How Unworthy a Thing You Make of Me!

Children are not, generally speaking, born with

They gradually acquire them only as they hear their elders voice them, by watching their elders practice them, by deliberate teaching.

This process goes on throughout life. Even mature people do not naturally hate other whole classes of people. Every natural tendency of a life which forces all to be together in the world is toward mutual friendliness, mutual sufferance, mutual tolerance.

But some people, for reasons best known to themselves, go about stirring up hatreds. Quite simple people, who, like the amiable comic character Wash Tubbs, 'ain't mad at nobody," are thus converted into haters. This is an established principle, never better illustrated than during the World War when perfectly ordinary citizens with no particular feeling about Germany or things German were quickly and consciously converted into Hun-haters, and boys from the cornfields who had scarcely heard of Germany were taught to thrust home the bayonet with an angry growl of "Boche!"

All this is happening again today. People angrily demand one's ear, and insist that one should hate this or that IRIS rode down to the hospital nationality, this or that religion, this or that political system. But one's own nature and considence are a better do no good, as the doctor pointed guide than the advice of interested persons especially out. Mr. Whittaker would not guide than the advice of interested persons, especially those who get their living by preaching hate.

those who get their living by preaching hate.

We need to cultivate something of Hamlet's spirit, who, when the two courtiers tried to pump him, grew resentful that they should think him so stupid. Hamlet asked one if the think him so stupid. Hamlet asked one if the think him so stupid. Hamlet asked one if the think him so stupid. Hamlet asked one if the think him so stupid. Hamlet asked one if the think him so stupid. "Why, look you now," rejoined Hamlet bitterly. "How unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play upon me . . . 'Sblood, do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe?"

Such resentment immediately rises in the average American when some pied piper sneaks up and begins to try to play upon him a tune of hatred for some group for whom he has no special or natural dislike. It is insulting. 'Sblood, do they think we are easier to be played on than a lot of tin flutes!

Strong and deep in America is the tradition and feeling of respect for others, though they be different from ourselves in religion, in politics, in blood. Strong and deep in America is the natural toleration and lack of ingrained hatreds that is far from a mark of weakness or indifference, but a tower of strength.

Be yourself, be natural, let the natural American tolerance and respect for others and their beliefs have full play. Turn disdainfully from professional hate-mongers who have the supreme impudence to think that they can play on the American people at will a tune of alien pre-

Special Trade Day Cash Prize By Eastland M erchants Monday, July 3rd, 3 P. M. On Square!

One hundred and sixty-three years of independence . . . One hundred and sixty-three years of a flag proudly waving over a grateful people.

NOT as an insignia of a great nation .. NOT as a pennant of defiance and hate . . . BUT as a symbol if a peoples' and a government's love for freedom, peace and tolerance.

May our great flag continue to wave, ON THESE PRINCIPLES, for countless generations to come.
