan, July 7.—Police reinforcements were sent to guard the British Embassy against demonstrators today as an army spokesman asserted that "never before" during Anglo-Japanese relations has Japan borne such hatred for Britain.

The call for police reinforcements was made when hundreds of Japanese, observing the second anniversary of the war in China, demonstrated before the embassy building. Police acted promptly. Reinforcements were dispatched and the demonstrators were scattered.

CHUNGKING, July 7.—The British Gunboat Falcon was damaged today as Japanese bombs fell around the vessel during three air raids on the temporary Chinese capital here.

British sailors on the Falcon manned the guns, but did not fire. No one was injured.

One bomb fell 50 feet from the home of Willys Beck, councillor of the United States Embassy.

Harrington Tells Labor Leaders He Can't Change Rule

By United Press

WASHINGTON, July 7.—WPA Administrator F. C. Harrington today informed a delegation of protesting American Federation of Labor officials that he is powerless to alter congressional termination of the prevailing wage policy on relief projects.

Harrington told the labor officials that congress now has substituted a policy of paying security wages, and he has no power to act in the situation.

In protest against the new wage system, thousands of skilled laborers on WPA projects scattered across the country, have walked off their jobs, threatening discontinuation of projects giving employment to nearly 150,000 workers.

Harrington has informed all strikers that if they stay away from work for five days they will be dropped from relief rolls.

El Paso Trying Out Castor Bean Crop

By United Press

EL PASO, Tex.—An experimental castor bean crop of 100 acres in the El Paso valley will be planted by farmers in a drive to free cotton districts from "one-crop stagnation."

Following a meeting with Russell Myrick of Lubbock, 20 local farmers agreed to plant from one to 15 acres as an experiment.

Myrick, associated with Dr. Henry Miller, chemist of McPherson, Kan., who has developed a process for cheaply extracting oil from the beans, offered to furnish the seed and buy the beans in the fall for 60 cents a bushel.

Castor beans are one of the "chemurgic crops" under experiment in an effort to increase the variety of the farmers' products and eliminate dependence of farming areas on a single crop.

Uses for the plant, and leaves are still in the experimental stage, but oil for plants, cellulose, and insecticides may be produced from the bean, plant fibers and seed.

Sharper Perhaps, Than Swords

Hitler's long-predicted troubles in occupied Czechoslovakia seem to have begun.

Despite a few violent outbreaks in which policemen have been killed, most of this developing Czech resistance seems to be of the passive kind.

And that is very interesting, because it is barely possible that this is the most effective kind of resistance. The Czechs were persuaded, by British-French arguments and by circumstances, not to fight for their country's independence. Whether that was a wise decision or not is hard to decide finally at this time. But the fact that military resistance was not made does not mean, apparently that the Czechs will not resist at all the Germanization for which Hitler believes them destined.

Here are some of the little things that are happening in Czechoslovakia, gathered together from many dispatches from that area:

In cafes and shops, clerks and waiters stand blankly when German soldiers or Brownshirts order anything. They pretend not to understand.

Many German patrons of such places have been victims of a sudden clumsiness of waiters who spilled hot soup over their uniforms.

If the soup is not spilled, it may come to the table so loaded with pepper that the Nazis choke, or perhaps a bent pin is found at the bottom of the bowl—a regrettable accident, of course, but irritating none the less.

A Czech mayor, receiving a bill from the German authorities for food furnished the poor in the early days of the occupation, sent back a prompt bill for iron railings removed from barrack walls.

In Pilsen, acid was thrown on a detachment of passing German troops, injuring no one, but staining the uniforms and causing embarrassment to the Germans. More than 100 were arrested.

On Eduard Benes' birthday, buttonhole rosettes flowered throughout the Czech territory, mute evidence that the republic is not forgotten. Statues of Czech heroes have been prominently decked with flowers.

All these things can be very irritating indeed to an army of occupation. The evident intention is to goad the Germans into frankly taking over Czechoslovakia as part of the Reich. This, or harsh measures of suppression, would further alienate foreign opinion. Many Czechs probably figure that, having lost their independence anyway, they might as well go all the way, since Czechoslovakia as an integral part of Germany will be a greater handicap than Czechoslovakia as a "protectorate."

This sort of silent, stubborn, non-violent but exceedingly irritating attitude may in the long run prove a more effective defense of the Czech republic than its army could have been.

Good Will Tour To Offer Opportunity For Big Vacation

At last the time has come to take that coveted vacation. A timely suggestion is to go to New York and see the great New York World's Fair, join the "Texas Ambassador's Good Will Tour," which leaves Texas August 1.

The President of the New York World's Fair has appointed Paul W. Curtis of Fort Worth to conduct the Ambassador's Good Will Tour.

The Ambassador and party leave on the internationally famous Sunshine Special, meeting East Texas and South Texas groups en route, Tuesday afternoon, August 1, in Longview and Texarkana.

On the second day there is a short stop in St. Louis. The third day the Ambassador Tour arrives in Washington where special entertainment features have been arranged for the party.

While in Washington a special trip will be made to Mount Vernon and to the Arlington National Cemetery, visiting the Custis Lee Mansion, then a drive over a Washington Memorial Highway along the banks of the Potomac with a full hour spent in the home of George Washington.

And then to New York where special honors will be given the Ambassador party by the New York World's Fair officials.

The next day the party will leave for Queens and Flushing and arrive at the World's Fair grounds to visit the different points of interest. In the evening the party will be entertained in one of New York's leading night clubs with dining and dancing.

The sixth day the party will go to the famed Rockefeller Church on Riverside Drive. In the evening a tour of the city will be made which will take in the Bowery and Greenwich Village, also Chinatown, and up through Broadway's famed and sparkling theatre district to Harlem, the renowned negro center.

The seventh and eighth days will be devoted to individual activities with a theatre party on the evening of the eighth day at one of Broadway's hit shows.

The next day the party will leave New York by boat on a trip up the Hudson river. Dancing will be enjoyed.

On the ninth day the party will leave New York for Niagara Falls and Canada. The sightseeing trip here takes the party on a long drive where they may see the falls from both the American and Canadian sides and go down the gorge on the Canadian side to the Whirlpool Rapids.

And then the Ambassador Tour will leave for Texas with a stop over in St. Louis, whence they step aboard the Sunshine Special for home.

For further information and a folder describing trip in detail, write Ambassador Paul W. Curtis in care of Ft. Worth Chamber of Commerce, Ft. Worth, or Mrs. B. B. Maupin, Tower Petroleum Building, Dallas, or ask your nearest Texas and Pacific Agent.

NORGI REFRIGERATORS, GAS RANGES, WASHERS, IRONERS AND HOT WATER HEATERS. C. I. HYATT Phone 19 Serving Eastland and Ran

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—A far-reaching movement to tie the C. I. O. and the Townsend old-age pension group together into one enormous pressure organization that would fight for "progressive" social and labor legislation, as well as for higher old-age benefits, is quietly getting under way here.

The movement is initiated by C. I. O. headquarters, and comes in response to "grass roots" requests from rank and file members of both organizations.

It is an outgrowth of the fact that there has already been considerable co-operation between the two groups in scattered instances. In the California campaign of last fall, for instance, local C. I. O. units co-operated closely with Townsend and "Ham and Eggs" clubs to bring about the election of Governor Olson and Senator Downey.

Right now a good deal of quiet conversation is taking place on the matter in Capitol Hill, where C. I. O. representatives are sounding out senators who are aligned with Townsendites. An official C. I. O. observer is taking in the Townsend convention at Indianapolis.

More definite, detailed moves will be made after that convention has ended. The first public move was made in mid-June when the C. I. O. executive board formally resolved to undertake a national campaign, "in co-operation with old age and progressive groups," for a flat 60-month pension for everyone 60 years old or over.

Supplementary allowances for wives would raise this to a $90 maximum with the provision, however, that the amount of private income possessed by a pensioner should be deducted from his benefits. Adopting this resolution primarily expressed the C. I. O.'s dissatisfaction with the New Deal's social security program. The principle the C. I. O. is now committed to is that old age benefits should not go merely to selected groups which have contributed, via payroll taxes, to the benefit fund, but should go to all old people as a matter of right.

Further, it explicitly disavows the idea that the system should pay for itself. The executive board endorsed the payroll tax simply as a revenue measure, and suggested estate and gift taxes to raise whatever additional money might be needed. It estimates, by the way, that adoption of its plan would increase the annual old age benefit cost by about $600,000,000 over the social security act's total.

By adopting these principles, the C. I. O. comes measurably close to the Townsend and General Welfare philosophies. The big gap to be bridged is the fact that the C. I. O. repudiates the famous transactions tax.

What C. I. O. strategists have in mind is the idea that "60 for 60" idea comes close enough to the Townsend idea to be acceptable to the organized old people. (A number of letters have already been received from Townsendites, incidentally, expressing vast enthusiasm for the plan.)

If that proves true, there would then be the task of selling the old folks the proposition that old age security is just one angle of the general security problem. And if that job could be done, the support of the old age groups for C. I. O.-sponsored labor and social legislation could be had.

And if—to sum up—all of that could be done, some rather remarkable political consequences might follow. Maybe it can't be done. Dr. Townsend himself is still an unknown quantity in the equation. But the C. I. O. is going to give it the old college try, anyway.

SERIAL STORY

PAR IS LOVE

BY EDWIN RUTT
COPYRIGHT 1939,
NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday Ronald is surprised by Barbara as he strolls in the museum at Roy's... Mr. Ganning leaves his bedroom.

CHAPTER XI

AFTER retiring, Mr. Ganning had lain awake for some time, dimly conscious of a stir throughout the house.

But when, after having achieved a light doze, he was suddenly awakened by a series of penetrating wallops he considered it time to investigate.

"Hornets," demanded J. Pemberton with some heat. "What's all this?"

"Hey," he called testily. "I can't sleep with all this noise." At the word "noise" J. Pemberton's Ganning bridled.

"Sleep!" he roared. "Who the devil could sleep with a madman tearing through the house? Speak up, you—Ronald or Wilfrid or whichever it is! What's the matter? What's all this commotion about?"

"Hornets," Ronald managed. "In my room."

J. Pemberton Ganning addressed his wife. "Is he crazy or am I?"

"I'm not crazy," said the disgruntled Ronald, with some slight suggestion of hauteur.

"Nonsense," said J. Pemberton. "Who'd do a fool thing like that? You've been dreaming."

"Patience with his elders had never been Ronald Peyton's lot. He thrust out a hand indignantly. It was swollen.

"Does that look like a dream?" he growled.

BARBARA appeared. She had paused to select a particularly fetching negligee and do her hair a bit. She was looking her best.

"Why isn't this nice?" she said. "Just a little family party out here in the hall. Have I missed anything?"

J. Pemberton wheeled on her. "Do you know anything about hornets?"

"Hornets?" Barbara cogitated. "They're those little black things that fly around and sting you, aren't they? No, I..."

"Stop this nonsense!" bawled J. Pemberton exasperated. He addressed the gathering as a whole.

"Ron, dear," said Barbara irrelevantly, "your face is a sight."

The entire lack of sympathy accorded him was getting too much for Ronald. He exploded.

"So would yours be," he yelled, "if you'd put it in a hornets' nest."

"Oh, did you do that? How careless, Ronald!"

Mrs. Ganning had withdrawn. She returned now with a bottle of witchhazel and some cotton and began to dab at Ronald's face in an abstracted manner.

There was a momentary silence, broken only by grunts from the afflicted twin.

"Well," said Barbara easily, "we're all here now. All but Wilfrid."

A sudden howl sounded from afar. It began as a low sweeping bay and then swelled to an agonized and prolonged scream.

Upon the group in the hall, its effect was electric. As if by common consent they rose a foot in the air, then settled down again.

"God in Heaven!" exclaimed J. Pemberton Ganning. "What on earth was that?"

From the region of the stairs there came a tumult. Someone was ascending and ascending right rapidly. A breathless hush fell over the congregation.

Then Wilfrid burst into view, running as if all the fiends of Satan were breathing down the back of his pajamas. His eyes were wide, his hair disheveled, and in his right hand he carried a banjo which he brandished before him.

"I was wrong," said Barbara calmly. "Wilfrid is here."

MR. WILFRID PEYTON, wrapped in a blanket on the floor of the museum, never knew how long he slept.

He was awakened by a heavy scraping sound as of some bulky object dragging itself across the floor.

For a moment he lay with his eyes closed, still bewildering his senses.

He opened his eyes. Above him loomed a great dark shape, an indistinct lowering mass that seemed to creep slowly nearer.

Wilfrid sat bolt upright, the hair rising on his head and cold perspiration oozing from every pore in his body.

He opened his mouth but no sound came, save a strangled and ineffectual gurgle. And then something occurred that gave him back his vocal powers.

The top of the dark shape lighted suddenly, hideously. And Wilfrid, nerveless and chattering, saw bending over him in the darkness a horrible face whose eyes were deathlike hollows and whose long jaw widened in a terrible, gloating grin over snaggly, uneven teeth.

The howl that escaped Mr. Wilfrid Peyton would have been audible over the hosts of Bedlam. For one awful second he remained rooted to the floor.

Then, fear stabbing his limbs to action, he scrambled to his feet. As he did so, his hand came in contact with something hard.

It was the handle of his banjo and he seized it gratefully. Leaping up, he swung the banjo furiously at that grinning thing.

There was a splintering crash and the lights went out suddenly, leaving the museum in pitch blackness.

And Wilfrid departed from that place, bowing over an imprudent skeleton that happened to be lurking in the region of the doorway.

He gained the stairs without mishap, charged up them and came to anchor before the group in the upper hall, where he collapsed against the wall like a pricked balloon, spent, panting, and still clutching the banjo.

J. Pemberton Ganning raised his hands on high. He was sorely tried.

"Lord Almighty," he ejaculated. "Will somebody, just one person, have the goodness to tell me what is going on in this house?"

Nobody spoke. Wilfrid panted. Ronald groaned. J. Pemberton's voice rose in a dull roar.

"Boy," he boomed, addressing the hapless Wilfrid. "Will you tell me why you come thundering up these stairs shrieking loud enough to wake the dead? In God's name."

"Pemberton," interrupted Mrs. Ganning, dabbing haphazardly at Ronald with witch-hazel soaked cotton, "mind your language, dear."

He wheeled upon her. "Language? To devil with the language! This is enough to make a saint swear!"

He turned to Wilfrid again. "Well, speak up! What's the idea of you and your brother holding a marathon here in the middle of the night?"

Wilfrid pulled himself together and spoke. "It moved," he said. (To Be Concluded)

PAR IS LOVE

BY EDWIN RUTT

NEA SERVICE, INC.

J. PEMBERTON GANNING clapped his hands to his head and walked around in a circle.

"He's crazy," he declared. "Plain off his head."

Barbara took up the reins of interrogation. "What moaned, Wilfrid?"

"The d-dinosaur," Wilfrid panted.

"Ha," J. Pemberton's eyes lighted in a glare. "What's that? You talking about my dinosaur?"

"I tell you," said Wilfrid, with spirit, "the dinosaur moved. I saw it. Its head is all lit up."

J. Pemberton's voice soared again.

"My God," he shouted. "Has it come to pass that a man and his entire family have to stand all night in a hallway listening to an idiot making the statement that a dinosaur, that's been dead God knows how many thousands of years is walking around with its head lit up? Boy, you should see an alienist!"

He paused, then added: "And your brother, too!" Here Ronald groaned.

A step sounded on the stairs. Wilfrid started. "It's coming up."

The figure of Roy Herring hove into view. Perceiving the assemblage in the hallway he stopped, embarrassed.

"It's all right, Herring," said J. Pemberton. "Come right along. We could do with a cool head or two."

"I was walking in the grounds," Roy explained, "and I heard a... It sounded as if someone was being murdered, so I thought I'd investigate. I found a window open."

"Somebody ought to be murdered," growled J. Pemberton, talking in both twins with one glance.

"I don't understand, sir."

J. PEMBERTON dropped his head in his hands. "You and me both, Herring. I don't understand either. The facts are these: I heard a row and came out of my room and this lunatic—he indicated Ronald—charged into me. He complained of hornets in his room. While I was trying to get to the bottom of that, there comes a screech from below and this other imbecile races up here babbling something about a dinosaur moving. I must confess that I'm at a loss to understand it. I think they're both crazy."

"There were hornets in my room," protested Ronald, out of an aura of witch hazel. "The dinosaur did move," said Wilfrid, not to be outdone. J. Pemberton surveyed the group sternly. "Barbara, stop laughing! There's nothing funny." Then, for the first time, he became conscious that the thing in Wilfrid's hand was a banjo. He took a threatening step forward.

"Aha! You're the banjo player," Wilfrid looked sheepish. J. Pemberton nodded.

"I begin to see light," he said. "This fool boy—he addressed the company—"sneaked down into my museum in order to play his infernal instrument. While there he evidently fell asleep and awoke to have an hallucination. It's all perfectly clear."

"I did not have an hallucination," said Wilfrid, with dignity. "That dinosaur tried to get me and I beamed it with this banjo."

"What?" roared J. Pemberton. "You mean to say you hit my dinosaur with that banjo thing?"

J. PEMBERTON GANNING thrust out his arms and cleared a pathway through the assemblage. "You come with me, Herring. We'll see about this. The rest of you stay right where you are. I forbid anybody to move."

Roy followed him, getting a wink out of a violet eye as he went.

"Well, whatever have you boys been doing?" asked Barbara, when Roy and her father had gone.

Ronald groaned. "My head feels awful."

"Wilfrid," demanded Barbara, "what were you doing in the museum? Were you really playing the banjo?"

He nodded and conversation lapsed. Footsteps sounded on the stairs.

"Ah," said Barbara, who was the life of the party, "the troops are coming back."

J. Pemberton Ganning appeared, fairly running. His eyes were shooting fire and his breath came in short jerks. Roy brought up the rear at a discreet distance.

"Here's a pretty business," J. Pemberton leveled an accusing finger at Wilfrid. "You've gone and done it now." He directed his next remarks to the company at large.

"This maniac has been scattering skeletons about my museum and what's more he's put a crack in my dinosaur's jaw with his fool banjo."

"I'm sorry," mumbled Wilfrid. It was clearly an afterthought.

J. Pemberton swung on him in wrath. "Sorry! I should think you would be sorry. Now then, this business is played out. You two boys are leaving this house at the crack of dawn."

Wilfrid simultaneously and then stopped, each disconcerted by the other.

Mrs. Ganning stifled a yawn. "Why, Pemberton, we can't do that. After all, I was at school with their mother."

"I don't give a rap," said J. Pemberton, bending a terrific glare upon her, "if you were at school with their entire family tree. I've said my say and I stick to it. They leave first thing in the morning." He swung on his heel.

"I'm going to bed, you see, and who isn't a blasted fool will do likewise."

THEY sat on the edge of the swimming pool and dangled their feet in the limpid, sun-streaked water.

"Darling," said Roylton Augustus Herring, "in sea-going attire you look even prettier than when dressed for land traffic. And I didn't believe that possible. How about one of those long, devoted, and patient kisses of yours?"

Babs pulled off her bathing cap and shook out her short black hair. "No. Not even a little one until you tell me how you did it."

"It's a long explanation," said Roy, "fraught with scientific references. Won't it keep till later? I'd rather talk about you."

"No, it won't. Shoot."

"Well, keep this in mind. The dinosaur stands on a movable platform. All I had to do was push. And then, well, I put my flashlight in the thing's head. You know how hollow it is. And the effect was swell. Sort of like Dracula."

"But how..."

"Take it easy!" Roy's arm stole around her. "Just get comfortable and I shall tell all. Comfortable now?"

"And that's that," he wound up, some time later. "But I shudder to think what would have happened if anything had gone wrong."

"Shall I tell you?" asked Barbara, rubbing her head against his chin.

"Yes, you little devil. Making me scheme like that."

"Well, I'd have told Ronald and Wilfrid to go and roll hoops."

"You would? Well, why didn't you do it in the first place?" "Oh!" She smiled up at him. "I wanted to make you perform, that's all."

"Perform? What do you think I am, a trained seal?" "Yes, mine. Do you know what seals do, Roy?" "Sure. Chase fish."

"I'm a fish," cried Barbara, and tumbled into the pool. (THE END)

HAPPY BEL FROM PAIN BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging backaches people blame on colds are often caused by tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief waste-excreting organs and when they are not working properly, waste accumulates in the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints of urine daily. Frequent or scanty passages with burning shows there may be wrong with your kidneys or bladder. If the 15 miles of kidney tubes don't work well, poisonous waste accumulates in the blood. Backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of energy, getting up nights, swelling under the eyes, headache and dizziness. They give heavy relief and will 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out waste from the blood. Get Dr. Ross's...

With Our Wildlife

BY JOHN R. WOOD, State Game Warden

A new type of instructive entertainment, sportmen's shows, which have attracted tens of thousands of spectators in eastern cities is invading Texas. Elaborate preparations are being made for the first of these, The Southwest Sportsmen's Show, which will be staged at Amarillo for one week, beginning June 26 and which is expected to attract 30,000 persons.

The show, being staged by the sportsmen of the Panhandle, will present the greatest galaxy of outdoor life of the southwest ever attempted. The Texas Game Department is cooperating in this educational event by providing displays of game animals and by showing its library of color motion pictures of Texas game birds, animals and fish.

Champions in archery, rifle and pistol shooting, crasting, will show their wares daily during the show. A complete aquarium is being built and will be stocked with every game fish known to Texas. Two continuous motion picture shows in air-conditioned theatres will compose part of the entertainment. A lake is being built for casting exhibitions. Champion dogs, including pointers, setters and retrievers, will be displayed. The show offers far more activities than that of any other staged in the United States. Go if you can.

Texas Poultry Is In Greater Demand

AUSTIN, Tex.—Demand for Texas-grown poultry by other states jumped to 74 cars and for Texas-hatched eggs to 89 cars during May, gains of 37 and 154.3 per cent, respectively, over May, 1938, University of Texas business investigators said today.

Reports to the University Bureau of Business Research showed receipts of eggs from out-of-state points totaled sixteen cars, all of which came from Kansas. Last year during May only four cars were brought in, one from Oklahoma and three from Nebraska.
