EASTLAND, TEXAS, TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 4, 1939

BILL WOULD CLASSIFY ALL OF PENSIONERS

By United Press
AUSTIN, April 4.—The Texas Senate today passed and sent to the house a bill to divide old age pensioners into two classes and to pay all persons in the same class the same amount.

Sen. Doss Hardin of Waco was the author of the bill. Under its terms the county commissioners courts in each county would have charge of classification of the qualified pensioners. The classes would be arranged according to the accustomed standards of living.

The advocates of the bill admitted that the practical result would be to place negroes generally in a lower class than whites.

The bill has no provision for old age taxes. That phase was to be taken up before adjournment of the senate today by a motion to reconsider yesterday's defeat of a resolution for a constitutional amendment to pay social security by means of sales and natural resource taxes.

A bill to levy a two per cent "luxury" sales tax, exempting food, was introduced by Rep. M. A. Bundy of Wichita Falls, and Lester Clark of Breckenridge. The sponsors estimated that it would raise between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 a year, one-fourth of which would go to the schools and the remainder for old age pensions.

Garner Is Willing to Become a 1940 Candidate Is Belief of Political Writer

By Lyle C. Wilson
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, April 4.—Vice-President John N. Garner is not yet an active candidate for president, but would accept the 1940 democratic nomination, it was believed here today on the basis of well authenticated information.

It is believed that Garner would prefer Postmaster General James A. Farley as his vice presidential running mate. A complication there is that Farley also is a presidential possibility and a rather good one.

Political observers believe a Garner-Farley ticket would be politically sound, barring a left wing new deal rebellion against returning party control to comparatively conservative men. Some new deal brigade commanders probably would bolt such a ticket. The final test of the political strength of such a combination would depend largely on President Roosevelt's attitude.

Mr. Roosevelt might bolt a Garner-Farley nomination. Some persons believe he would convict himself of ingratitude if he did so. It was Farley's spade work and strategy plus Garner's personal release of the California and Texas delegations to Mr. Roosevelt that permitted his first nomination in 1932.

Washington does not know what Mr. Roosevelt intends to do. A thoughtful analysis of his position is that the president today is not a candidate but would be receptive to the nomination if his re-election appeared to be reasonably likely.

Mr. Roosevelt probably would not have to obtain the democratic nomination to prevent a conserva-

Franco's official order decreed the demobilization and demilitarization of the war ministry within three months, starting Wednesday morning.

Italy Is Warned On Albanian Move By Great Britain

LONDON, April 4.—Great Britain today indirectly warned Italy that infringement on the independence of Albania would violate the 1938 friendship agreement between Rome and London.

Coincident with diplomatic reports of Italian military movements, indicating a plan to strengthen the fascist control over Albania, a British spokesman referred to the Italian-British gentlemen's agreement of Jan. 2, 1937, which was reaffirmed in the friendship treaty of last April 16, regarding the Mediterranean states.

THREE KILLED WHEN NAVAL PLANES CRASH

By United Press
EAST BRANTREE, Mass. Apr. 4.—At least three men were killed and another was unaccounted for today when two U. S. Navy airplanes locked wings in midair during the launching of an aircraft carrier Wasp and crashed a mile apart, one of them in flames.

Three bodies were recovered within an hour after the accident, and authorities believed that the wreckage of one plane might hold a fourth victim.

One of the planes swung wide after the collision, crashed through the roof of a dwelling house, then veered into a house across the street and set fire to it. The second plane crashed to earth and was wrecked.

The planes were members of a squadron of six which had taken off from nearby Squantum Naval Reserve Air Base, to fly over the launching. It was almost at the moment when Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the assistant secretary of the navy, smashed a bottle of champagne on the Wasp's prow that the planes collided a quarter of a mile away.

POLAND GIVES STRENGTH TO PEACE MOVE

By United Press
LONDON, April 4.—Poland was reported today to have offered to strengthen Europe's "stop Hitler" bloc by turning the British pledge of military aid into a two-day defensive agreement.

Col. Josef Beck, foreign minister of Poland, was understood to have brought the offer to Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax at their conferences on Great Britain's plans for creating a defensive wall of interlocking alliances around Europe to guard against future Nazi aggression.

At the same time V. V. Tilea, the Rumanian ambassador, returning from Bucharest, with new instructions from King Carol, was expected to clarify Rumania's position in the anti-aggression bloc, which prime minister Neville Chamberlain described as "a peace front" from which Germany has nothing to fear as long as she is "a good neighbor."

Britain already has offered military pledges to Rumania and has invited other European nations, including Russia, into the peace front.

Leaders meanwhile studied defensive and offensive strategy with Guy la Chambre, the French air minister.

Shock Method Is Help In Restoring Balance of Mind

By United Press
LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Terrific insulin shocks which plunge the mental patient into deep coma are giving new promise of life to hundreds of schizophrenics at Arkansas' new state hospital for nervous diseases. Dr. N. T. Hollis, staff psychiatrist at the institution, said at least 50 per cent of the schizophrenics treated with insulin were showing improvement.

Although the insulin treatments are fast becoming standard in most hospitals for mental patients, the Arkansas hospital's new program of experimentation has forged ahead of other similar institutions, according to statements released by its staff.

Schizophrenics—the name means "split-personality"—make up more than 75 per cent of the population of the nation's nervous institutions, Dr. Hollis said. The disease, briefly, totally incapacitates the patient by making him incapable of connected thought.

"For many years," Dr. Hollis explained, "schizophrenics were roughly classified under the general head of 'manic-depressives,' and grouped with other mental patients who exhibited much the same general symptoms.

"Even with the progress of psychiatry which taught us to segregate them and call them 'schizophrenics,' we knew of no way to help them," he said.

"Insulin shock treatments are only a few years old, and operate on the theory that complete relaxation is healing to shattered minds."

Dr. Hollis explained the method of giving insulin treatments. Insulin, formerly used exclusively in the treatment of diabetes, is injected into the muscle of the schizophrenic. The patient immediately is seized with severe convulsions, followed by a deep coma.

At times the coma approaches that of death, Dr. Hollis said. The sufferer's body is so completely relaxed that his mind has time to repair its shattered neural connections, he said.

"Other than that we can give no reason why the coma should air the schizoid," Hollis admitted.

Nearly 4,000 patients are housed in the two units of the Arkansas hospital. The newest unit at Benton is the center of the extensive research program conducted by the hospital staff.

Among new developments at the Benton unit in addition to the insulin treatments are malaria therapy in the treatment of paresis, various types of new occupational therapy, and a complete program of treatment for tubercular mental patients.

Search Widened In Probing Of Armstrong Case

ODESSA, April 4.—Sheriff Webb of Ector county said today Louisiana and Texas officers had been asked to help locate a Mexican woman suspected in the slaying of Buford Armstrong, semipro baseball pitcher, at a tourist cabin here. Armstrong is a former resident of Eastland.

His bullet-pierced body was found in the cabin late Saturday, and Webb and Police Chief Raliff expressed belief the baseball player was slain Friday night. Armstrong, a pitcher with the House of David baseball team, was killed a few hours after a workout with the Odessa semipro club.

The officers said they believed they had established a motive in the slaying, but they would not give details. They questioned several witnesses this morning and turned their hunt for the suspect to Louisiana. She was believed to have hitch-hiked east.

Last trace of the woman, the officers said, was found at Big Spring, Texas, where she checked in at a tourist camp and stayed only an hour. Investigators found five .32 caliber bullets in the woman's week-end bag at a tourist cabin here. A bullet of that caliber was removed from Armstrong's body.

What, Exactly, Is All This to Us?

It is a hard-boiled world. Never within the memory of living men have the nations so completely discarded even the mask of principle to stare forth with the naked face of self-interest.

Self-interest has always governed the policies of nations. That is inevitable. But we had come to hope that bare self-interest, in the sense that the tiger is true to his self-interest when he springs on his helpless prey, had been subjected to at least some civilized restraint.

Never before in history has a bloodless conquest of whole nations been seen. The only reason it is seen now is that all the peoples who bled in the World War are still gun shop. They still remember, and they will not fight again except in defense of vital national interests, their very national lives—and not even then unless there is a chance to win. It is not for us to blame them.

When will Britain fight? She will fight when she is convinced that German advances have reached a point where another step will endanger the empire. But she will not fight for abstract democracy.

When will France fight? She will fight when a demand is made which, if granted, would mean the end of France as a great nation. But she will not fight for abstract democracy.

When will Russia fight? She will fight when an effort is made to take Russian territory whose loss would endanger the Soviet Union. But she will not fight for abstract democracy.

These countries are realistic, as Germany is realistic. They are thinking in terms of stark, ultimate necessities. The United States must learn to think that way, too, and not merely sway with every "crisis psychology." We feel, in terms of morality, but the other countries think, in cold terms of advantage.

The British belatedly cry "Rally to save democracy!" But is it democracy they wish to save, or England?

The French toss even their liberty on the altar of democracy, and cry "See! Can you do less?" But is it democracy they wish to save, or France?

The Russians, recent converts to the battle-cry of democracy, have ardent partisans who would march beside them at the drop of the hat. But is it democracy they wish to save, or the Soviet Union?

Our crusade of 1917-1918 has yielded strange fruit, 20 years afterward. Those who took part in it will think twice, three times, before embarking on another. Even those who do not remember it can see before them the unforeseen results.

Perhaps Europe may in time endanger America's self-interest, her liberties, her opportunity to live in the world in the free manner she loves. When that time comes our self-interest will be affected so plainly that we will recognize it, as European countries recognize theirs.

But we owe it to ourselves to go to war another time only for such imperative reasons of self-interest, and not for a slogan, however exalted.

BRUCE CATTON - - IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON.—The average American is apt to be a bit confused about his country's foreign policy in respect to Europe. He knows vaguely that the administration is "for" the European democracies and "against" European dictatorships. He does not understand just how far that "for" and that "against" may carry him. Nor does he always see just why his government feels obliged to take any stand at all on European problems. Why, he sometimes asks, can't Uncle Sam stay home and tend to his own knitting?

That, as a matter of fact, is what the administration wants to do. The key point of our whole foreign policy is a desire for peace. America wants to be able to develop and perfect its own democracy. But no country can exist in a vacuum.

For out of this desire to stay at peace and improve conditions at home arises the conviction on the part of the administration that America cannot be successful in those efforts if the rest of the world is torn by war or suffers a general deterioration. Democracy can be defined in many different ways; but essentially, it is based on a conviction of the worth and freedom of the individual. Since that is true, democracy can have no accommodation with totalitarianism, which denies the individual's worth and freedom and implies choice from above followed by coercion.

It follows, hence, that democracy is not concerned with either anti-Fascism or anti-Communism as such, but rather with the clear-cut line between democracy, with its glorification of the undefeated individual human spirit, and totalitarianism, with its denial of that spirit's right to a free existence. This does not mean that America wants to regulate any nation's internal affairs. It is no part of our responsibility to suggest the form of government any people should have.

But if a nation's ideals and methods threaten the existence of a world in which other people can live freely, or if they violate the laws of common humanity . . . then we must take a stand. Long before this post-war era, America vigorously protested the brutal and inhuman treatment of human beings wherever it occurred. It protested against the program of Czarist Russia, for instance, and against the Armenian massacres of pre-war Turkey. To protest the mistreatment of racial or other minorities today implies nothing new in American policy.

But the present situation goes beyond that. If a nation adopts a program which includes the doctrine of world subjugation, either by force or by a propaganda attack on our democratic social system, then we must adopt defensive measures. And if a group of nations joins in a policy which has that effect, we must consider whether simple defense of our own institutions may not require us to aid those other nations which, desiring peace as we do, are menaced.

That explains our present course in regard to Europe. It explains why, for instance, the administration is desirous to help the French rebuild their air force, and why it has announced its wish to help the democracies against the dictatorship bloc.

Once again the administration returns to its insistence that permanent peace can come only in a relatively prosperous and stable world, a world in which changes in the international situation come by negotiation and are based on justice and good faith. To get that kind of world, the administration feels that America must work for a freer flow of international commerce, for recognition of the sanctity of treaties and the principle of peaceful settlement of disputes. ## Britain Studies Birth-Death Rate; Offering Bounties

LONDON.—The British government may offer bounties to parents who produce larger and better families as part of a "Britain needs more babies" campaign, the "Sunday Chronicle's" political correspondent reports.

The writer said that the government first will undertake a nationwide propaganda drive, and then will offer financial inducements. He adds that the bounty scheme being considered is on these lines: Family allowances under which married couples will be paid a bounty of 5s. ($1.25) a week for the first child, and 3s. (25 cents) a week for subsequent children.

Increased income tax rebates where family includes children. Increased allowances for the children of unemployed men.

In addition, the government is considering a welfare scheme to help parents in rearing their children in vigorous health.

For the past 12 months experts have been investigating birth rate and death rate figures on behalf of the cabinet, and their report is now nearly complete.

The report will show that there has been a slight increase in the birth rate during the past 18 months—partly attributable to improved industrial conditions—but that there is no sign of the improvement being permanent.

Britain's birth rate, about 15 per 1,000, is now well below one-half of what it was in the closing stages of the last century.

To keep the population stable, statistics reveal that each married couple must produce at least two children to carry on the race, excluding those who die or are

Livestock Revenue Boosted Incomes Of Farms Of State

AUSTIN, Texas—Marked lift in revenue from livestock and livestock products boosted Texas agricultural cash income from February more than a million dollars above February last year, Dr. A. Buechel, University of Texas statistician, said today.

Farm cash income from all sources last month totaled $15,531,000 compared with $14,254,000 during February, 1938, a gain of 9.1 points in the University Bureau of Business Research index.

Compared with the Bureau's index base period, 1928-32, during which the average February income was only $11,511,000, farmers' receipts last month showed an increase of 34.9 per cent.

For the first two months of the current year, farm cash income has totaled $36,330,000, compared with $36,119,000 for the first two months of 1938.

Magnolia Predicts Big Travel Year

"According to reports and present indications," said Fred M. Lege, Jr., Vice President in charge of marketing for the Magnolia Petroleum company, "1939 is going to be one of the greatest travel years this country has ever witnessed."

"This will be particularly true here in the Southwest," continued Mr. Lege, "as we have been informed that all Southwestern pleasure and health resorts are preparing for the biggest season they have ever had."

"Southwestern travel has been increasing every year, due somewhat to Southwesterners realizing the unusual scenic, historic and recreational features offered right here at home."

"This awakening has been helped to a great extent by the large number of tourists from other sections of the country coming to see the sights of the Southwest."

"An additional stimulation to 1939 travel will be interest in the San Francisco and New York World Fairs.

"The Southwest being situated almost midway between these two great expositions will find many people driving through on their way to New York or San Francisco."

"This increased travel should prove a definite boon to Southwestern business, as it is a well known fact that people spend more freely when on pleasure trips than at almost any other time."

"Everyone who drives a car, whether or not they contemplate a summer trip, should have their cars put in safe, summer driving condition."

"Magnolia Dealers are now offering an exclusive service called 'Summerize,' that provides a semi-annual check-up and over-all servicing to protect all vital working parts of a car."

"Costly transmission and differential gears, and other vital working parts of a car need the protection of Summerize Service for safe and economical summer driving, whether it is around town, or completely across the nation."

SERIAL STORY

'MRS. DOC' BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

The characters and situations in this story are wholly fictional.

CHAPTER XXIV WHEN Emily came to, she was lying on a couch on the porch. Farrell had a bottle of evil-smelling something under her nose. She pushed it away, sat up. "There, that's better," Farrell said. "You wait out on us. Take it easy for a bit, you'll be all right."

"I'm all right. Silly of me to faint—I never did before. What's Alan?"

"He's with Mrs. Bower. He'll be here in a minute. . . . I suppose you realize what you've done, Emily?" Farrell asked, seriously.

"Why, no. Did I do something wrong?"

"I'll say you did not. You've just saved that baby's life."

"I? I saved that baby's life?" Emily gaped for some explanation.

"You certainly did. If you hadn't rushed Mrs. Bower to the hospital when you did, Alan would have had to take care of her at home—there wasn't time to get her here, after we got the call. And then, we wouldn't have had oxygen handy. Yes, Emily, you've saved your first baby. I'm proud of you."

"Oh, Dr. Farrell—here I go, crying all over again."

They looked up to see Billy Bower enter the door, strutting, not pacing this time. A strange metamorphosis usually evidenced by young fathers.

"It's a girl, it's a girl," he shouted delightedly at Emily. "I'm awfully glad, too," he added, his face serious. "She'll never have to go through what I've just gone through in the past hour." Farrell's hearty laugh followed the youth down the corridor.

"ALAN said you were leaving for St. Louis." There was a question in Farrell's tone.

"That's what he thought, Doctor. He rushed away. He wouldn't let me explain. I've been trying to tell him, ever since the night the dam broke, that I want to stay here, in Sumner, with him. But he wouldn't listen to me."

"He thought I loved Eric—but I don't. I love Alan, only Alan. I want to stay here—to be 'Mrs. Doc' if he'll let me."

Farrell smiled. "Well, you've a fair start, Emily."

"You'll have to help me, teach me," Emily went on. "You were so right when you told me what my duty was here—I couldn't see it then, but I do now. Please make Alan understand."

"I think he will," Farrell said. "What if he hates me?" The thought terrified her. "I've done enough to make him hate me. What if he doesn't want me any more?"

"I wouldn't spend much time worrying about that," Farrell answered. "You've plenty of other things to keep you busy."

"Other things? What, Dr. Farrell?"

"Well, you have to start taking lessons on what every doctor's wife should know. And you won't learn all that in a day, or two. You have to learn his patients, each one individually, so you'll know when John Jones says 'Send Doc in a hurry,' whether he means it or not. Some people always want the doctor right away, and no delay. Others say 'rush' only when it's actually necessary. You have to know which is which. Oh, there are a thousand things to learn. And then there's the clinic."

"The clinic? What clinic?" Emily asked.

"That's been a dream of Alan's and mine for years now. A free maternity clinic, where women of the poorer class can get care and treatment. Where we can keep a better watch on both mothers and children. Alan was talking about it this morning."

"He never mentioned it to me."

"He probably didn't think you'd be interested. You've been a factor, in a way, of preventing its establishment. Alan knew that if we did start it, it would mean his being away from home even more of the time. It would have to be an after-hours affair, you know, with a lot of work at night."

"Is there anything I can do to help?"

"If you really want to, Emily—and I believe you do, now—you can be most important. Alan and I will have to start it on a shoestring, and there'll be plenty of work for you, making appointments, keeping records, investigating cases. We had planned to hire a professional investigator, but you would be better. People will tell a doctor's wife more than they will an ordinary case investigator."

"It will be a great thing, for mothers, for children, and for Sumner, Emily. And I hope you'll have a big share in its success."

"I didn't think there was much cause to worry about your leaving, once you saw the light," he continued. "I felt it would take some shock, to bring you to your senses. The dam breaking supplied that. And today you've learned more. You've courage and brains, Emily. You've just been a long time learning to use them. You're not a little girl any longer."

He spoke frankly, and to the point. Emily realized, had he said the same things a week ago, she would have been furious. Now, however, she warmed to his plans, welcomed his advice. Things might have been easier had she listened to Farrell before. But he had never talked to her like this—only once before, when he laid down the rules for a doctor's wife.

Farrell was on her side, definitely, and his counsel was important to Alan. Even if Alan were slow to forgive her, for her heart-breaking errors of the past few weeks, if Farrell urged that she forget the whole thing, he would make a greater effort.

Just how was Alan going to take her coming back—although she really had never left, Emily wondered. He had been so cold, so distant ever since that night the dam broke—except for the instant when she kissed him good-bye at the dock. All of his love for her was in that kiss, mute and undenied. And Emily had given all of her heart then too. It was like the kiss on the altar, after their marriage.

"I'll see you downstairs," Farrell was saying. "I'll send Alan right up, soon as he can get away. You rest there for a while."

It might have been only a minute or two—it might have been 10—when she heard the door open again; then Alan's anxious voice—

"Emily, are you all right?" She reached out her arms to him. He was across the room, at her side in an instant. Their lips met, clung together, and in that kiss all the fear, and worry and unhappiness that Emily had ever known left her, never to be remembered. Alan loved her, just as he always had, just as he always would.

"Darling, my darling," was all Emily could say.

At last he knelt on the floor beside the couch, holding her hands, punctuating his sentences with kisses.

"I suppose Farrell told you that the Bower baby is alive because you rushed the mother to the hospital. Wouldn't have had a chance. Angela and Billy know, too. They're so grateful to you. Billy has three women in his life now, his wife, his daughter and you."

Emily laughed. "If you had seen him pacing the floor up here, you would have known how glad he was it was not a boy. Billy's a fine young man, Alan. I want to do more for them, move them out of that hovel, get him a better job. You'll try, won't you?"

"Of course. But Emily, I thought this was just an emergency. You talk as if you intended to stay here." His smile faded, the line of his lips hardened. "What about going to St. Louis? What about Eric?"

Book On Review "Celia," by E. H. Young. One of the newest novels to be added to the shelves of the Eastland Public Library.

Celia Marston, who on the surface was a sedate wife and mother, was still a gay and attractive woman. Miss Riggs, who worked for Celia two mornings a week, knew that her employer preferred a spring day to spring house-cleaning.

Miss Riggs may just have guessed, too, that Celia wore the cloak of a placid provincial lady only as a graceful disguise.

Celia herself knew what the matter was. She felt as though she were still a girl—and she wondered whether her children missed a better love than she gave them—band and his family and hers were not always happy thoughts—and there were times when she cast backward glances at the man she did not marry.

Around the character of this woman is written a full and satisfying novel. E. H. Young is an acute observer of the everyday, an historian of what is often mistaken for the quiet life. Admirers of her novels, "William," and "Miss Mole," may find in this new book a more complete realization of Miss Young's abilities than in any of the earlier books.

The library is open on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday afternoons from 2 o'clock until 5:30.

Winnipeg Is Eager To See Royalty

By United Press

WINNIPEG, Man.—This central Canadian grain center's cosmopolitan population—normally 300,000—expects a heavy influx of American tourists and visitors during the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth late in May.

Tourist and trade bureau officials predict that between 200,000 and 300,000 Americans from central states and Canadians from the prairie provinces will converge on Winnipeg for the eight-hour visit of the royal party.

Preparations are under way for a full week of festivities. The task of feeding, housing and entertaining sightseers has been assigned to a general committee with an appropriation of $25,000.

The week of welcome will begin Saturday, May 20—a public holiday in honor of the king's birthday—and will continue until May 27. The King and Queen will be in Winnipeg for eight hours, Wednesday, May 24.

Sports, pageantry and fireworks will highlight the week. Suggestions for entertainment advanced to date included a military tattoo, horse racing, several balls, fireworks, international football matches and a regatta on the Red river.

Arriving in the city at 11 a. m., on Wednesday, the royal couple will be honored with a reception at the railway station. Twenty minutes later the royal party will leave the station with a mounted escort and proceed to the city hall where another reception will be held.

At 12:05, the party will proceed to the Manitoba legislative buildings and attend a reception given by Lieut.-Gov. Robert Irwin and other provincial cabinet officials. Premier John Bracken will welcome their majesties on the broad steps of the legislative buildings at 12:25 p. m.

Immediately following luncheon at Government House, the royal party will begin a three-hour, 2-mile tour of the city under motorcycle escort. Tiers of seats for spectators will be provided along the proposed route.

Every effort will be made to permit Canadian school children to get excellent views of the King and Queen.

On completing the tour of the city the royal group will proceed to St. Boniface, across the Red river from Winnipeg, and be welcomed there by civic officials.

The party would return to the railway station at 7:00 p. m., and board the royal train for the journey west.

Nurse Marlan Cribbs was awakened in her New York apartment by a self-styled "Robin Hood" of a "burglar" who tweaked her big toe, kissed it and proposed marriage. After managing to get him out of the place, Miss Cribbs arranged his arrest.

Texas' Packing Industry Show A Big Increase

CHICAGO.—The value of the products of Texas' meat packing plants increased from $73,557,416 in 1935 to $97,980,988 in 1937, according to the latest figures of the Census of Manufactures," G. L. Childress, of Houston, Regional Co-Chairman of the Institute of American Meat Packers, announced today.

Mr. Childress' statement continued: "Wages in the meat packing industry in Texas in 1937 were $5,537,627 compared with $4,024,324 in the last previous census year, 1935.

"Texas' meat packing industry paid out, in 1937, $82,560,559 for materials, fuel, power, etc., compared with $61,219,375 paid out in 1935. The major portion of this outlay was for the purchase of live stock.

"In 1937 the meat packing industry of Texas game employment to 4,824 wage earners, compared with 3,857 in 1935.

"About 75 per cent of the value of meat at the plant is paid out by the meat packer for the purchase of live stock. The remaining 25 per cent is used by the meat packer to pay all of the expenses of doing business, such as taxes, rent, wages, depreciation, interest, supplies other than live stock, transportation and delivery, and other similar expenses. The margin of profit earned by the meat packing industry is so small that it has virtually no effect on the price the consumer pays for meat, or the price the producer receives for live stock.

"Cash received for live stock represents one of the farmer's chief sources of income. Over a period of years, the return from meat animals has averaged about one-fourth of the farmer's total cash income.

"In addition to fresh meats of various kinds, hundreds of different types of sausages, ready-to-serve meats, cured meats, and canned meats are made from the farmer's live stock."

U. S. Elk Herd Is Growing Rapidly

By United Press

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK—This park has become the world's largest reservoir of elk for the stocking of zoos, mountain areas, game preserves, private estates, Indian reservations, park and forest areas for exhibition and propagation generally.

Today, elk from the park have been sent to 36 different states, the District of Columbia, Canada and South America.

Since the park first began supplying the rest of the world with elk in 1892, a total of 4,914 have been shipped. In addition to those shipped, 8,691 have been killed by hunters.

A count of the northern herd alone in the park made by 29 observers from the U. S. forest service place the total number still there at 10,976.

Elk shipped to Canada have served to restock many sections where, under their native environment, they are rapidly forming large herds.

In the United States, Montana is the greatest taker of Yellowstone Park elk and has received 1,207 head. Idaho comes next with 675 head, Washington third, with 462; Colorado, 256; Arizona, 258; Virginia, 256; South Dakota, 241; Utah, 177; Pennsylvania, 170; New York, 132.

In the mountain regions of those states, large herds are being built up from these shipments.

Canada has taken 363 elk from the park.

Other counts and estimates of the herds in the park show there are about 2,600 in what is known as the Gallatin herd; and about 652 in smaller, scattered herds.

Hunting during the past season, took about 3,000 head from the northern herd, while live shipments this year will further reduce it by about 285. Another 500 will be lost through death and other causes.

Despite this steady demand on the herd, it still continues to increase to such an extent that it is difficult to find sufficient range and grazing grounds for the animals. Present plans are to purchase additional land north of the park for sufficient winter grazing not only for the elk but also for deer, antelope and mountain sheep which are showing a steady increase.

Unless this additional land can be obtained, it will be necessary to reduce the herd to keep it within the valuable range for feeding purposes.

"A Good Name is rather to be chosen than great riches!" Thus spoke a philosopher who summarized the experience of thousands of years. STILL TRUE TODAY American inventive and business genius have wrought many improvements in our home life, as compared with that of our fathers and grandfathers. But although the mechanical refrigerator is an advance over the cool milk-house . . . the hot-water heater over the old kitchen stove . . . modern life has evolved no improvement over the moral backlog of our fathers. A good name is still more valuable than wealth . . . and it is the only name that will stand the test of advertising.
