SERIAL STORY

DATE WITH DANGER

BY HELEN WORDEN

Yesterday, Clem Shirley goes out with the Duke after drinking. And he is smoking Janice French's cigars.

CHAPTER XIX

DUKE MARTIN was again called to his telephone by a feminine voice, but the tones of this one had a sharp edge and its owner wasn't asking for a date, she was demanding an interview.

"Don't talk, let's give the order to this grant and get rid of him."

With the waiter sent scurrying on his business, Martin again put his question to Mary.

"Leave Clem Shirley alone," Mary answered. "Remember, the Janice French case isn't settled yet."

"I didn't come here to waste my time making fool promises."

"If you don't leave Clem Shirley out of the picture, I'll start Fenelon on this tack," said Mary briefly.

"You've got to stop seeing that girl."

"Your business is writing, isn't it? Ever try short stories?"

"Occasionally."

"Here's one without an end. Perhaps you can finish it." He studied the wine list with faint contempt.

"What a lousy cellar they've got! I didn't run rum for nothing!" He beckoned to the waiter.

"Two pinch bottle Scotch high-balls and let me see the bottle."

PASSING Mary a cigaret from his case and lighting one himself, he leaned back in his chair.

"I can vouch for the truth of this story," he said. "I've always thought it would make a damned good yarn provided it ended the right way."

There was a clever young gal on a paper in a city not far from here who didn't always recognize trouble when she saw it.

Some people have a hunch about danger and some haven't. Now that's why I'm still this side of Sing Sing. I can smell danger."

Mary's lips tightened. "You must have lost your sense of smell. I wouldn't call your position exactly healthy."

"Nor is yours," Martin snapped. "The gal in my story has her choice between living a long and happy life with her pretty boy managing editor. Oh, I'm not so dumb," he said, as an angry flash colored Mary's face.

"Or passing up the wedding bells for a cold, white slab in a morgue just where a girl friend of hers landed, because she couldn't keep her fingers out of other people's business. Which'll it be?"

Mary laughed. "You talk like a dime novel. Drop the comedy. There's only one end to your story. The girl doesn't wind up, led the way to a table for two marked 'Reserved.'"

Martin smiled. "You pull the same racket we do. Keep a couple of choice ones fenced in for special customers."

It was evident that the Duke was not in his best mood.

"Well, what do you want," he asked, as he and Mary sat down. A waiter hovered at his elbow.

Before she could answer, he said sharply, "even if the chairs are covered with silk and the walls with tapestries."

She rose abruptly. "Well at least, Duke, we know where we stand. I've just got time to make Janice French's funeral. Would you like to come along?"

"No, thank you."

"THE people who moved in the Frenches' social sphere were the sort that liked to be in good time for funerals. Although the notice in the papers had said 'Services private,' St. Thomas' was filled when Mary arrived.

A dull, stogy lot, for the most part, she thought. Old Mrs. Ward, Janice's great-aunt, hobbled in ahead of her.

She wore a long black crepe veil over her black Persian lamb coat and she leaned on two canes. Mrs. Ward belonged to Janice's mother's people.

Mr. French, his slight figure looking even more frail in black, was the slightest notice of his wife's aunt. White head he had, he knelt in prayer. Mrs. French was not there.

Directly in front of the pew, resting on a blanket of pink rose buds, stood the delicate pearl gray coffin in which Janice lay. It was closed.

Thinking of Mrs. French, Mary almost forgot that she was there to get the story. With quick eyes she began searching for familiar faces and estimating the number of people present.

In the left side front pews Mary recognized girls who'd come out the year Janice made her debut; Kathleen Hobson, crying gently; Mollie Tate, making a more successful effort to control herself; Bess Marlitt, a sulky expression on her pretty face, fidgeting, obviously uneasy; more at home in the Frenches' Mary had seen her at the Dove several times lately, a spectacular girl with coral lips and boldy black eyebrows.

Behind her sat Egerton Mapleson, across the aisle, his wife. They hadn't lived together in years, but both in a vague distant way were related to the Frenches.

When Egerton wasn't at general, he was at his club. His white mustache moved up and down as he whispered something to Alfred French, a cousin of Janice's.

Mary had not yet finished counting faces when the services began. They were brief; the simple Episcopal burial services, the singing of the choir and it was over.

Later, at the office, in writing of it, Mary found that her story centered on Mr. French.

"Has Janice French's secret been buried with her," she tapped out on the typewriter, "or will it be told? This question was in the agonized eyes of her father today at her funeral. Who is responsible for my daughter's death?"

"The New York Gazette doesn't stay out of any honky tonk," Mary sending him spinning like a billiard ball among the tables. Before the crowd could grasp exactly what had happened, or before Nick could recover, Jack had drained the glass of whisky, hurled it at the head of an advancing and menacing waiter and bolted for the door.

Still running, he bumped hard into Mary Franklin, just as she was stepping into the main entrance.

When he didn't stop to apologize she stared after him. He stood on the curb in front of his automobile, swaying unsteadily as he tried to unlock the car door.

Mary rushed toward him as he stumbled in.

"Jack, she cried, attempting to grab the car door. 'What is the trouble?' He banged the car door shut. Mary was thrown backward on the pavement. His only reply was a screeching of the tires as he swung the car out into the middle of the street and careened wildly off.

QUICKLY picking herself up, Mary shouted at a taxi whirling by. Climbing excitedly in she called to the driver, "Follow that blue coupe."

The taxi man nodded. Jack's car was already turning up Third Avenue.

A shifting of the brakes threw Mary forward as her taxi jerked to a stop.

"Go on," she cried, "can't you see we're already losing track of that blue car?"

But the driver didn't answer. A policeman had thrust a grim face into the front of the taxi. "Where's the fire? Let's see your license."

"You can't stop this cab," Mary spoke sharply. "I'm on the Gazette." She reached in her bag. "Here is my police card."

"Just a minute, sister, just a minute." The officer held up a warning hand. "I ain't got no quarrel with you, but I will have if you keep this up. Show your police card to the commissioner, not me. This bozo was breaking the traffic laws and he's going to get a ticket or worse."

"You fool," cried Mary. "I'm on a story that the commissioner cares a lot about."

"Another word, young lady, and you'll go to the housegown with this guy."

A crowd was gathering, attracted by the argument. The cab driver maintained a discreet silence.

"Here, take this." Desperately Mary flung a five dollar bill at the driver and jumped out of the car.

"That'll cover your fine," she called and started running up Third Avenue looking frantically for another cab.

Bayous Yielding A Vast Fur Crop

By United Press NE WORLEANS--Down in the southern parishes of Louisiana the muskrat paddles quietly through the bitter marsh water, fearing the 'Cajun hunters, but its worst enemy is Dame Fashion. An ugly, rat-like animal in its natural padding ground, its coat is matted with mud and scented with brine. Its habits are slovenly, and on the whole it seems to have no crowning virtues. But it does-- though sometimes under a nondescript name. The muskrat is the main source of Louisiana's annual $2,000,000 harvest of fur. This humid, semi-tropical state is the greatest fur-producing sector of North America. Yearly it produces more skins than the provinces of Canada and the combined territories of the North. Fur dealers thread the narrow bayous to the trappers' country, each carrying several thousands of dollars to buy furs. It is a tradition that no fur buyer has ever been waylaid or robbed of his money. They make the circuit of the trappers' huts, paying cash in every trade. Some trappers never have seen a check, wouldn't know what to do with it if mimeographed instructions were included in the deal. But crisp green notes are universally appreciated. KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste If you have an excess of acid waste in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of poisonous waste. When functional kidney disorder permits poisonous matter to remain in the blood, you don't feel well. This may cause nagging backache, fluctuating pulse, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eye, headaches and dizziness. If you have trouble with frequent or scanty passages with smearing and burning, there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Beryllium—Another International Mystery?

If the average American ever heard the name "beryllium" it is only as a passing vagueness in a half-forgotten high school chemistry course.

Beryllium: a hard, silver-white metal; specific gravity, 1.93; and melting at 2550 degrees F.

That's about all the help the dictionary gives, yet this metal is so important in a world girding for war that secret, E. Phillips Oppenheim-ish conferences between British, French, German and American industrialists have already parceled out its use.

The story told before the Temporary National Economic Committee is a significant one, for it shows how matters of the utmost importance to great peoples are arranged without the average citizen knowing they are going on at all.

Beryllium, a scarce metal, is used in certain alloys considered vital to munitions manufacture.

Back in 1933 one American manufacturer made a cross-licensing patent agreement with Siemens-Halske of Germany, the committee was told. The American company to have the rights in the United States, the German company in Europe.

British representatives came to the American, asserted that beryllium might be the most important metal of the next war, and demanded that this government be modified so that Britain could buy beryllium from the U. S. firm, not wishing to be dependent on Germany for it.

Just how it was done, the American never found out, but the first of this year the contract was modified to permit sales to England under certain conditions. Some sort of pressure had been put on Dr. William Rohn of Siemens, the "mystery man" of the world beryllium situation, to make him open this supply to the British.

The French didn't like dependence on the Germans for beryllium either, and in some equally mysterious way, last year, they also were able to share in the Siemens patents, receiving the rights for France, Switzerland and Belgium. So now the United States firm holds the rights for itself and Britain, France for Switzerland and Belgium, and Siemens for the rest of Europe.

It would be premature to imply that there is anything shady about these remarkable transactions.

But it is interesting to note that a powerful Germany company close to that government was prevailed on to grant rights of this kind to countries not in favor with that government. And to note also that for its war supply of essential beryllium, as well as other metals, Britain now depends on the United States.

Precisely what these things imply, we do not know. But it is clear that they might gravely affect all the people of the United States, and that the TNEC is well-advised to uncover the whole situation.

Strange Times ran third in a Detroit horse race. Can we count on that symbolism?

Vice President Garner was smoked out of his Washington quarters by an inconsiderate ventilation device. As if the political smoking weren't enough.

Lotief Believes Judge Hughes Is Governor Material

Praise for Judge Sarah T. Hughes of Dallas and the suggestion that she would make Texas a great governor are contained in a letter written by Cecil Lotief, Eastland merchant and former floratorial representative, this week to a Fort Worth newspaper.

The letter follows: In this great state of ours, the largest in the Union, we find natural resources as well as great wealth, combined to make it the richest in the Union. I am now thinking about having a woman for governor. We have had several men for governor since this state has been organized, but we have had only one woman governor.

For this reason I wish to suggest the name of one of the most intelligent women in this nation. She is not only making a good record as a district judge, but she has had a good clean record as a member of the Texas Legislature and that good lady is none other than Judge Sarah T. Hughes.

Mrs. Hughes is above the average in Texas politics, not only among her own sex, but among men as well. It has been my happy privilege to serve with her in the 43rd Legislature, which was the greatest Legislature in the history of Texas. She was a real leader among the members she knew what it was all about, and she always stood for the people.

I am calling our good men and women to work and organize in her behalf. If we had had such a governor as Mrs. Hughes the last few years, we wouldn't need to worry about the Legislature, because she has the nerve and courage to hold them down to the constitution, as she has done as district judge in Dallas County.

The present Legislature has sponsored more selfish legislation than any one Legislature in Texas. They even passed a law known as the Barber Law, requiring the barbers to charge 40 cents for a hair-cut, which is wholly unconstitutional. They have also passed a tax redemption bill for Harris County, the richest county in Texas. They gave that county taxes for a period of 10 years which a frog law, making it unlawful to catch any frog, whether male or female, less than four and three-fourths inches in length.

If any citizens desires to go frog hunting, he will be required to take a yard-stick. If we had such a governor as Mrs. Hughes, this kind of law never would be signed. The present Legislature also passed a law to something like $4,000,000. Now, if we had the lady from Dallas for governor, she would have vetoed such a measure without making any apologies to anyone. So, friends, let us work for the good lady from Dallas for governor of Texas. We certainly need someone in the capitol who will not take any dictation from special men and corporations, but will be loyal to the masses of people. Who will be more loyal to the taxpayers than Judge Sarah T. Hughes of Dallas?

one night last week. Shirley Brown and children were in Desdemona Sunday morning.

Mrs. J. L. Brown visited with Mrs. Curtis Melton Sunday night. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Deal and daughter and Miss Ellen Tucker and brother, Claude were in Desdemona for the school program, Thursday night.

We were sorry of the death of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lee's baby. We sympathize with them in their dark hours.

Hawaiian Volcano Expected To Erupt In Near Future

AUSTIN, Texas—Recent dispatches that Kilauea, Hawaiian volcano, is on the verge of eruption were of unusual concern to Dr. F. M. Bullard, University of Texas geologist, preparing to leave Los Angeles, June 8, bound for the fiery mountain.

Using Kilauea for his laboratory—4,000 miles from the University campus—Dr. Bullard will study at the United States volcano observatory which perches on the brink of the most active, yet tamest volcano in the world.

Before leaving Austin Friday, Dr. Bullard expressed hope he would see the volcano in eruption. The University professor of geology, whose microscopic study of igneous (fire-formed) rocks has drawn him to the Hawaiian crater edge, will return to the campus here in September.

The Kilauea observatory is one of three such laboratories in the world. The other two are on Mt. Pelee, Martinique, and Mt. Vesuvius, Italy.

June 11-18 has been designated as Keep-America-Out-of-Foreign-Wars week. Just to be ornery, Hitler and Mussolini will probably be quiet during that period.

Daugherty are Defendants, and said petition alleging that on January 16, 1939, plaintiff lawfully seized and possessed the following described land situated in Eastland County, Texas, to-wit: A part of the Thornton Thatcher Survey and within the City of Eastland, Texas, described as follows: Beginning at the northwest corner of Block -G-2, as shown by the plat of said City, showing a line at the intersection of the East boundary line of Daugherty Street and south boundary line of Sadosa Street; Thence south along the east boundary line of Daugherty Street 239.6 feet to a stake for corner, same being the S. E. corner of State Highway No. 67, and the S. W. corner of Block 14; Thence east along the north boundary line of State Highway No. 67, and the south boundary line of Block 14, 149 feet to a stake for corner, same being the S. E. corner of Block 14; Thence north along the east boundary line of Block 14 a distance of 183.3 feet to a stake for corner, being the N. E. corner of said Block 14; Thence east along south boundary line of Block -G-2 a distance of 180 feet to corner; Thence north 100 feet to stake for corner; Thence south 283.3 feet to a point in the boundary line of Block -H-1 and the north boundary line of State Highway No. 67 to stake for corner; Thence east along south boundary line of Block -H-1 and north boundary line of State Highway No. 67 a distance of 151 feet to stake for corner, same being the S. W. corner of the east 200 feet of Block H-1; Thence N 6° 17' E along the west boundary line of the east 200 feet of Blocks -H-1 and -G-1 a distance of 239.6 feet to a point in the south boundary line of Sadosa Street in the City of Eastland for corner. Thence west along the south boundary line of Sadosa Street 788.1 feet to the place of beginning, containing 37.47 acres more or less.

That on said date defendants entered upon said premises and ejected plaintiff therefrom and unlawfully withheld from him possession thereof to his damage in the sum of $1,000.00.

Wherefore plaintiff prays judgment of the Court that defendants be cited to appear and answer and that plaintiff have judgment for title and possession of above described lands and that he recover his rents, damages and costs of suit, etc. This action is brought as well to try title as for damages.

Herein Fall Not, and have you before said Court, at its forces in next regular term, this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same. Given under my hand and the Seal of said Court, at office in Eastland, Texas, this 6th day of May A. D. 1939.

JNO. E. WHITE, Clerk, 88th District Court, Eastland County. By Sybil Holder, Deputy. June 2-9-16-23-30

Gentlemen, make this experiment in EASE!
We believe HANES Crotch-Guard Knit Shorts to be the most comfortable garment ever created. A lastest hand rests lightly on your waist... moves as you move. The seat is as comfortable as your favorite evening chair. The legs fit snugly without binding. And you are comfortable with the gentle athletic support of the HANES Knit Crotch-Guard—with its convenient, buttonless fly-front. If you have not worn HANES Crotch-Guard Shorts, try them out. The experiment will not flatten your pocketbook as they are only 50¢ each. After wearing them, your judgment will tell you that you have made the underwear discovery of your life.
