Rotarians Hear Program On Organ Donations

"Talk to your family, now is the time to make the decision, not in the emergency room," said Sylva Zella, in speaking to the Rotary Club on organ donation, Tuesday.

Ms. Zella works with LifeGift Donation Center of West Texas.

"All hospitals are affiliated with LifeGift Organ Donations Center. We have 69 counties and 55 hospitals certified with Medicare. We cover 68,000 miles. West Texas averages 15-20 organ donors a year and last year we had 21.

"A donor must be declared brain dead, and there are approximately 50 people a year declared brain dead. If each of these donated organs we wouldn't have the waiting list that we have now.

"Presently 31,000 people in the U.S. need transplants. Each family has the right to make a decision on organ donation. At the time of death, the family must be asked about organ donations, if the individual meets the criteria," Ms. Zella continued.

Basically, anyone who expresses the desire to donate is a potential donor, but the individuals immediate family must consent to the donation.

"In order to become an organ donor all you have to do is sign your driver's license or a donor card, and talk to your family," Ms. Zella continued.

She stressed the importance of talking to your family and letting your wishes be known. "Now is the time to make the decision. In some states, donations is also included in Living Wills.

Donors are qualified based on strict medical guidelines. Testing and medical histories are used to determine suitability. Medical conditions such as some cancers and hepatitis eliminate all chance of donation. In some cases the age of the donor may also be a factor. After consent has been given, the donation is performed by physicians from the transplant program and/or skilled procurement professionals.

Donation is a surgical procedure that takes place under operating room conditions. Donation of tissue and organs is accomplished in a timely manner, usually within a few hours.

Selection of transplant recipients is based on strict standards including medical criteria and need. Tissue transplant programs, tissue banks and donor service agencies are linked within the state and nationally.

Only organs which must be transplanted within hours of donation, most tissues are preserved for later use.

Tissues are thoroughly tested and treated, stored in facilities called "banks" and supplied to transplant physicians on a need basis.

According to LifeGift Organ Donation Center, when an organ is donated recipients are determined by guidelines established by the United Network for Organ Sharing, a non-profit federal agency. When an organ is donated in West Texas, this gift is always offered first to patients waiting at West Texas transplant centers.

Ms. Zella stated that University Medical Center in Lubbock does liver and kidney transplants and Methodist Hospital does heart transplants.

"The gift of an organ or tissue donation can be a gift of life for someone else."

David Tipps, president, called the Rotary Club meeting to order at noon Tuesday and Terry Hutto, song leader, led the group in singing "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and "Smile, Sing A Song." Gary Montgomery gave the invocation.

Visitors which included two Rotarians from Clovis, N.M., Rotary Anns, sons and daughters of the Rotarians, Gage Angeley, Andy Wilson, Brooke Sinclair and Donna Puckett

Farmers Home Administration Speeds Farm Loans

"Farmers in the State of Texas will get expedited service from the Farmer's Home Administration", stated George Ellis, new State Director of the Texas Farmers Home Administration (FmHA). In his first week on the job, Ellis declared an all out effort to act on every Farmers Program loan application, throughout the State of Texas. "I expect the backing to be cleared by the County and District offices by this Friday," Ellis said. Any assistance needed by a County or District office will be provided by other district offices, and by the State Office in Temple. This effort will affect all farm loan applicants who have already submitted a completed application. Any problem applications which are not acted upon by the June fourth deadline will be completed by June 15, 1993. The Texas Agricultural Loan Mediation Program at Texas Tech University has volunteered its expert staff to help clean up problem applications.

Ellis said that he is implementing USDA Secretary Mike Espy's dedication to quality customer service. Control Bagworms Now Bagworms are one of the major pests of junipers and other trees and shrubs in Texas. Spring hatch began early in May on the South Plains this year. Hatching is usually completed in about three weeks. Insecticide control is most effective in late May and early June when the bagworms are small, says County Extension Agent, Curtis Preston.

In the spring, bagworm larvae emerge from hatching eggs inside summer months, building their bags until the bags are about 1 1/2 inches long. Bagworms add, in the fall, the bagworms become adults, mate and females lay eggs inside their bags. They then overwinter in these bags in the egg stage on trees and shrubs. Each overwintering female bag on a tree contains from 500 to 1500 eggs.

"Since the bagworm only completes one generation a year and spreads very slowly from plant to plant, picking the bags off infested plants in the winter will help a lot toward controlling this pest," says Preston. "But if bagworms were present on plants last year and control measures were not applied, chances are very good that an insecticide will be needed this spring."

Insecticides which can be used to control bagworms include sevin, dursban, diazinon, malathion, and orthene. The biological insecticide Bacillus thuringiensis can also be used. To obtain effective control,

Travelling With The Texas
Angler
by Keith R. Warren

Occasionally I would look at the beautiful scenery around me and think, "this place looks just like a lake located in the Ozark Mountains of Arkansas and Missouri." The crystal clear water and rocky shoals shoreline would often stretch for miles without any development. Then housing developments would appear with floating boat docks by the hundreds.

Tied to those movable docks are some very expensive pleasure boats and lots of jet skis. The one thing I didn't see was any sign of a fishing boat or a fisherman. The place is Travis Lake located west of Austin. The Mansfield Dam on the Colorado River forms this huge hill country reservoir. In areas the lake is several miles wide but it runs for over 40 miles as the old river twists and turns upstream to Lake Marble Falls.

My fishing partners for this trip were representatives from The Chrysler Corporation. About a dozen executives met at Lakeway Resort on Lake Travis for a retreat. Most of them enjoy golfing more than fishing. The weather was horrible for fishing according to these guys. That means it wasn't good for golfing either. Thunderstorms, high winds and cool temperatures were predicted.

Boy was I happy, the weather was just what I had ordered. It wasn't too nice of a day for fishing, but it was great weather if a fellow wants to catch fish, especially in gin clear water.

At daylight I met my first partner, or should I say volunteer. His name was Dan Wright from Houston, Texas. He told me that the other guy that was supposed to go wasn't so excited about the idea, so it would be just the 2 of us until noon, then I'd pick up another 2 volunteers.

As Dan slipped into a rainsuit (over his camouflage outfit) he told me that he fished quite often and was excited to go along no matter what the weather was like. We started fishing rocky points in Bee Creek and Dan caught the first four fish. The first two were nice keepers. For a moment we joked that maybe we ought to trade jobs, he was beating me like a drum.

We moved to the back of Cypress

Creek and located hundreds of submerged willow trees and off colored water. Approaching the area we knew the fish would be there, it just looked too good. I changed to a spinner bait and caught several fish right away while Dan caught fewer and fewer on the top water the further we got back in the creek. In clear water the fish preferred the top water, there was no doubt. Specifically, we used the new Blooper by Arbogast. It's a wood popper with treble hooks and bulging eyes.

It was time to drop Dan off and get the next 2 guys. We caught about a dozen fish in the morning. There were five or six that were legal keepers, although we released them all.

The rain had quit and I ran Phil Kenningham and Snowden Nantz back into Cypress Creek. Both Phil and Snowden are avid golfers with very low handicaps. Neither had much experience freshwater fishing.

The water was clearing now and the fish were active. Snowden had 4 good top water strikes, but no hookups. Phil caught three undersized fish on a Rattle Trap. I went to the Blooper and caught about a half dozen including a chunky two pounder, which was the catch of the day.

We called it quits several hours later. Maybe the catching wasn't as good as we'd have liked, but there's no doubt Lake Travis has a tremendous population of fish. The problem is most of them are small, but for action, this is the place.

Americans Participate In Wildlife-Related Recreation

Hunting, fishing, and birdwatching continue to rank among America's favorite pastimes, according to a survey by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The 1991 National Survey of Fishing, Hunting, and Wildlife-Associated Recreation reveals that more than 108 million Americans 16 years of age and older participated in some recreational activity involving fish and wildlife, pumping $59 billion into the national economy through the purchase of equipment, travel, lodging, and other goods and services.

"Enjoying our natural resources is an important part of America's heritage," said Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt. "It's a great way to be refreshed and renewed, and it's the gateway to the conservation experience. But there are economic benefits as well. The $59 billion Americans spent on wildlife-related recreation in 1991 represents almost one percent of the nation's economic activity and helps create thousands of jobs."

Forty million Americans age 16 and older either hunted or fished during 1991, while 76.1 million enjoyed nonconsumptive activities such as feeding, observing, or photographing wildlife.

Overall, 35.6 million people age 16 and older spent an average of 14 days fishing in 1991, while 14.1 million people spent an average of 17 days hunting.

Anglers spent $24 billion, or an average of $674 each, and hunters spent $12 billion, or $851 each, on their sport. Another $5 billion in spending by hunters and anglers could not be attributed solely to one or the other sport.

Among anglers, 31 million people age 16 and older fished in freshwater and 8.9 million in saltwater. Anglers spent $11.8 billion in trip-related costs, including $5 billion on food and lodging and $2.8 billion on transportation. In addition, they spent $9.4 billion on equipment.

Among hunters, 10.7 million people age 16 and older hunted big game, 7.6 million hunted small game, and 3 million hunted migratory birds. Hunters spent $3.4 billion on trip-related costs, including $1.8 billion on food and lodging and $1.3 billion on transportation. They purchased $5.2 billion in equipment during 1991.

Americans age 16 and older spent $18 billion to pursue nonconsumptive wildlife-related recreation in 1991. This included $7.5 billion for trip-related expenses, including $4.4 billion for food and lodging and $2.6 billion for transportation. More than half of their expenditures, $9.6 billion, were for equipment.

Thirty million people age 16 and older took trips away from home for nonconsumptive wildlife-related recreation while 73.9 million enjoyed wildlife around their homes.

The U.S. Bureau of Census interviewed 128,000 households in the United States to determine participants in wildlife-associated activities. From this initial phase, 68,000 individuals were selected to be interviewed by telephone three times at four-month intervals during 1991.

The results of the 1991 survey are not directly comparable to the results of past surveys because the methodology was changed to improve accuracy.

In the past, respondents were asked at the end of a 12 month period to recall their participation and expenditures related to fishing, hunting, and wildlife-related recreation for the previous year. But research in recent years has revealed that people tend to overstate their participation and expenditures when asked to recall over such a long period.

As a result, the Service asked the Census Bureau to change the methodology of the 1991 survey so respondents were contacted every four months. The 1991 survey, therefore, far more accurately represents actual participation and expenditures than previous surveys.

To determine trends in wildlife-related recreation, however, the Service was able to compare the data from the initial screening phase of the 1991 survey with that of past surveys because the methodology was not changed for that portion of the survey.

According to these trends, the number of anglers 6 years and older rose 10 percent from 1985 to 1990. The number of people hunting remained constant during that period.

The number of people 6 years and older who enjoyed wildlife observation, feeding, and photography on trips away from home increased by 9 percent from 1985 to 1990. However, the number of people enjoying these activities close to home decreased by 5 percent.

Copies of the 1991 National Survey of Fishing, Hunting, and Wildlife-Associated Recreation are available from the Publications Unit, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Mail Stop 130, Webb Building, 4401 North Fairfax Drive, Arlington, Virginia 22203. The telephone number is (703) 358-1711.

"Goose Pimples" Sign Of Heat Exhaustion

"Goose Pimples" may be associated with winter weather, but they can be an early indicator of heat illness among summer athletes.

"They are one of the early signs of severe heat exhaustion--a dangerous problem during the hot months when athletes may not take necessary precautions," warns Dr. Albert C. Hergenroeder, head of adolescent and sports medicine at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Other signals to be aware of while exercising during the coming summer months are headaches, unsteadiness or dizziness, nausea, muscle spasms, cramps or fatigue, and excessive sweating.

"If athletes experience any of these, they should stop, rest and drink water. If in competition, a trainer or physician should be notified," said Hergenroeder.

Taking such actions are crucial since the effects of competing in hot weather are cumulative, says Hergenroeder. Athletes are more likely to develop heat illness on the second or third day of competition or practice, if precautions are not taken.

If left unchecked, heat illness can lead to dry skin, rising body temperature, physical exhaustion, and unconsciousness.

"These are the late signs and at this stage, the athlete is in extreme danger," said Hergenroeder. "A doctor should be consulted immediately and emergency measures begun since heat illness can be fatal if not treated."

Hergenroeder advises preventative measures for people who pursue outdoor physical activity of any kind during hot and/or humid weather:

* Stay in the shade as much as possible. If jogging, choose tree-covered trails or streets.

* Drink a minimum of one ad a half cups of fluids every half hour, even if not thirsty. Water is recommended. Avoid diuretics and caffeine drinks like sodas and coffee.

* Drink a minimum of one and one half cups of water about 20 to 30 minutes before physical activity.

* Cold water is best since it is absorbed faster.

* Do not take salt tablets. They are unnecessary and may be dangerous.

* Sports drinks may be nearly 5% glucose, which can reduce their effectiveness in replacing lost fluids. Dilute such drinks to one part per two parts water.

* Do not exercise or compete in hot weather if you are sick, running a temperature, or feeling overly tired.

* If possible, exercise in the mornings or evenings, when it is cooler.

"Above all, exercise should not be about torture," said Hergenroeder.

It's okay to occasionally forego exercise if the weather is particularly brutal."

Amy Pacheco

United States National Award Winner

The United States Achievement Academy announced today that Amy Pacheco has been named a United States National Award winner in Cheerleading.

This award is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. In fact, the Academy recognizes less than 10% of all American high school students.

Amy Pacheco, who attends Muleshoe High School was nominated for this National Award by Stephanie Barrett, a cheerleader coach at the school.

Amy will appear in the United States Achievement Academy official yearbook, published nationally.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in America's history. Certainly United States Achievement award winners should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Executive Director of the United States Achievement Academy.

The Academy selects USAA winners upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors or other school sponsors and upon the Standards of Selection set fourth by the Academy. The criteria for selection are a student's academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation to learn and improve, citizenship, attitude and cooperative spirit, dependability, and recommendation from a teacher or director.

Amy Pacheco is the daughter of Louie and Aida Pacheco. The grandparents are Domingo and Lola Garcia of University Park, Illinois and Beny and Lola Pacheco of Muleshoe, TX.

Kids Suffer Summer Blues

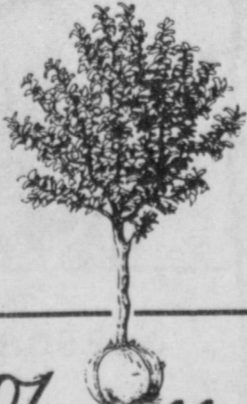

Summer can be an uneasy time for children of divorced and remarried parents and for the parents themselves.

"Many of the problems of visiting non-residential parents depend on the ages of the children and on whether this is only the first or second such visit," said Dr. James H. Bray, a psychologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Pre-schoolers in particular feel insecure, wondering how they will be cared for and when they will return home.

"The custodial parent should prepare the children for the visit," Bray said. "Simple, factual information can lessen the chance they will concoct negative versions of what is going on."

In Fashion

Designers have created stylish swimwear for women sizes 16 and up. The difference between swimsuits designed for smaller women and larger women is that proportions accommodate and flatter the larger figure.

Two-piece suits, blouses tops, and fitted tops have sturdier elastic, tummy and hip panels and more spandex than smaller sizes. Darker shades are slenderizing, although some styles feature the same prints and colors as the smaller suits.

Women Artists Of Texas 1850-1950

In 1936, one of the greatest exhibitions of contemporary Texas art ever assembled was an inaugural part of the Texas Centennial Exposition. Works by the most important artists working in Texas were exhibited at the Exposition; over 60 percent of the works in the Texas Section were by women.

Historians acknowledge women's lead in establishing art communities in Texas. Theoretically, while men were occupied with settling the state and forging its economic foundations, cultural pursuits were left to women. Groups of women (professionally trained artists among them) organized art-related activities in all parts of the state, often on the heels of settlement.

These sophisticated art patrons created exhibitions with works borrowed from collections outside Texas and soon sponsored exhibitions of "native" Texas artists, most of whom were women.

Trained artists were rare in Texas before 1900. However, by the least 1900 the majority of Texas artists (both male and female) were trained. Women dominated the major annual Texas exhibitions at Dallas, Ft. Worth, Houston, and San Antonio, and were the driving forces in other parts of the state.

The importance of women artists to Texas art history should have been assured by their strong showing at the Texas Centennial Exposition. Yet, today only a handful of Texas women artists have been recognized as significant...most have been forgotten.

In an effort to increase the level of awareness of the contributions of women artists, the Museum is organizing an exhibition, "Women Artists of Texas, 1850-1950", to be shown from June 11 through August 22, 1993, in the temporary exhibitions gallery. The exhibition is a survey of some of the most important artists who worked in Texas and includes some 110 pieces.

Using the PPHM's significant collection of works by Texas women artists as a foundation, the Museum has borrowed numerous works from both public and private collections. This exhibition is of special significance, since it is the first comprehensive exhibition on women artists of Texas of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Exhibition funded by Panhandle-Plains Historical Society; The Sumerlee Foundation, Dallas; Bill and Mary Check, Dallas; United Pawn, Fort Worth and Denton; and the Dozier Foundation, Dallas.

Some Of The Best Recovery Rooms Aren't Located In Any Hospital.

Simply put, there's no place like home. And increasingly, health care professionals are recognizing the unique advantages afforded by home health care.

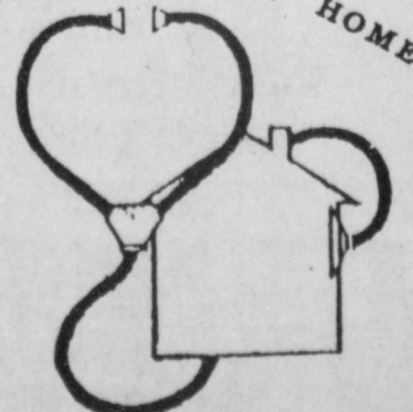

In-home covered services include everything from Nursing and Physical Therapy to Medical Social Services, offering the best in both worlds. The comfort, convenience and familiarity of a home setting are irreplaceable in the recovery process. At the same time, these experienced professionals can provide a range of medical services which were previously restricted to a clinical setting. Best of all, a typical home health visit costs one-tenth the price of an average day in the hospital, making it an invaluable asset.

The addition of a small amount of liquid soap or surfactant to the spray solution will improve control because it helps adhere the insecticide to the treated trees and shrubs. Texas Motorist Aid Call Box Test Program

It will never happen to me...but it does! While traveling along a highway you are involved in a situation where your car breaks down, a car accident occurs, or you experience a medical emergency. Beginning May 27, 1993, standard motorists along highways within Hale and Tarrant Counties were provided more immediate access to emergency responders through a motorist-aid call box test program coordinated by the advisory commission on state emergency communications (ACSEC). "This program is truly a partnership between state, regional, and local government along with the telecommunications industry," said Mary A. Boyd, Executive Director of the Commission. "The purpose of this study is to examine how call boxes will impact emergency response along Texas highways and to better facilitate a person's ability to call for help."

Motorist-aid call boxes are wireless telecommunication devices located along the highways that directly connect a caller to the appropriate emergency responding agency. The bright yellow call boxes are easily identified with blue and white signs posted on each pole. Each installation will have a solar panel energy source which will regulate the internal battery charge for each telephone. The telephone will provide direct access to 9-1-1.

In all, three test sites will be utilized in Texas. The third site, located in Cameron County is tentatively scheduled for a June 3, 1993 implementation. All test sites were selected based upon statistical data including traffic density and accident volume provided by the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) and the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS). The Department of Transportation also approved safety designs, assisted in determining the placement of call boxes within the highway right-of-way, along with providing oversight during the installation of the equipment. "Call boxes with 9-1-1 services add one more feature to our safety network along the highways," said Arnold Oliver, TxDOT Executive Director. "Safety is one of the first things we look at in all our work."

Commitments have been made by GTE-Government information services and cubic communications, Inc. To sponsor the three test sites located within the state. The test program will last for twelve (12) months with sponsorship to include all installation, operation, and maintenance of the system. The evaluation process for the program will focus upon system usage, equipment functionality, and several environmental factors, in order to determine the future of call box programs in Texas.

FINAL CERTIFICATION:

The final date to certify or request aerial measurement service on all spring seeded crops, conservation use acreage (CU), and ACR, is July 15, 1993. A complete acreage report must be filed including all program crops, sunflowers, soybeans, alfalfa, vegetables, and etc., by this deadline. An accurate certification is very important, SO DON'T GUESS! Please call for an appointment.

Please notify this office if you have to adjust prior to plowing anything up. If you are ready to harvest a crop and have not received your measured acres, please call and we will measure your acreage upon request so you can certify prior to harvesting. Failure to certify prior to harvesting could cause your farm to be out of compliance.

FAILED ACRES:

Any program crop that has failed due to drought, excessive moisture, hail or for any other reason beyond the producer's control, must be certified and an ASCS-574 (Disaster application) filed BEFORE the crop is disturbed in order to be eligible for program benefits.

MAINTENANCE OF ACR, CU/PAY AND CRP

Weed control measures MUST be carried out in a timely manner on acreage designated as ACR and CU for Pay throughout the calendar year. Weed control measures also MUST be carried out timely on CRP land throughout the lifespan of the CRP Contract. Failure to control noxious weeds, wind, and water erosion, could result in total loss of farm program benefits, and/or your CRP contract.

AARP Cautions Older People About Prepaying Funerals

Planning one's funeral makes a lot of sense but people should be very careful about paying in advance since there are large risks, including fraud, according to a new report from the American Association of Retired Persons.

"Arranging for a funeral while alive can provide peace of mind and relieve survivors of this responsibility at a very emotional time," said Poppy Hulsey of Tulsa, State Director of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP). "Deciding how to pay for the funeral can also be smart; but the money must be invested very carefully to insure that the selected funeral can be paid for when the time comes."

One example of fraud in the prepay funeral industry is the case of Michem Financial Inc., which operated in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. The company's president was recently convicted of mispending $4 million in invested funds.

The new AARP Report, Prepaying Your Funeral outlines what people should know about these prepay, or "Preneed" plans. Information about 10 different plans is included to help consumers understand their options. AARP, however, does not endorse or recommend any specific product.

The report includes an analysis of how various preneed plans performed between 1987 and 1992 and a projection of how they will perform in the future.

A traditional funeral, including memorial services, a casket, transportation of the body and a funeral director's services, averages $3,500 and is one of the most expensive purchases made by older people. Cemetery costs and other expenses are usually not covered by prepay funeral plans.

Hulsey advises consumers to compare products, services, and costs at a minimum of two funeral homes before choosing a plan. In addition, consumers should carefully review the payment options and choose the method that best suits their needs.

The payment options reviewed in the AARP report include:

* Individual Plans-Consumers can maintain full control by earmarking existing assets, such as savings or life insurance, to cover funeral costs. Make sure the assets aren't subject to probate which could take a year or more.

* Regulated Trusts-Commercial trust agreements, where the consumer pays a funeral director for a specified funeral, are regulated in 48 states. This option is safe as long as the state enforces its regulations, but the consumer may be penalized if the plan is cancelled.

* Insurance-Funded-A life insurance policy with a benefit tied to the cost of the funeral, often naming a funeral director as beneficiary, is another option. Insurance plans may be difficult to transfer and impose high penalties for cancellation.

AARP warns consumers to beware of high pressure sales tactics. A prepaid funeral purchase is a business transaction and consumers should be comfortable with the amount they are spending. In addition, consumers should ask if they have a "cooling-off" period to cancel without penalty. The best protection is to ask the right question.

For a free copy of "Prepaying Your Funeral?", send a postcard to: AARP, 8144 Walnut Hill Lane, #700, LB-39, Dallas, TX 75231. Specify stock # D13188

AARP is the nation's leading organization for people 50 and older. It serves their needs and interests through legislative advocacy, research, informative programs and community services provided by a network of local chapters and experienced volunteers throughout the country. The organization also offers members a wide range of special membership benefits, including Modern Maturity magazine and the monthly Bulletin.

Teel Bivins Reports

In the Senate, where it takes 21 votes to even consider a bill, we generally try to work out our differences by amending bills as opposed to killing them. But during the last week of session, the rules of parliamentary procedure become deadly. I walked up to one normally thoughtful and accommodating member to ask if he would join me in an amendment to another senator's bill. His polite response was that I could amend the bill if I chose but he planned to just kill it.

Even amidst all this craziness, I can reflect back on what has been a reasonably successful session. As I write this column, it appears that an agreement has been reached on a school finance bill. But on June 1, in a hearing scheduled in state District Judge Scott McCown's court in Austin, we could be thrown right back to square one.

Notwithstanding that premier issue of this session, there have been many other successes. We emerged with a state that will allow us to live within our means and not raise taxes. We totally rewrote the Penal Code so violent offenders will serve nearly twice as much time in prison. Several planks of my energy platform appear to be destined to become state law. Farmers and ranchers in our area can rest assured that they do indeed own the ground water beneath their land without fear of state regulations on pumping. And West Texas got a fairer share of the state budget than it has in years.

I'm proud of my trucking reform bill that will open up that business to more enterprising Texans than ever before. A rewrite of our products liability laws also deservedly passed. It'll reduce frivolous lawsuits, holding down costs for consumers. And because of my bill authorizing caller ID services, Texans can know who's calling them before they even answer the phone.

But while we can take pride in these accomplishments, there's a group of people who've paid a high price for the work of the 73rd Legislature. They are the families of the legislators who, for the past 140 days, have lost their spouses, father, mother, and grandparents to a process that demands an incredible amount of time.

My not being there to see Katie's first tee-ball game, or watch Will catch a catfish "all by myself," or see Andrew get certified in scuba diving is a high price to pay. Not being there to help Nancy manage our household also exacts a price.

But I'm here to help make Texas a better place for them and other families. There's no doubt that's a goal worth sacrificing for.

Veterans of the Legislature say you should never make a decision about seeking re-election during the last month of a legislative session when the pace is frantic and the members are tired and beleaguered.

still a lot of larceny that can be accomplished. Members of each house and their staffs are besieged during this crunch period.

The House, which historically kills more than the Senate, goes on a rein of terror during this time. Last week, bills were dropping like flies in the House. I had two perfectly good bills killed simply because a House member was mad at a senator who supported them.

TDHCA Announces $18.7 Million In Awards For Home Program

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs (TDHCA) announced today that $18.7 million in funding has been awarded to 63 applicants in Texas through the federally authorized HOME Investment Partnership Program. (HOME).

"Local governments, public housing authorities and non-profit agencies throughout Texas will be able to provide assistance to low income and elderly people in their communities," said Henry Flores, executive director, TDHCA. "More than 2,000 decent, safe and affordable housing units will be created."

The HOME program was created by the National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 and provides funds to develop affordable housing for persons and families of low and very low incomes.

The program aims to address housing needs through a variety of activities such as acquisition, rehabilitation and tenant based rental assistance for rental and owner-occupied units. HOME gives state and local governments the flexibility to decide what kind of housing assistance is most appropriate to meet their housing needs.

TDHCA developed a Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy (CHAS), which is a five-year housing plan that addresses the states' housing needs and develops strategies to meet those needs. The Department received approximately $32.4 million from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to administer HOME statewide on behalf of non-participating jurisdictions. There are 21 participating jurisdictions in the state who receive funds directly from HUD.

The state's HOME program was developed into three separate application processes. Awards announced today are from application one. Through applications two and three, a total of $5.8 million was awarded in March for rental housing projects.

Application one provides funds to local governments, public housing authorities, community housing development organizations and non-profit organizations for a well defined program of housing activities. Funds were allocated based on formula among the six

CHAS planning regions and are awarded through a regionally competitive application process.

Awards announced today are for planning regions one thru five. Awards for region six, which covers south Texas, were announced in March.

More than two-thirds of the funds have been awarded as loans. The repayment of loans will recycle the money and create funds for future housing projects.

Final applications for the HOME program were due on Oct. 31, 1992. The Department received 308 applications requesting more than $131 million in funds. After a lengthy review and scoring process, staff presented funding recommendations which were approved by the TDHCA governing board at their meeting on April 30, 1993.

TDHCA has awarded a total of $28.7 million through the HOME program. A second funding cycle for community housing development organizations for $3.7 million was closed on June 4, 1993.

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs is dedicated to helping Texans achieve an improved quality of life through the development of better communities.

Texas Senate Week In Review

Lt. Governor Bob Bullock announced that a milestone has been reached in resolving a decades-old water war with the introduction Wednesday of a compromise bill regulating the use of the Edwards Aquifer.

"This bill is fair and strikes a good balance between all those who are users of the resource," Bullock said. "This measure is the first one that stands a real chance of receiving Senate approval."

"It is far better that the Legislature act now than to leave such a vital matter in the hands of the court," Bullock said.

U.S. District Judge Lucious D. Buntion III in January ordered the Legislature to come up with a plan to limit pumping from the aquifer or face federal regulation to protect endangered species.

Bullock commended Sen. Ken Armbrister, the author of Senate Bill 1477, for leading the negotiations that unfolded at multiple locations over the past several months. The bill was introduced Wednesday and could be heard in committee as early as the end of this week.

Armbrister and Chuck Bailey, Bullock's general counsel, mediated the negotiations between San Antonio, San Marcos, New Braunfels, agricultural interests and downstream industrial users.

Of the many complex issues that were in dispute when the talks began, only two remain--pumping limits and user fees. These two issues have prevented the irrigators in Uvalde and Medina counties and the Texas Farm Bureau from supporting the bill.

But Bullock said: "I understand the farmers' concerns and I sympathize. But everybody gave something in this settlement and everybody received. This is the art of compromise and it is the foundation for this reasonable settlement."

Krueger Visits Matamoros Pharmacy, Renews Call For U.S. Drug Price Freeze

U.S. Senator Bob Krueger today visited Benavides Farmacias, a pharmacy in Matamoros, to show that big pharmaceutical companies charge much higher prices in Texas.

"The American taxpayers give the drug industry big tax breaks--in return, drug companies stick it to the American consumers," Krueger said. "Many residents of South Texas routinely travel to Matamoros and other cities to take advantage of lower prices for prescription drugs."

"But other Texans are too ill or old to travel even short distances. They pay higher prices because the big drug companies have marketing and advertising to pay for. It's a fallacy to say that research is the reason for high drug prices. A Senate Committee staff report found that 16 percent of the manufacturer's price for prescription drugs went to research and development--but 22 percent went to advertising and marketing."

Krueger pointed to the price difference of three drugs--a child antibiotic, a popular acne medicine, and a drug to control diabetes. Ceclor, the antibiotic, costs $10.18 for fifteen 250 mg. capsules at Farmacias in Benavides, the same amount costs $29.78. Retin A cream costs $6.68 for 30 grams in Matamoros, compared to $38.29 for the same amount in McAllen.

Krueger has already called for a mandatory, one-year freeze on all prescription drug prices.

"Kay Bailey Hutchison doesn't think we need this kind of protection for Texans. She's said before that she thinks the health care system is just fine. She's wrong--we're in a health care crisis."

"Health care costs are out of control," Krueger said. "Drug prices have been going up at a rate that's faster than inflation, in fact faster than the rate of overall medical price inflation."

"And Texans pay a disproportionate amount for prescription drugs. For people who are lucky enough to be able to cross the border regularly, there are some cost savings. But for people who live in Dallas or San Antonio or Houston, they're out of luck. They have to face a tough choice--whether to buy a daily meal or a daily dosage."

Trouble With Understanding Conversation May Indicate Noise-Induced Hearing Loss

Hearing loss often comes gradually after prolonged exposure to noise and catches most people unaware, said a Texas Christian University audiologist.

Dr. Kenya Taylor of TCU's Miller Speech and Hearing Clinic noted that one potential sign of noise-induced hearing damage is difficulty in understanding conversation in the presence of background noise from a television or radio.

The human ear can interpret sound frequencies between 30 and 20,000 hertz, and talking takes place in the 400 to 5,400 Hz range, Taylor explained. At the onset of hearing loss, typically the upper frequency in the conversation sound range (4,000 to 6,000 Hz) erodes first.

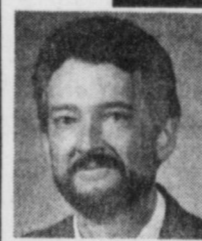

Taylor said if precautions are not taken to avoid noisy situations or protect the ears from overly loud noises, hearing loss eventually deteriorates in the frequencies above 6,000 Hz followed by a decline in the middle and lower frequencies.

Exposure to a loud sound that results in a temporary shift in hearing or a sense of cotton in the ears has the potential to damage the ear, Taylor noted. She cautioned to avoid such situations or use foam ear plugs or protective ear cuffs called Otocups during noisy conditions.

Taylor remarked that the human ear's natural ability to guard against damage declines rapidly after a certain noise level.

I've Been Dreading This!

Okay, I admit it! I've been dreading summer this year! I've been trying to forget that the time was drawing nigh. And, when self-induced amnesia has failed me and the swiftly-turning calendar pages have fanned on by, I've tried to remind myself that nobody has died and full-blown depression is probably unwarranted, even though June is the month when Methodist ministers move.

Focus On Faith

The fact is, I performed the man's "funeral" long, long ago on his fortieth birthday, and, as difficult as it was to keep the clerical corpse quiet, I've never enjoyed a funeral more!

I think my depression began the day I noticed that what had been the famous tree house was stacked in pieces on the lawn. Then boxes began to show up. Out in front of the parsonage, some Dumas Demon parked a truck into which, little by little, the household seems to be disappearing. As it does the truth more and more dawns on me that the family inside the house, my favorite Methodists, are about to disappear to Dumas. And I don't like it at all.

I'm pretty sure we can't replace them.

I'm not sure how many Methodist pastors really have a very deep desire to have Campbellite preachers singing in their choirs at funerals, double-teaming their parishioners in the hospital, and desperately trying to return their serves in tennis. (I was surprised and somewhat concerned that a "man of the cloth" would put such wicked spin on a tennis ball.)

Did John Wesley ever envision a preacher's wife who could give a shot or start an I.V. with one hand and downshift a Greyhound bus with the other, all the while peering Clint Eastwood-like into the rear view mirror daring the kids in back to "make her day"?

Unless Son #1 announces his decision never again to compete in high school athletics, I will not be convinced that a forward-looking Dumas school board didn't have some hand in this move! They just bettered the quality of the Class of '95 in every way.

Sons everywhere should doff their caps in silent awe of the genius and parent management skill of Son #2 who could ask Mom in one breath, "Do you suppose it would be okay for me to build a tree house?" and in the next run out the door to help direct the truck from the lumber yard as it backed up to the tree!

The only good thing about the terminally cute Only Daughter moving to Dumas is that male hearts will one day be broken in locales other than Muleshoe by the grins and giggle of this kindergarten cutie!

So far, I've not helped load even one box. I'm morally opposed to it.

And I don't like saying goodbye.

But I will say this. Dumas is probably a pretty fine town, but by next Sunday it will be a great deal better.

Dumas, if you want a job done right the first time, if you want a preacher who exemplifies the best in his church's rich tradition but who is big-hearted enough to genuinely love all the rest of you, if you want a family that will be an asset to your community in every way and a liability in none--I'd suggest you stop by and welcome Richard & Jo Beth and Chris, Kevin, & Kimberly Edwards next week.

One more suggestion: Richard, you maybe should think about letting Jo Beth drive the truck.....

TDH Seminars Help Schools Qualify For EPA Asbestos Abatement Awards

State health officials have announced that the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has awarded nearly twice the amount of last year's funding for eliminating asbestos in Texas schools.

Sixteen public school districts and private schools were awarded more than $1.9 million in grants and no-interest loans for 19 asbestos abatement projects, after the Texas Department of Health (TDH) helped them with their applications. The 16 awardees were among 37 in Texas who applied for funding for 87 projects.

Jerry Lauderdale, director of the TDH Division of Occupational Health, explained that EPA provides the funds to local education agencies throughout the U.S. as part of the Asbestos School Hazard Abatement Act (ASHAA). Although Texas schools have participated in the program since the funds became available in 1985, some schools' applications were denied because they failed to meet EPA's guidelines. Lauderdale said that to boost Texas' participation this year, TDH conducted three seminars to help school personnel in writing their applications according to EPA criteria.

"As a result, we helped to more than triple the number of grants and loans to Texas schools," Lauderdale said. "In 1992, with only five ASHAA awards to Texas, the state ranked fourteenth in participation. With 16 awards this year, we moved to seventh among all the states."

Many schools and other public building throughout the state still contain asbestos. Safely removing it, or sealing it up so that it no longer poses a hazard, is time consuming and expensive, according to Lauderdale. "The ASHAA grants permit schools to proceed with asbestos abatement, regardless of the school district's own budget. During the state's funding uncertainties for schools, these abatement projects can stay on schedule."

Asbestos, now known as a major cause of cancer, was widely used in building materials such as insulation and floor tile in many older structures. Most uses for the material are now banned. Part of the Division of Occupational Health's job is enforcing federal and state requirements for abating asbestos in public buildings, particularly in schools. The division also licenses any employers whose workers remove

Juvenile Crime Rate Steady Despite Tougher Punishment

U.S. juvenile crime rate has remained steady during the last two decades despite efforts to toughen punishment, said a Texas Christian University criminologist.

"If we look at arrest rates that consider the size of the juvenile population and compare the level of crime given the size of that population, we see those rates have remained remarkably stable over the last 20 years," said Dr. Preston Elrod.

While the crime rate has been relatively constant, Elrod noted that the level of incarceration for juvenile offenders has grown nearly 50 percent since the mid-1970's.

Elrod explained that authorities now are more willing to send youth offenders to juvenile court and process them through the system as opposed to warning them or taking them home to their parents. Surprisingly, the more conservative approach has yielded little change in the number of crimes being committed, he said.

Elrod argued that punitive measures have been especially ineffective with serious juvenile crime because the actions have failed to address the motivation prompting deviant behavior.

"As long as we continue just to respond to the problem by making the laws more severe and incarcerating more people, we're not going to make much headway in dealing with it, because we are not dealing with the basic reasons why many youngsters find criminal activity an attractive choice," he said.

Elrod claimed poor educational opportunities and limited access to suitable leisure activities contribute to the problem. He said the situation also is aggravated by low-paying jobs for parents as well as lack of affordable child care and access to health services.

Our advice: take care of your heart, and live a while.

Generations

Isn't it grand when the whole family reunites on holidays or on anniversaries! How good to see grandparents and great grandparents and the new crop of babies. Seeing them all together gives you a feeling of continuity, and a sense of oneness with all creation.

It gives you, also, a glimpse of God's plan in the life cycle. When you see the off-spring of the patriarch grandfather, you marvel at the great legacy he is bequeathing the world. All the children that have issued from him are in themselves a great contribution to the world of mankind.

There is marvelous potential in all these spirits. The great things they will do thrill your heart when you contemplate them.

This legacy of lives and spirit can be strengthened, sweetened and nourished by the church. We invite you to take your family to church this week.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.
