Lowdown on Tar and Feather

Holding hands with Austine McDonnell, Warrenton, Va., society girl, Count Igor Cassini, capital society columnist, tells her how he was abducted from country club dance, tarred and feathered.

That reminds me...

Everything is set for the grand and glorious Fourth of July celebration in Eastland and the city officials assisted by the business interests have left nothing undone to give the people from all sections of the country the time of their lives and see that every precaution is made for their safety and entertainment while here.

One of the most interesting events of the occasion that has never been attempted before will be the speed boat races on the Eastland Lake Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Of course there will be girls beautiful in the big bathing review and they will range from tiny tots to adults.

Naturally there will be lots of other things to entertain the folks—for instance there will be both the Connellee and Lyric theatre that will run continuous shows during the two days, Monday and Tuesday.

C. W. Hoffmann who knows his fireworks gives the word that this year will present the most beautiful and varied assortment of aerial and set-up displays.

Frankly there is no occasion for anybody to leave home for their July Fourth entertainment and pleasure. It has all been taken care of here.

Frankly there is no occasion for anybody to leave home for their July Fourth entertainment and pleasure. It has all been taken care of here.

All in all, Eastland offers the most attractive atmosphere for recreation this year that we have ever seen.

ARREST MADE AT SAN DIEGO BY OFFICIALS

Gene Squires, Under Term For Murder, Had Been Sought Since '34.

Criminal District Attorney Earl Conner, Jr., at noon today stated that he will begin steps immediately for the extradition of Gene Squires, 31, of Ranger, Texas parole violator caught at San Diego, Calif.

Capture of Squires at San Diego ended a long search by Eastland county officials for his capture.

Squires, who had evinced a lively interest in the proceedings during the trial, was calm when the jury filed in at the conclusion of the 1933 case.

In the case Squires was charged with having killed Pugh in an altercation which occurred at a dance given in a home. The evidence indicated that Squires struck Pugh with his fist, possibly with knuckles, and then kicked him after Pugh had been thrown to the ground by another man.

Sheriff Loss Woods said that it was his understanding that Squires, alias J. D. Cox, had been working as a carpenter in California.

Squires had been sought since District Attorney Conner and Sheriff Woods were conferring regarding the removal of Squires from California. Squires, said reports, refused to waive extradition.

Progress Is Seen In Freight Rate Fight by W.T.C.C.

"Remarkable progress" is being made by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in its campaign for freight rates adjustment, according to D. A. Bandeen, Abilene manager of the regional organization.

Bandeen was an Eastland visitor Thursday. He said he was in Eastland "to see my old boss." He referred to Millburn McCarty, past president of the WTCC.

The WTCC is conducting a hearing in progress at Austin before the Texas Railroad Commission. Last week, said Bandeen, the WTCC used 31 witnesses and submitted 46 exhibits.

On Thursday, he stated, the railroads were having their attorneys cross examine witnesses. He said that Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins of Eastland, past president of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, was one of the WTCC witnesses.

The WTCC believes that if freight rates are adjusted West Texas can compete more favorably with other industrial parts of the United States.

When Nations Put Their Best Foot Forward

Henry Ford is not an intellectual. The world of books, the realms of abstract thought, are not his world. The confusion he once showed in differentiating between Arnold Bennett and Benedict Arnold, his haziness about the exact dates of the American Revolution, revealed his unfamiliarity with the world of "book learning."

But the Ford mind has an uncanny realism, moments when it cuts through surface show and gets right down to the real thing. Such a moment came recently at the New York World's Fair. Ford surveyed the exhibits, remarked that they could scarcely fail to be an inspiration to young America, and then blurted out:

"Look at the nations represented here. These exhibits, and not their wars, show their real character. They have sent here the things they are really proud of, the things they want to be judged by. They haven't sent their bombs and poison gas and samples of their concentration camps—they're not really proud of those things; they wouldn't want to exhibit them."

Six million people have seen the New York exhibit, but Ford is the first one to cut through to that simple truth: no nation can really be proud of its progress in newer methods of killing more people quicker. The chest-thumping about things like that is restricted to a few officials.

And even those officials, when they plan an exhibit that is to show the world the best about their people, do not send the instruments of destruction on which so much of their energies is now centered.

They send the evidence of their progress in public health, in better houses for the people, in the creation of beautiful things and gracious living. They send the evidence of their progress and social vision, the fruit of science turned to man's good, not his hurt. They send their visions of a better, happier day when man shall really live in peace and dignity in a world made fruitful of life, not death.

Why do they not send their newest tanks, their newest bombers, their newest plans for the shattering of cities and the slaughter of whole populations? Ford has it right: subconsciously they are not proud of these things; it is not for these that they would be known to the rest of the world.

Ford has his faults, as all flesh has them. But to his honor let it always be said "he hated war." And when he faces the Recording Angel, it may be that all his millions of cars will be forgotten and the Angelic Voice will say, "They call your venture with the Oscar II quixotic and foolish, down there below, saying that you failed to get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas. But we have not so recorded it here. We have set down, 'He tried to stop the slaughter once, and thereafter he never ceased to speak out against it.'"

It would be beneficial if every visitor to the World Fair would note what Ford noted—not only the presence of the exhibits which the nations have proudly assembled, but the absence of the things of which they were not proud, of which, perhaps, they were in their secret hearts ashamed.

BRUCE CATTON — IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—As an example of the way the New Deal can keep its right hand from knowing what its left hand is doing, consider the milk situation.

With one hand—the Department of Agriculture—the government is trying to promote price-fixing and end "cut-throat competition" in the milk industry.

With the other—the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice—the government is trying to kill price-fixing and restore competition in the milk industry.

The Supreme Court the other day gave the Department of Agriculture a green light by okaying the federal milk marketing act, which makes legal the very performance which the anti-trust division proceeds against.

Meanwhile, there are pending, in Chicago, anti-trust indictments against a set of milk producers, handlers, labor leaders and health officials for doing just the sort of thing which the milk marketing act calls for.

Just to make the merry chain complete when the milk marketing act was being fought in the Boston courts, the government lawyer assigned to defend it—and thus to defend price-fixing and the ending of competition in milk—was a chap from the anti-trust division who previously had been spending his time assailing price-fixing and the ending of competition in milk.

The basic trouble, of course, is that the business of supplying a big city with its milk is an immensely complicated economic problem.

A surplus of fluid milk in any given area is inevitable. The surplus gets processed—into butter, cream, cheese, or what-not—and brings a lower price than the fluid milk.

One handler will be able to put a greater proportion of the milk he buys from the farmer into the fluid milk market than another handler. At one season of the year, a greater proportion of the area's total production will be sold as fluid milk than at another season.

Consequently, farmers and handlers alike tend to be at the mercy of unpredictable and often inequitable price shifts. What the milk marketing act does, in effect, is permit them to get together with the secretary of agriculture, work out basic prices for both fluid and processed milk, and then guarantee that all producers in that area will get those prices.

Thus, the farmer benefits through a fixed minimum price. The handler benefits through a stable market in which free competition for milk has been eliminated.

But those two things—fixed minimum prices and the elimination of competition—were precisely the goals which the Chicago people were striving for and which the anti-trust division took them into court for. Says the anti-trust division, in brief:

"Fixing things for the producer and the distributor is all very well—but how about the consumer? Who protects him? The tendency of these agreements is to raise the retail price. Consumer prices in Chicago fell about two cents a quart after we started our action there."

Broadly speaking, there are two ways to try to restore prosperity to an industry—by maintaining a stable, relatively high price level, or by driving prices down and looking for improvement through increased demand.

The New Deal is trying both ways. Just to make the experiment interesting, it is trying them both in the same industry.

Film Footage Is Nearly Equal To Royalty's Trip

By United Press

OTTAWA, Ont.— There were 80,000 feet of motion picture film taken of King George and Queen Elizabeth on their recent 11,000-mile tour of Canada and the United States.

The pictures were made by a pool of motion picture and news reel photographers under the direction of the head of the government motion picture bureau here.

The Dominion government to which no proposition has yet been submitted, is expected to authorize the welding together of all the pictures. Many suggestions that this be done for exhibitions all over the country, are being received. This would permit the masses in one city, to have a picture of what went on elsewhere— in Canada and the United States.

Likewise thousands who were unable to go any place on the tour can envision the celebration from the comfort of theaters or local community centers.

Patrons will get their money's worth. It is estimated that four hours, at least, will be required for the whole exhibition. Many of the pictures are in color.

000 suits! Probably two-thirds of the lads sold me their suits to finance a date or dance.

"Counting the girls, that's 200,000 people I've brought together."

Mintz said he finds it necessary to make good appearance when plying the collegiate trade. He drives a big, new motor car.

"I have to dress well, too," he said. "This suit I'm wearing used to belong to one of the best-dressed men on the Yale campus."

Students at Oberlin always are eager to ask Mintz what the students at other colleges and universities are wearing.

"This year," he said, "college men throughout the country are dressing about the same. Checks are much in favor—including those from home. Bow ties are worn almost everywhere in the nation."

Mintz has come to Oberlin so many times the students recognize him immediately and the word goes around that collegiate assets again are liquid.

Before he began purchasing second-hand clothing from students, Mintz owned a clothing store in Lorain, O.

"This is much better," he said. "I like to travel around the country and meet the college boys. It's an education—in fact, a revelation."

Mintz complimented students here on their honesty.

"Not once," he chuckled, "have I had a fellow sell me his roommate's clothes!"

COUNCIL INDEPENDENCE DAY CO-CHAIRMEN

GEORGE GORDON BATTLE WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE W. WARREN BARBOUR

By Guy Emery Shipley Editor of The Churchman Throughout the United States the leaders of the churches are slowly awakening to the threat they face in the hatred and intolerance represented by totalitarian aggression. Neither hatred nor intolerance can be confined within groups of territorial boundaries. They spread, their presence often unseen and unsuspected, until the infection has gone far toward the destruction of truth, beauty and goodness. Whatever protection the Atlantic Ocean may offer against invasion by military forces, it offers no protection whatsoever against the invasion of this deadly menace on which war, with the probable collapse of civilization, ultimately feeds.

It is surprising that Christians in this country have, until recently, failed to recognize that the principles for which they stand are being insidiously undermined by totalitarian propaganda. Their sense of security is doubtless due to their long-established conviction that no political force would attempt to destroy them. A similar conviction was held in Germany, yet today the great German Christian leader, Martin Niemöller and many of his fellow-pastors, languish in prison camps, while church activities are consistently and relentlessly curtailed.

No one can comprehend the danger which faces the churches of the United States until he stops not only to note what is happening in Germany, but the extent to which the philosophy of Nazism is spreading in this country. Nor can he understand why this is happening until he recognizes the contradiction which is inherent in the opposing philosophies of Christianity and Nazism.

Hitler is operating on the basis of a fusion of two philosophies which are complementary (1) the philosophy of "race, blood, and soil" and (2) Nietzsche's philoso-

PROSECUTIONS ROCK POLITICS IN NORTHWEST

SEATTLE, Wash.—A grand jury investigation into state affairs, resulting in the indictment of one prominent state official, indicates an upheaval in 1940 election campaign plans.

Democratic leaders in this stronghold of New Deal Democracy foresee a quick shift of tactics to offset the indictment of E. Pat Kelly on charges of misappropriating $500,000 in state funds as director of the bureau of labor and industries.

Kelly, a high-ranking Democrat, resigned after the grand jury at Olympia returned the indictment.

His indictment, however, was only the most prominent event of a statewide series of charges against public officers that have been filed on five different fronts. Until the last few weeks, it appeared that Washington, as in 1932 and 1936, was slated to remain in the Democratic column. Virtually every important post in state administration was filled by a Democrat, although the aggressive left-wing element had expressed dissatisfaction with Gov. Clarence D. Martin, regarded as conservative.

Indicted with Kelly was former state patrol chief William Cole, on charges of misuse of state property.

More significant, however, was a report which condemned "irregular" practices by all state departments in private use of state property.

It was considered by Republicans a major "break" in their campaign plans, which have already begun to take form. Many of them thought the grand jury report would be a major factor.

The grand jury session also brought into the public interest a new figure—that of Prosecuting Attorney Smith Troy, who since 1934 has amassed an imposing record of convictions as Thurston county attorney.

Convicted Dr. Berry
Troy, who was graduated from the University of Washington in 1930, obtained a conviction of Dr. Kent W. Berry and his three accomplices in the "torture-abduction" of Irving Baker. Other convictions by Troy included Dorothy Bardon, Olympia butcher - knife murderer and Maurice Larius, first man to suffer the consequences of the 1933 kidnaping law.

Ranking next to the Olympia grand jury session were the tang-

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—For just about the first time since the government started spattering big concrete dams all over the far west, some real price-cutting competition has developed in the cement industry. As a result, the government stands to save better than $1,500,000 in the building of Shasta Dam, in California, and looks forward to similar savings on other jobs.

The immediate reason for the competition is the fact that Henry J. Kaiser is going into the cement-making business. Kaiser heads a big west coast construction company bearing his name; he helped organize and for a time was president of Six Companies, the construction firm which built Boulder Dam. But up to now he has been a user of cement, not a maker of it.

His appearance on the scene has broken up a picture which has been drawing periodic protests from Secretary of the Interior Ickes for years. Three years ago Ickes appeared before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to complain that he was getting a vast number of identical or practically identical bids for building materials, citing cement in particular, and remarking that "I haven't any doubt but that this practice has cost the people millions of dollars."

Hence Ickes and his Bureau of Reclamation are elated over the fact that Comptroller General Fred H. Brown has given approval to the award of the Shasta Dam cement contract to Kaiser's company, which underbid the other companies by more than $1,500,000.

Shasta Dam is a unit in the huge $170,000,000 Central Valley Project on the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers in California. It will take 5,800,000 barrels of cement to build the dam. Kaiser's company, Permanente Corporation, offered a net delivered price for this quantity of cement of $11,025,892.80.

But the six losing companies protested. They argued that Permanente is not a qualified bidder, since it was neither a dealer in cement nor a manufacturer of cement when the bids were made.

Brown has now ruled that his office will not question the award, and the green light is on.

A gap of a million and a half unprecedented, as far as the Bureau of Reclamation is concerned. Officials there are delighted; they point out, too, that they will be buying much more cement for west coast dams in the near future.

THE recent fracas between Lieut. Col. Brehon Somervell, WPA administrator for New York, and a Workers' Alliance grievance committee chairman, does not mean that capital gossip concerning an impending break between WPA management and the Alliance is correct. It does, however, highlight one of WPA's worst headaches.

Somervell went to the mat with the Workers' Alliance and the Teachers' Union after an Alliance grievance committee chairman had threatened a WPA official's secretary over the phone and a Union official had written a letter demanding that all WPA project supervisors give "excellent" ratings to everyone under them.

When Somervell announced that any further communications from the Alliance official would be disregarded, gossip here began to have it that the administration was going to cold-shoulder the Alliance henceforth on the ground that its leftist tendencies would be a heavy liability in the 1940 campaign.

That gossip is wrong. Official WPA attitude is that any organization representing any employees may negotiate for them; Workers' Alliance is still in good standing, and no change is contemplated.

Electric Voting Is Sometimes Untrue Legislators Find

AUSTIN, Tex.—Breakdowns in the House of Representatives electric tabulating machine at two or three critical times during the recent session of the legislature resulted in a grant of authority to Rep. Lon E. Alsop of Carthage, chairman of the contingent expense committee, to "repair or replace" the present voting machine. Inaccuracy of the machine's tabulations resulted in a short-lived victory for opponents of the so-called "fair trade" merchandising bill. They had delayed a vote on the measure for three days at a morning session, then discovered in the afternoon that the result on a previous vote was incorrect. The House then backed up, refused to postpone the bill and sent it to the governor by concurring in Senate amendments.
