ESTIMATE ON WARREN WELL 50 BARRELS

Estimated to be good for 50 barrels daily or better, the L. A. Warren, et al, No. 1 Cozart wildcat, shallow strike just west of Scranton, was being completed Saturday after a 10-quart shot between 1,660 and 1,675.

The crew was pulling big pipe late yesterday. Operators said they were unable to make any estimate of the probable production of the well, which opens up a 1,700-foot sand horizon picked up by the Phillips Petroleum company in deep testing a year ago and passed up. The well is about a mile west of Scranton and just over the line in Callahan county.

Saturday after the well was making heads over the derrick top, spraying oil over the countryside while excited Scranton residents, people from nearby communities and all operators watched its performance with exuberance.

At 1,651 feet the well topped a time, the last foot and a half of which was saturated, and at 1,660 went into the oil sand which was drilled to 1,675 feet Friday. It stood a good well in this sand and after the shot the flow was materially increased.

"STOP HITLER MOVE GROWS; GAINS POWERS

LONDON, April 3.—Negotiations for a four-power "stop Hitler" bloc including Great Britain, France, Poland and Rumania, will start here tomorrow, it was understood today, as the result of a British pledge to assist Rumania in event of an attack by Germany.

News of the pledge, which was similar to that given Poland, came as the house of commons assembled for a debate on foreign affairs.

Col. Josef Beck, Polish foreign minister, arrived this afternoon to negotiate with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, the military and political details of the pledge to Poland.

Viorol Tilen, Rumanian minister to London, was due to leave Bucharest today to join in talks with Chamberlain, Halifax, Beck and Andre Corbin, the French ambassador, on the formation of the four-power anti-aggression bloc.

A United Press Paris dispatch reported that Tilen would bring to London an official message from King Carol to Chamberlain, announcing Rumania's acceptance of the British pledge, thus linking Rumania with Britain, France and Poland.

Cancer Is Second In Causes Of Death In State Of Texas

AUSTIN, Texas.—"The fact that cancer ranks second as a cause of death in Texas, that 4370 Texans died of cancer last year and that the death rate has increased 172 per cent in the last fifteen years, makes cancer one of our greatest medical and public health problems," states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"Cancer is not a hopeless, incurable disease. It is not contagious or in itself hereditary. There are thousands of men and women in this country who have been successfully treated for cancer. Yet the death rate continues to rise year after year. The important thing in curing cancer is to discover the disease early and begin treatment during its early stages. Cancer announces itself by symptoms that are frequently painless and apparently trivial, thus giving the disease an unseemly advantage. Early diagnosis is the one powerful antagonist."

Doctor Cox lists cancer danger signals as: any lump in the breast or other part of the body; any persistent sore, particularly on the face or mouth; any unusual discharge or bleeding from any part of the body, such as vomiting of blood, passage of blood from the bowels, or unusual bleeding of any bodily passages, especially after middle-age. These symptoms may be from some other cause but should be diagnosed by a physician.

"Two fundamental rules should be followed in cancer treatment. First, have an annual physical examination by a reputable physician. In this way incipient cancerous conditions can be discovered and by proper treatment the disease can be conquered. The second rule is to steer clear of 'cancer quacks' and 'amazing cures'."

The month of April has been proclaimed Cancer Control Month by Governor W. Lee O'Daniel in a proclamation issued at Austin. The Women's Field Army for the Control of Cancer and the Texas State Department of Health are collaborating in an intensive campaign of education against the disease, the control of which depends above all else on an intelligent and alert public.

One Type of Peaceful War Preparedness

Most war preparation is economic lost motion. It results in unproductive production—that is, the production of things which are of no value in themselves to men, and which are not productive of other valuable things. Guns, bombs, and bayonets are like that.

But the Senate is now embarked on a preparedness program that is less on the unproductive side than almost any other. It is the buying up in advance of certain materials which might be hard or impossible to get in time of war. All are useful in peace as well as in war.

Not only a war in which the United States was involved, but any war, might make it dangerous or impossible to get the things in question. So the buying and stocking of quantities of them might well make it possible to stay out of another war in which the United States was not concerned. For it could then laugh at naval blockades, cornering of markets, or other steps that warring countries might take.

At the rate of $25,000,000 a year, it is now proposed to buy $100,000,000 worth of certain basic materials.

Most of these materials are not produced in the United States, or produced in quantities that do not fill potential war-time demands. They are in general non-perishable. They could be stocked against an emergency without competing in domestic markets.

Purchase of these things will further provide American dollars for countries, most of them in South America, which now find it hard to buy American goods because the United States does not buy enough of their products to provide needed exchange.

Perhaps even greater benefits could come from the plan if the deals for these materials were made in gold. Thus they would not increase the national debt, and surplus gold not needed for monetary coverage would be furnished to countries which desperately need to keep their currencies on some kind of par with our own.

In any event, the plan is one of the more farsighted means of preparedness against any possible emergency. It may well bring benefits both to the United States and to the countries whose products are bought, and if properly engineered might make at least a partial blessing out of part of the curse of the armament burden.

SERIAL STORY 'MRS. DOC' BY TOM HORNER

The characters and situations in this story are wholly fictional. Yesterday Emily's test comes when she helps a sick woman to the hospital. There she meets Alan, who is admiring. But there is no time to talk, since Alan is called to operate.

CHAPTER XXIII LAN turned from her. Emily saw the light of the elevator moving upward as she reached the floor. Not knowing why she did it, but knowing that she wanted to be near him, Emily followed, walking slowly up the stairs. No one stopped her.

No wonder Alan loved this little hospital; so quiet, so peaceful. Like a cathedral. White-clad nurses walked swiftly to and fro, making no sound. No one paid any attention to Emily.

Second floor. Surgical, the sign read. The clean odor of disinfectant and medicines and sterile cleanliness. The sound of a child's laugh. Whispered conversations. Signs on doors—"No visitors."

Third floor. Medical. The faint sound of a dietitian's cart as it rolled along the corridor. How different this was from the bustle of the St. Louis hospitals she had known. The one where Alan had interned, with the loud speaker constantly blaring out the name of some doctor.

Fourth floor. Maternity. So strangely still. The faint sound of a radio. She could see young Billy Bower pacing up and down in front of the glass doors of the sun porch, at the end of the hall. Farrell's old joke of "never having lost a father" came to her mind. It had seemed funny when she had first heard it, but it was so tragically real now. Poor lad, maybe she could help him.

Bower was glad to see her. "How's Angela? The baby?" he asked anxiously. "Angela is all right," Emily reassured him. "You won't have long to wait. Dr. Warren and Dr. Farrell are with her. Just take things easy. Here, have a cigaret."

"Gee, thanks." His hands shook as he held the match. "You think she'll be all right?" "Of course, she will. There's nothing to worry about."

He resumed his pacing, back and forth across the floor. After a while he stopped. "You're sure Angela's all right, Mrs. Doc?" he asked. "Gee if anything happened to her—she— all I've got."

"This annual survey," declares John C. Huntington, Vice-President of Ducks Unlimited, "shows the fourth successive yearly increase since 1934 when wild ducks hit bottom in the worst waterfowl depression in history. But the birds are not out of the woods yet."

"Despite the increase, maintaining and further increasing the birds depends largely upon weather and restoration work in their last remaining most important breeding grounds in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba," Huntington warned. "Drought, drainage and agricultural development have ruined great sections of the Canadian marsh areas for duck production."

"Snowfall from November to March, principal source of moisture during the entire year, has been less than last winter, according to weather reports from 13 out of 23 weather stations in key sections of the provinces."

WASHINGTON LETTER

By ART KRENZ NEA Service Golf Writer PINEHURST, N. C.—Professional golf is very much out of the red. The pros who are now on the final legs of the winter tour are sure of making expenses or better—which is more than many of them can say for seasons past.

No 72-hole tournament was played for less than $5000 this winter. During 1938, P. G. A. members competed for $185,000 in prize money. This didn't include sectional or one-day pro-amateur events. In 1939, tournament officials look for a figure well over $200,000. Compare that with the puny $62,500 handed down in 1937.

The touring pros will have split a meager $115,000 for the winter circuit which started last November and winds up early in April. They will have competed in 21 tournaments averaging close to $5500 per event, which is the highest total ever knocked down for a winter tour.

Not only are the touring professionals competing for larger stakes but their traveling expenses are being cut down by elimination of long jumps. The 21 winter tours were spread over a period of four months, which meant a tournament a week, cutting out long hops.

AVERAGE expense for a winter tour golfer is $1500, but by doubling up, sharing automobile expenses and so on, it can be done for $600 apiece. Biggest expense is neither transportation, food or lodging. The pros claim caddy fees are the biggest expense, amounting to about one-third of the total.

Forty-two professionals have won $250 or better. The top 16 have shared $40,000. With five tournaments to go, Dutch Harrison, star of the winter circuit from Oak Park, Ill., was leading with $4159, followed closely by Dick Metz, Henry Picard, Sam Snead, and Byron Nelson, all over $3500.

"There is more money in professional golf than there is in baseball," claims Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager. "Sam Snead, who set a record for money won in one year, made more in 1938 than did Joe DiMaggio."

Snead cashed checks which totaled $35,000 in his second year of pro golf. "The top-notchers make $10,000 a year or better," Corcoran continues. "Didn't Sam Byrd tear up a $7500 baseball contract with the Yankees to devote his time to golf?"

The upswing in golf also is shown by the increased size of galleries. The New Orleans Open, made free to the public, attracted 32,000 people in four days, setting a winter tournament record when 14,000 were present the final day.

COMPETITORS also have done much to end the depression in golf. One would have to look mighty far for a better-conditioned group of athletes. (Ty Cobb says golf is the best conditioner for any athlete.)

Continuous practice by pros guarantees spectators the best brand of golf possible, whether the pro plays in a $3000 tournament or the richest event in the sport.

Jug McSpaden is a good example of how pros determine to keep improving their game. McSpaden shot an 18-hole score of 59 a few weeks back, yet he spent the remainder of the afternoon on the practice tee.

It is diligent practice that has brought about an epidemic of low-scoring, and low scores draw the gallery. The gallery brings the money and boosts the game's popularity—and that gives you just about the complete cycle.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX NEA Service Staff Writer ALTHOUGH this column urges large quantities of fruits and vegetables, both raw and cooked, in the daily diet, it must not be assumed that meat is not also favored.

Meat is recognized as an excellent source of high quality protein. The nutritive value of any protein depends upon the number and amount of amino-acids present.

The superiority of animal proteins is an accepted fact. Meat proteins have an excellent supplementary value, which means they make up the amino-acid deficiencies of the cereal grain proteins.

There is, of course, some loss of soluble protein from the meat to the drippings. This need not represent loss of food value, however, since drippings ordinarily are used in making gravies and sauces.

Experiments conducted at the University of Missouri showed that drippings from meat which has been braised contained more protein than drippings from roasted meat. A greater degree of "doneness" increased the loss of protein in beef cooked by both methods.

Fat Meats Energy Rich Meat, especially fat meat, such as bacon, is a rich source of energy. The actual caloric value of a serving of meat depends upon the amount of fat it contains and also upon the amount of fat eaten. A piece of meat from which the mechanically separable fat has been removed will be lower in energy value.

For this reason, meat may be fitted into the reducing diet, in which high quality protein is essential but where the caloric value must be decreased. Cooking causes loss of fat, this loss increasing with oven temperature and cooking period.

Iron and phosphorus are the two minerals of which meat is a rich source. The availability of iron in foodstuffs has been the subject of investigation because the measure of the value of any nutrient is the extent to which it is utilized by the body.

Studies on the availability of iron in certain foodstuffs were conducted by Sherman, Elvehjem and Hart at the University of Wisconsin.

Iron Content High These workers found that there is a decided difference in the availability of iron from various foods. The meat products studied, including pork and beef liver, pork and beef heart, and beef muscle, were all higher in available iron than the other foods studied, with the exception of soy beans, which also are a good source of available iron.

This information is based on a recent report by the dieticians of the National Live Stock and Meat Board. It appears to be substantiated by the findings of other nutritionists of high standing.

San Antonio Ball Club Is Unknown Quantity of League

BROWNSVILLE, Texas—There's little honor in the prophet business nowadays, especially in the Texas league, where most baseball teams aren't just baseball teams any more, but primarily adjuncts to the major clubs. It's impossible to speak of the San Antonio Missions, for example, without mentioning their connection with the St. Louis

State of Texas County of Eastland Be it so ordered by the city commission of the City of Eastland, Texas, that an election be held on the 4th day of April, A. D. 1939, at which election there shall be elected three Commissioners to succeed Commissioners C. W. Hoffmann, H. O. Satterwhite, and L. J. Lambert, whose term of office expire on that date; and be it further ordered that the names of all candidates for said office shall be filed with the City Clerk at the City Hall, in the City of Eastland, Texas, not later than five (5) o'clock P. M. on the 27th day of March A. D. 1939. Said Election shall be held at the City Hall in the City of Eastland, Eastland County, Texas, and the following named persons are hereby appointed managers and clerks of said election, to-wit: Presiding Judge, Oscar Wilson. Judge and Clerk, R. B. Braley. Clerk, E. P. Kilborn. Said Election shall be held under the provisions of the special charter of the City of Eastland, Texas, adopted by vote of the people on the 16th day of May A. D. 1919 and under the Constitution and Laws of the State of Texas, and only qualified voters shall be allowed to vote. A copy of this order, signed by the Chairman of the Board of City Commissioners of the City of Eastland, Texas, attested by the Clerk of said City, shall serve as proper notice of said Election. Passed and approved this 27th day of February, 1939. W. W. KELLY, City Secretary. C. W. HOFFMAN, Chairman. Board of Commissioners.

Browns. The Missions simply offer one of the way stations for their trip up to the Big Time, with the Browns, of course, buying the tickets and controlling the itinerary. For that reason, anyone trying to figure out in the spring how the Missions are going to shape up when the season opens is working with unknown quantities.

Here in Brownsville, where the Missions are training, the crop prospects don't look so good this year for the San Antonio farm. The seedlings sent down from Springfield, Ill., Palestine, Texas, Meridian, Miss., and Johnstown, Pa., aren't taking root as vigorously as could be hoped.

Of course there's a nucleus of the old Mission stock outfielder Milton Byrnes, Third Baseman Art Scharen, Catcher Bobby Swift, Utilityman Ralph Rhein, Pitcher Chile Wagener—who can usually be counted on for a winning brand of baseball. Buster Payton is another catcher held over from last year. Art McDougall and Bill Strickland are two pitchers who had about an even break on the winning 1938 Missions. The rest are unknown possibilities, so far as Texas league competition is concerned.

As the Browns left San Antonio a few days ago for a series of games in the Rio Grande Valley, they sent five more young pitchers to the Mission camp, some of whom are expected to make the grade.

Emil Bildilli, left-hander who won 18 games and lost four for Springfield of the Three-Eye league last season, is considered a cinch for the regular lineup, unless the Browns decide they need him after all. The others are Bob Bergen, free agent from the St. Louis high school lots; Johnny Sams and Loy Hanning from Springfield, Ill., and Joe Hare, another free agent.

There are several other young pitchers in camp, of quality similar to the Brown releases. The Mission pitching staff probably will be adequate, although not brilliant.

In practice games, Manager Zach Taylor has met grief in the field. He has tried Charles Stevens from Johnstown, Glenn McQuillan, ex-Brown utility outfielder, and Buck Stanton, Mission veteran, at first. Stanton probably will hold the job.

The shortstop position rests between Bob Neighbors from Palestine, Texas, Red Barkley from Springfield, and Justin Keenoy from Cedar Rapids.

John Lucadello looks like the best bet for second baseman. He was released on option from the Browns, hit .318 last year with Johnstown, when he was only 18 years old. Art Scharen has been tried at other infield spots, but is expected to be the third base standby. But all the combinations tried so far have been pretty leaky. The errors column worries Taylor. Milt Byrnes at center field is pretty well established. Other garden material: Jack Bradshar from Palestine, Glenn McQuillen and John Kosy, also from Palestine, LeRoy Mikus from Johnstown, and Fred Stroble from Springfield. And, of course, whatever the Browns may leave behind.

Payton appears certain to be first string catcher again, with Bobby Swift, another 1938 regular, and Benny Huffman from the Browns trying for the relief spot.

Any time before July, of course, is too early to predict where a team will finish. San Antonio's teams usually look ragged in training, but customarily get into the Shaughnessy playoff. Maybe history is repeating itself.

38 Out Of Every 100 People In Cities Of State Live Off Oil

DALLAS, Texas—Thirty eight out of every 100 persons living in leading Texas cities are dependent upon the oil industry's payrolls for their livelihood, according to a survey recently completed by The Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association. Figures on oil industry employment, obtained from chamber of commerce and other authoritative sources, show that out of a combined total city population of 1,312,000 the number of persons depending upon oil industry payrolls aggregates 492,100, or 38 per cent of the population. Among the larger cities of the State, including Houston, Dallas, San Antonio and Fort Worth, comprising approximately one million population, 385,000 persons obtain their livelihood solely from payrolls of the Texas oil industry and its allied branches. In Houston, 180,000 persons, comprising 51 per cent of the city's population, are dependent upon the oil industry's payrolls. Sixty per cent of the population of both Beaumont and Breckenridge obtain their livelihood from the oil industry. In many cities of East Texas, such as Tyler, Kilgore, Longview and Pendergon, a majority of the population is dependent upon employment afforded by the oil industry. Practically every section of the State shares in the distribution of wealth created by widespread employment in the Texas oil industry and its allied branches. Payrolls of this industry in Texas last year aggregated about 230 million dollars through the employment of 215,000 persons. This means that nearly one million Texas people obtain their income solely through payrolls of the State's petroleum industry and its affiliated branches.

Special Movies To Raise Reading Speed

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—A new motion-picture technique is being used successfully at Harvard Graduate School of Education to speed students' reading ability. In the first eight-week experimental test, 16 freshmen showed skill and some advance in scholastic standing. The subjects increased reading speed 50 per cent, gained in reading accuracy and improved their habits of eye movement. Through the special movies, the spectator's eyes are forced to follow the movements that a skillful reader's eyes would follow. The movie shows successive phrases flashed rapidly across and down the screen in such a way that the spectator's eyes involuntarily are attracted to each word-group as it appears. The technique has been developed by Prof. Walter F. Dearborn, director of Harvard's Psycho-Educational Clinic, and Dr. Irving H. Anderson, education instructor, with the aid of Director James R. Brewster of the Harvard Film Service.

Drug Knocks Its Indian Victims Out After Ceremonies

SALT LAKE CITY—A cactus buds that looks like a dried apricot and tastes like quinine is an integral part of a strange Indian religious ceremony witnessed by a white man on the Uintah-Ouay reservation. James A. Wilson, WPA adult education leader, spent six months among the 300 Indians on the reservation before he was invited to witness the all-night ceremony. Wilson described the ceremony as very religious, in which about 25 Indians usually take part. "Inside a one-room building a crescent-shaped mound of mud had been placed at the front of the room like an altar with the peyote on top. The chief or priest sat near the mound and the Indians formed a square around it," he reported. "The chief began the ritual with a blessing of the cactus bud and then passed a drum down the line of Indians. Each Ute, as the drum reached him, rose and sang four songs. These were interspersed with prayers on behalf of the sick, in which the word 'Jesus' and other Christian references occurred many times. "After each Indian finished his prayers he was given peyote by the chief. Sometimes a tea brewed from the cactus also is passed, corresponding to the Christian communion cup, while the peyote itself represents the bread. "The peyote and gum are passed many times during the ritual and often by morning the entire group is unconscious." Indian agents frown on the use of the powerful drug, but Wilson
