Acceleration Of Operations Being Sought

Specific Allotments For Various Towns Not In Bill

$15,000,000 IN YEAR

Measure Now Goes Back To House To Act On Amendments

The $100,000,000 public buildings bill passed Saturday by the senate contains no specific allotments. The Associated Press informed The Herald early this morning from Washington, D. C. It is, therefore, not known whether the bill will speed construction of the $16,000 postoffice building here for which plans were announced last week from the treasury department.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (AP)—Expenditure of another $100,000,000 for public buildings throughout the United States was authorized today with added provisions for speeding up existing construction to aid employment.

A house bill to expand the five year building program by that amount was passed by the senate, but the house must yet approve senate changes before the measure can go to the White House.

The additional authorization which appropriated to bring to $415,000,000 the sum available for public buildings outside the national capital.

One amendment added by the senate would increase from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 the amount that may be spent annually in any one state. This is designed to accelerate authorized work.

Another change approved would permit the secretary of the treasury to accept bids up to five per cent above the estimated limit of cost on any particular building but limiting the operation of this liberalizing feature to June 30, 1932. The house bill provided a limit of per cent.

HOMETOWN TALK

BY BEDDY

Two Big Spring girls were injured last night on highway 9 four miles north of the city.

Good seed rain, always needed, always a blessing, had been falling.

Folks driving over highway 9 across Howard county, therefore were slipping and sliding dangerously in the mud.

The car in which the girls were riding slipped in the mud and crashed into a culvert.

Just another accident than can be chalked up to the fact that important state highway is not paved.

Vote February 21 in the road bond election.

Vote for it if you can conscientiously, but vote nevertheless.

Let your vote be guided solely by serious consideration of the value to Howard county of the proposed paving.

Don't let extraneous matters change a vote.

The prospect of voting the bond issue depends upon the same thing it did in December.

If the full voting strength of the county is cast, including those of more than 1,000 qualified voters in the four Big Spring boxes who did not vote in December, the issue will be approved.

The 1,000 or more local folks who did not vote December 23 may blame themselves with the loss by only 24 votes.

Have an invitation from Sam Horton to attend his speech against the bonds at Coahoma Tuesday evening. When it was offered we promised to be there, but when we did promise we did not stop to think we already had promised to

Howard County's New High January Precipitation Mark Expected To Be Followed By Record During February

Finances Head Week's Docket In Legislature

Appropriations Bills Being Held Up Another Week

AUSTIN, Feb. 7 (AP)—The uncertainty regarding the state's financial condition caused the emergency and deficiency appropriations to be held up in the legislature this week, but they probably will be made next week.

After three days of conferences, attended by the governor, the chairman of the legislative money committee, and representatives of the state auditor, comptroller and board of control, a financial statement was agreed upon. The legislative representatives would not budge from their position that $1,145,520.78 was the lowest possible appropriation for emergency and deficiency needs although they were shown the estimate that in event those appropriations were made the deficiency September 1, the end of this fiscal year, would be $2,419,413. There was small likelihood that the legislature would reduce its figure to $1,145,520.78.

With the appropriations bills held up, there was very little important action this week in either houses. About the only important proposal passed was the bill by Representative Petch of Fredericksburg making kidnapping a capital offense.

The bill passed by the house perhaps will come up in the senate next week. House committees were active. After a public hearing the committee on criminal jurisprudence voted 90 to 4 to make a favorable report on the Petch bill to lessen the penalties for violation of the state liquor law. Mrs. Claude De Van Watts, state president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, opposed this bill. A bill favored by the W. C. T. U. repealing the evidence clause of the search and seizure act, was given an unfavorable report from the criminal jurisprudence committee. However the fight will be carried to the floor on a minority report.

Exempt Women

The house committee on revenue and taxation killed a bill to exempt women from poll taxes and to lower poll tax payments for men, and the committee on highways and motor traffic killed a proposal to reduce automobile license fees to $2.

The senate committee did not do so much because the senate has been sticking closer to the new constitutional amendment suggesting the first 30 days for the introduction of bills, the second 30 days for committee action and the last 30 days for floor consideration. However, the second thirty-day period will start Thursday and committee hearings and action will be frequent.

TEMPORARY HALT MADE TO ANTI-PRORATION SUIT

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 7 (AP)—Hearing of the Danziger Oil and Refining Company's injunction suit to restrain the railroad commission from enforcing its statewide proration order was halted temporarily at noon today when the court recessed until Monday. The case went to trial last Monday.

The plaintiff which rested yesterday after a week's presentation of evidence, charged that the railroad commission's proration act was unconstitutional and that its imposition was unreasonable and arbitrary.

It alleged that it injured wells to apply back pressure, or "pinch them in." It was the contention of geologists called to the stand by the defendants that the application

Amarillo Mayor For Rogers As President

AMARILLO, Feb. 7 (AP)—The Will Rogers for President campaign is a sensible step, said Mayor Ernest Thompson of Amarillo Saturday, and he would like to see it sponsored on a national scale.

"He would make a dandy president," said Thompson. "He is qualified in every respect. He is one of the nation's smartest men and he has plenty of common practical sense. I'm for him for president." He said Texas should take the lead in an effort to send him to the White House.

Fight To Cut Crude Import Gains Speed

Tariff Commission Report Shows Difference In Cost

CAPPER BILL UP

Action Expected During Week On Important Measure

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (AP)—The move for legislation to limit oil imports was given impetus today by a tariff commission report showing a wide difference in the cost of crude oil delivered at Atlantic seaboard refineries from Venezuela and mid-continent fields.

Almost simultaneously with the announcement of the report, the senate republican steering committee gave privileged status to the Capper limitation measure.

The report showed a difference of $1.19 a barrel in the cost of mid-continent and Venezuelan crude oil delivered at seaboard refineries, the latter being 79 cents and the domestic $1.98.

The report, however, said the domestic oil was of a superior quality, having a higher gravity and gasoline content and therefore the articles being compared were not similar.

Despite this contention, Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, author of the tariff act amendment directing the cost investigation said the report proved the independent producer's demand for a tariff of at least one dollar a barrel was justified.

No Hope

The Oklahoma said he held no hope for a tariff at this session, but he expressed confidence that action would be taken before adjournment on the bill of Senator Capper, republican, Kansas. This would limit crude oil importation to 16 million barrels annually for the next three years.

It is likely the Capper measure will reach the floor next week. The tariff commission's report was based on average costs of production for 1927, 1928 and 1929 in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico, and the average cost in the Maracaibo basin of Venezuela for 1929, the last year for which costs were available there.

It found the cost in the mid-continent field to be $1.10 a barrel, which with a transportation cost to eastern refineries of 88 cents, brought the total to $1.98. The cost at embarkation points in Venezuela was listed at 56 cents, with transportation cost of 23 cents, a total of 79 cents when delivered to the same American refineries.

It was added, however, that domestic crude has an average gravity of 33 degrees as compared with the foreign, and the domestic yielded 36 to 44 per cent gasoline as compared with 9 to 12 per cent gasoline and 75 to 83 per cent fuel oil for the foreign.

Much Higher

"Gasoline has a much higher unit value than fuel oil," the report said, adding the difference in quality of domestic and Venezuelan crude "is reflected in the wide difference in the price paid by the Atlantic coast refineries."

Two Young Women Injured North Of Here In Machine

Miss Ruby Wright, 18, daughter of Mrs. Laura B. Wright, 1205 East 3rd St., and Miss Naomi Fitzgerald, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Fitzgerald, 200 Young St., were injured Saturday night when the car in which they were riding crashed into a concrete culvert on the Lamesa highway, five miles north of Big Spring.

Miss Wright received a cracked jawbone, severe cuts on the face and head, and had four front teeth knocked out. The other girl was not seriously injured, although she was stunned in the crash.

According to the statement made to Chief of Police E. A. Long and Patrolman Seth Pike at Big Spring and Barrens hospital, where the girls were taken for emergency treatment, they were riding with two men in a coupe when the car started to pass a bus and hit the concrete banister. Prior to the crash the car had been in a ditch and had been removed with the aid of passengers on the bus. They were brought here in the bus.

Twelve Ministers Issue Decision After Investigation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, today was cleared by a committee of 12 ministers of charges brought against him last September by four elders of the church.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of Birmingham, Ala., who presided over the hearing made the announcement of Bishop Cannon's exoneration on the steps of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist church at the conclusion of five days of investigation.

Bishop Ainsworth made the following statement: "A committee of investigation on the case of Bishop J. M. Cannon, Jr., concluded its hearings in Washington today. The committee found no trial necessary."

Bishop Cannon had been charged by D. Forrest J. Priddy, of Baltimore, Dr. J. T. Mastin and Dr. Costen J. Harrell of Richmond, and Dr. I. P. Martin, of Baingdon, Va., with conduct prejudicial to the welfare of the Methodist Episcopal church, south.

could have done anything that fellow. He sure beams personality. He is human if there ever was one. I don't care whether you agree with him politically or not, the person don't live that could meet him and he with him awhile that wouldn't get away not liking him. He does a hundred little things and mannerisms that make you feel that he is one of you. There is no put on, or front with Al, he is just Al, unlike anybody else in the world. I had just come from the White House a day or so before and was telling him about how Mr. Hoover was worked up over this relief business. Well Sir I bet Mr. Hoover has not even among his own party a single man that has as much sympathy and good feeling for him than Al Smith. There was no put on about it, he really meant it when he would talk of the many things that had seemed to go wrong through no fault of the President, yet he had to bear the brunt of them. Here was a man that had been in office long enough to know what you can be blamed for. No Sir Hoovers best booster is Al Smith, and he had just been working with Ex President Coolidge on a Committee to give away an Estate that had been left to charity, and he had the highest praise for Coolidge too, and he says, as I have always maintained, that Mr. Coolidge has a great sense of humor, and he would tell some of it that happened during their deliberations. We went over to the Democratic Club for lunch, and he got to telling about the animal pets that the children had at the mansion in Albany. He built almost a Zoo there to house them. How a big pet Bear that they had raised from a cub had got loose and got over into a girls Orphanage, and they was all scared to death for fear he would hurt somebody and instead these Kids has him pulling and wooling him around and they couldn't hardly get him away from them. They was feeding him bread and jam. He would tell of his dogs his Kids had. One a great Newfoundland, that in the summer when it was so hot they would fix him in the basement, and then out and keep the hose on him. He could tell you every characteristic of every dog, the more trivial a subject the more interesting he could make it. No hard feeling, no rancor toward anybody. A Unique man, with a unique record, polled more votes than all the other Presidents that were elected, with the exception of Mr. Hoover, I doubt if he wants to run again. Even if he don't he will retire into private life one of the most, yes the MOST, popular man of our time. He is the most human of our present day figures. He is not from the soil, but from the cobblestones, and he knows after all they all human and just alike. (Copyright 1931, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Will Rogers and Al Smith Have Talk In New York; Will Says He Likes Him

He showed me the Empire State Building.

By WILL ROGERS
Well all I know is just what I read in the papers, and what I happen to see prowling hither and thither. I was in New York a couple of weeks ago and I decided that before I left I would like to see Al Smith. I hadn't seen him in a long time and had always been an admirer of him. I just wanted to see him and see how he was feeling. So I phoned him, and he said "Come right on down." He is right across the street from that wonderful Empire Building, in a corner suit overlooking it. This building belongs to Jesse Jones a mighty well known Democrat, he is the fellow that bought the Democratic Convention for Houston, Texas. He owns these buildings all over the Country and rents em mostly to Republicans. Well Al never looked better in his life, and I have known and been seeing him around New York for many years. He started in of course by showing me the 90 story building, out of the window that gave us the best view of it. It did look wonder - structural steel work that looks like Illuminism, and in the sun it just glistens. Then he started in showing me old pictures on the wall of his office that showed early scenes in New York. He showed some of the old houses on the lower east side where he lived, one under the very shade of Brooklyn Bridge. Then the old home in Oliver Street. It is without a doubt the most sentimental prominent man I ever met. He glories in the past. He had one that showed the old Theatrical team of Harrigan and Hart who made their great fame in the "Mulligan Guards." It was in a large frame with scenes of the old time favorites, including the old Theatre that they played in. He would hum to you the tunes of those old favorites. It was hard to tell which he looked on with more pride, the highest building in the World that he was actually in charge of its construction, or his harking back to the days when he was the principal performer in all Amateur Theatricals, and they do say he himself was a splendid actor. He

By ONA BEGON PARSONS "Southwest Review" Winter Number

The winter number of this interestingly popular quarterly is filled with interesting and various articles, so that to enumerate them or to select from them hardly gives a reader a fair idea of their value.

I have decided to select each time an outstanding article and give a resume of it. Passing over the very comprehensive and sympathetic "Future of Southern Culture," by Howard Mumford Jones who once taught in the University of Texas, I am going to try to give you some of the highlights of I. K. Stephens' account of the life of Edmund Montgomery in 1838.

Husband of Miss Ney Edmund Montgomery was, as we all know, the doctor-husband of Elizabeth Ney, the earliest and foremost of Texas sculptors. As her husband, he has unfortunately gone down in posterity, when in reality he was one of the most distinguished members of a group of scientists who lived in Texas but lined their recognition elsewhere.

He was of Scottish descent and was born in Edinburgh, March 19, 1835. He resolved to keep his personal life from the public, not caring that his "name and personality" would not be long remembered.

After his death his housekeeper destroyed all his personal records. Only those friends knew that he ever came into his father's title.

Story of His Life At the age of four he was taken to Paris and where he began his education under a private tutor.

At Frankfurt-am-Main he finished his pre-college work. There he began to exhibit his demand for intellectual freedom that was to estrange him from his own kind as these different times in his career; this was probably one of his common causes with Miss Ney.

In 1852 he enrolled in Heidelberg as a student of medicine. After three years there, he transferred to the University of Berlin. At the same time the beautiful young sculptor, Elizabeth Ney was in Berlin studying with the artist, Rauch. It was a case of love at first sight although they were not married until 1855.

Dr. Montgomery obtained his M. D. from the University of Wurzburg in 1858 and after two years spent in clinics went to the German Hospital in London, maintaining a research laboratory in another hospital where he was Demonstrator of Morbid Anatomy. That hospital chose him as a member of the faculty in 1864; but he decided, because of a lung infection, to hunt a milder climate. He retired to Madeira where he married.

He and Miss Ney later returned to Munich and liked the life, but his wife's insistence that "she had

Do You Remember When the First Senior Class Had As Many Boys As Girls?

That was considered quite an achievement for the "harder sex." Most Central Ward superintendents had despaired of ever getting more than one or two boys to stick it out, up to then.

Dr. Chas. W. Deats recalls how proud all those boys were of themselves. Charlie's classmates were Liburn Coffee, Harvey Williamson, Ernest Vaughn, Eugene Nelson, Lincoln Nelson and Blake Van Leer.

The girls—where, oh, where are they?—not a one is left in town to recall that auspicious occasion. They all pulled freight immediately. They were Emma Heltrich, Annie Doyle, Effie Powell, Ruth Holmes, Mildred Jones and Jeth Turner.

Child Study Club Outlines Civic Health Program

To Pay Cost of Removing Bad Tonsils of Needy Howard County Children

The Child Study Club voted at its meeting Friday afternoon to assume the responsibility of paying for tonsillectomy cases for needy children in Howard county.

American Actress Prefers To Act English Heroines

Katherine Cornell hails from Buffalo, N. Y., but on the stage she likes English roles best. At left she is shown as Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

NEW YORK (AP)—Katherine Cornell may be an American girl from Buffalo, N. Y., but she prefers to play English heroines.

The first role to award her stardom was that slightly declassing lady of English society, Irish March, in "The Green Hat." In "The Letter" she was an English wife isolated at a colonial post in the tropics.

In "The Age of Innocence," she did play an American heroine, a New York lady of the seventies. She returned to her British performances in "Dishonored Lady," the case of a murderer who poisoned her Cockney sweetheart.

Miss Cornell now continues her favoritism for English heroines in her newest play, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

In this she impersonates Elizabeth Barrett Browning. The part of Robert Browning will be played by Don Aherns, a young actor from London.

With this play Miss Cornell becomes her own manager, and she hopes eventually to head her own repertory theater.

"I have my own ideas about what I want to do on the stage in the future," she says, "and I know that I can carry out those plans so much better if I have full charge over my productions. That is why I'm becoming independent."

"I believe the theater will profit if there is a return, to a certain extent, to the actor-manager plan that used to prevail in the days of Sir Henry Irving."

"This play about the Barretts and Brownings is my first independent presentation. In London it caused a controversy when members of the Barrett family, protesting that it did not present their ancestors in their true perspectives."

"I am producing the play over here without a single change from the original, and I don't think there will be much, if any, protest. It is, I am sure, an authentic picture of a really notable family."

Miss Cornell is married to Guthrie McClintic, stage and screen director. He always directs the plays in which she appears. They live quietly in an apartment on the banks of the East river, and are seldom seen in public.

For the card sharps, who have seized upon the game of contract bridge as their special gravity, work out revealing codes which net them plenty of profits, says Mr. Lenz.

"By a code of nine words I can identify every one of the fifty two cards," the bridge expert declares. "The sharps can do as well—and they have."

The codes are constantly shifted to avoid recognition.

Two other methods are used by the ocean-going slickers. They mark cards, and they use the old cold deck game.

Cards are marked either with a sharp finger nail or with a pinpoint set in the player's vest. The idea is to raise a slight bump on the back of the ace, king and queen of each suit. The dealer feels these bumps as he deals, and second cards' his unsuspecting opponents.

To "second card" is to deal the card next to the top instead of the one on top—and the nimble fingered gentry are so facile at it that even wise onlookers can't detect them.

This system of controlled distribution means that perhaps as many as ten of the high cards in the deck

How Is Your HEALTH?

Edited by Dr. Iago Galdston
for the New York Academy of Medicine

Blood Transfusion
The idea of transfusing blood from one human to another or even from animals to humans is a very old one, but historic proof is lacking
for any instance of blood transfusions before 1865.

At that time Richard Lower transfused blood from one animal to another. Two years later Dr.
Jean Baptiste Denys of Montpellier, physician to Louis XVII, transfused blood into a man.

He is said to have injected the blood of a goat or lamb into the veins of a young man dying from repeated blood-letting. The patient is said to have survived.

Dr. Denys's experiments provoked violent controversies, which ended
when a prohibition against blood
transfusion was issued by the Paris
Faculty of Medicine.

It appears that other attempts at transfusion had disastrous results.
An unsubstantiated claim has been made that an even earlier attempt at blood transfusion was made in April, 1492, the story being that when Pope Innocent VIII was dying blood from three youths was injected into his veins.

Transfusion of blood from one human to another became a practical and safe procedure in 1901
when Dr. Karl Landsteiner discovered what are called the four blood groups.

Recognition of these blood groups, some of which are antagonistic to the others of which are tolerant of each other, made safe transfusion possible.

It has been shown that an attempt to mix certain two of these four groups of blood results in destruction of the blood cells.

Such groups, therefore, are antagonistic. The mixing of these two bloods in the living human being is liable to result disastrously.

Others of the groups, however, tolerate one another, and the injection of a quantity of a tolerated blood is frequently a life saving action.

Market conditions now must determine whether the moisture given us will bring any profit to farmers,
and the general public.

But, it is a blessing we have this moisture. It sends us one lap toward a comeback in gene 1 business condition.

Another blessing is the fact the country out here is moist instead of dry robs professional pessimists of one of their favorite pastimes of "griving."

Many of us, of course, do have reasons at times to feel something has happened that inflicted punishment
of some form upon us.

But, one of the principal reasons
the crepe hanging folks are full of joy now days while witnessing "ard times" is the fact millions of folk grabbed a chance when the stock market failed and right then began gloating and talking continuously.
Words on the streets and in stores and homes of the country have done more to quiet conditions
than all truly economic conditions.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

Who Kills "Lame Duck" Bills?

Kansas City Star:
SENATOR NORKIS has reason to be somewhat bitter over another defeat of his "lame duck" bill.

This measure is intended to bring about an early convening of each newly elected congress and do away with the short session, such as that current. The congress elected in November would meet in January or February instead of thirteen months after election, as now and heretofore, except when called into extra session. The presumption would be that whatever mandates
the people might give in an election would be more promptly carried out. They would not be intrusted, in part, to members who had been defeated and might have less appreciation of their responsibilities because of imminent retirement.

But Senator Norris is not within the facts when he says this proposal has been defeated by successive presidents, and that the pending bill has been blocked by President Hoover. The "lame duck" bill always has encountered formidable opposition in the house, with its greater number of those affected by the proposed change. Many conservatives sincerely favor the present system under which the old congress holds over until March 4 following the election. They believe it is judicious to have a considerable period between the election of congress and its functioning in order to give time for "cooling off."

But the greater consideration is personal with the representatives.
The term of a congressman is for two years only. Tenure of office is uncertain in the house, with its reservation enters. The member who contemplates possible defeat likes to be given ample time to get another job or to prepare for readjustment to his unofficial occupation. He wants leeway. Therefore, it is against giving up office within a few weeks if he fails of re-election.

Senator Norris is right in what he is undertaking to do. He is wrong about the causes back of his failure. But he runs true to form when he blames the president. In emergency implies dependence, but nevertheless it is not immune to the power of his.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hefley have moved from their home on Park street to 105 West Sixteenth street.

Edwin A. Kelly returned last night from Mineral Wells where he had been attending the ice-con struction, and from Fort Worth where he had gone on business.

Masked Longing

BY HOWARD ROCKEY A ROMANCE OF RADIO

SYNOPSIS: Aileen Gray becomes a "mystery" singer on the radio when an accident disfigures her, ending her Broadway stage career. Dwight Channing, artist, makes a porcelain mask to cover her scars. But these very scars bring Aileen to try to forget her love for Jimmy Crane, press agent. While Arnold Kronberg, movie magnate, is making advances to Vivienne, Aileen's sister, a masked woman appears and shoots him. He recovers and threatens to accuse Vivienne of the attack unless she admits Aileen was the masked woman, as he suspects. Aileen receives a telegram signed
"Adrasteia" hinting the sender
was the woman who shot Kron-berg and threatening to throw the blame on Aileen. Then Kron-berg asks for an interview with Aileen, now known only as "Mademoiselle Masque." She grants it, though suspicious of his motives.

Chapter 25

CHANNING SPEAKS PLAINLY VIVIANNE'S make-up failed to hide the ravages of the hours
she had thought would never pass.
With no appetite for breakfast, she reached the shop in Chestnut street
before its doors were open.
The half-past-eight throng of girls, on their way to offices, seemed to glance at her knowingly as they saw her standing there. Now and then the flicker of a smile indicated that a man had formed his own conclusions. Did she look so hard that she was marked—or did she imagine it? It was all unbearable. She saw Channing approaching, and gulped back tears.
"I thought things over as I drove," he said. "Unless you'd rather not, you'd better come back with me. Kronberg may not find it out."

Half an hour later Channing's car was speeding along the Roosevelt Boulevard. Vivienne sat in silence and she made no effort to break it. Possibly he sensed her thoughts and thought it better not to intrude on them yet awhile.
The whole thing had started so innocently, and had grown into such a muddle, that both of them found it difficult to know where to begin to discuss it. Viv remembered that it was in this car that they had been drenched one Sunday
when the dress that was the nucleus of all that had happened
since, had been ruined by the rain.
It occurred to Channing that finery was, perhaps, the basic cause of most of the woes woman had known since Eve first learned that apples were really serpents' eggs.

An hour they spent at a quiet
roadhouse, served to rest them and soothe their nerves, as well as give Vivienne a chance to tell him
just what had happened.
Channing deftly switched the subject. He sketched his plan of Vivienne's going to the studio, so that Aileen could visit with her without their being observed.

"Oh, it would have been ideal," except for what has happened. In fact, I'm not sure that I ought to go to New York at all."

"Where else would you go?" he asked, and Vivienne shook her head.

"I don't know," she said slowly.
"Would it make any difference?"

"Of course! Viv, you've got to begin to think of someone besides yourself. Aileen wants and needs you."

Vivienne almost hated him for reminding her of that. For almost an hour they motored on, each again avoiding all efforts at conversation. Then as the car was passing an old, abandoned farm, Channing swerved it abruptly through the entrance gates. He ran evident from your account of what he said last night that he doesn't want you now. I told you once that I didn't myself. No doubt you remember that?"

"I shan't ever forget it!" She looked away from him.
"Well, then don't let your resentment prompt you to give some other man—the impression you gave Kronberg."

"Oh, don't!" She writhed under his gaze, and it was pitiless.
"I told you I'd something to say to you—and you're going to hear it.
This world has no room for halfway girls. Even a decent man can respect a woman who's frankly foolish. But the rottenest cad has no use for one who just pretends."

"Dwight! Dwight!" Viv almost screamed. Kronberg had practically told her as much. Now Channing confirmed it.

Neither of them wanted her. She was something beyond the pale—lower than an outcast! So that was their opinion. It lashed her like a whip.

But Channing had goaded her too far. If this was their creed, she'd show them—if only to prove
she was not the sort both of them despised.

"Wait!" she demanded and tossed her head. "Since you've made that perfectly clear—suppose I say I'm converted—that I'll cease to be a half-way? I tell you I meant what I said to you—what I let Kronberg believe—that everybody thinks!"

Instead of answering, Channing caught her roughly in his arms.

Wood Becomes Harlingen Favorite

Shoots 65 for First 18 Holes, With Array of Birdies

HARLINGEN, Tex., Feb. 7 (AP)—Craig Wood of DeWitt, N. Y., became a favorite to win the $1,000 top prize when he ran away from the field of the Harlingen open golf tournament here today, shooting a 65 for the first 18 holes in the 35.80 event.

Despite a stiff wind, he had long drives, kept his seconds under control and turned in a card of 34 out and 31 in, on the 72-par course. He shot seven birdies. On the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth holes, Wood was under par with two ducies and a tray sprinkled in.

On the back nine he beat 36-par by five. His card read: 34-31-64. Out: 434 424 544-34. In: 535 232 434-31-64.

Close on the heels of Wood came Horton Smith of New York with a 69, 35 out and 34 in. It was the first time Smith has shown an advantage but today he hit his stride and excepting for a little faulty work on the greens, might have lowered his bid two or three strokes.

Three other players registered 71a for third place in the field. These grouped at par were Harry Cooper of Chicago; John Golden of Norfolk, Conn.; Al Espinosa of Chicago and Wiffy Cox of Brooklyn.

Among the amateurs, Bob Harlow, Buffalo, carried off honors with a 75. "Chief" George Brownville, started off parring every hole but broke when he went into the rough at a turn and took a 45 coming in. Jack Spear, San Antonio, who was expected to give the pros trouble, got off to a bad start.

Visitors from other nations practically went out of the running. John De Forrest, Surrey, England, shot 80, as did Harry Brown of Mexico City.

Other leaders were: Jack Guild, Tulsa, Okla., 85-88-75; Jack Groat, Fort Worth, 36-39-75; Herman Barron, Port Chester, N. Y., 37-36-75; Ed Stokes, Denver, Colo., 38-37-76; Edson Steele, San Antonio, 36-40-76.

High Schools Seek League Readjustment

Representatives of Fort Worth, San Antonio, Dallas, Greenville, Robstown, Abilene, Cleburne and Waco high schools were before a university interscholastic league committee today calling for a readjustment of the new football districting system effected by the league.

Roy Bedichek, director general of the university interscholastic league, said the number of districts in the league had been increased from eight to sixteen.

He said the schools were not protesting against the increased number of districts, but preferred to be placed in other districts. He said he did not expect the committee to report until next week.

Texas League Railroad Officials Point Out Factors Injuring System

28 of 1930 Lone Star Loop To Try for Major Places

By GAYLE TALBOT, JR. Associated Press Sports Writer DALLAS, Feb. 7 (AP)—Two weeks from now, when the big leaguers pitch their camps in the sunny south, a bumper crop of last year's Texas league stars will be out here to battle for recognition in the big time and fatter salary checks.

Twenty-eight who twinkled in the Lone Star circuit in 1930 are scheduled to report for trials, including all of the outstanding performers. Eight of the number are pitchers, nine infielders, eight outfielders and three catchers. Baseball men figure, roughly, that a third of those called will finish the season in major league spangles, a fair average.

Of those going up a notch, six were members of the great Wichita Falls machine that ran away with the first half last season and then lost to Fort Worth in the playoffs; five shone for the San Antonio Indians, who never got started; four courted with the champion Fort Worth Panthers and Beaumont Exporters; three each with Houston and Dallas; two with Waco and one with Shreveport.

The list does not comprise by any means the entire number of familiar faces due to be missed from Texas league camps. At least as many more have been sold or traded during the winter to minor leagues of higher or of the same classification. Several clubs, notably Shreveport, will start the 1931 nocturnal campaign with almost complete new rosters.

The major league clubs that, in the opinion of some expert observers, made the best pick of the Texas league crop was the Philadelphia Nationals. The Phillies plucked the loops' two outstanding pitchers, Lil Stener and Harold Wilton, and the most promising young infielder, Les Mallon of the Fort Worth Cats. Stener won 14 and lost 6 for the Cats, and Wilton 19 and 9 for Wichita Falls.

The St. Louis Cardinals ran a close second in grabbing off Dixey Dean and Ailyn Stout, two exceptionally bright pitching prospects, and Joel Hunt, outfielder. Dean, a Detroit farm hand, and Stout each won 18 and lost 8; and Stout was the league's strike out king.

Five cogs from the Wichita Falls powerhouse promise to help the St. Louis Browns plenty. In Levey at short, Stormi at second and Burns at first, the Browns got almost a complete infield and a sneaking good one. All three can hit a field. In Larry Bettencourt they got the Texas league's homerun king—he smacked 43—and in Crouch a promising young catcher. Bettencourt should stick this time.

Of the five selected by the New York Giants from their San Antonio farm, two appear to have a fine chance of making the grand slam. In Larry Bettencourt they got the Texas league's homerun king—he smacked 43—and in Crouch a promising young catcher. Bettencourt should stick this time.

Until Puny Wither, Bear guard, went out on personal furlough in the third quarter, with the score 25-11, the Bears were holding their own. McCulloch and Sumner, Frog forwards, then cut loose, piling up the winning margin. They tied for high point honors with 13 each.

Alford, Baylor forward, did not loop a counter until late in the game, with Strickland, center, proving the Bruins' scoring power. Dietzel, Frog scoring ace, was held in check by the Bears. The playing of Doc Sumner, Christian sophomore, was outstanding.

AGGIES 34, TEXAS 10 COLLEGE STATION, Feb. 7 (AP)—The Texas Aggie cagers trounced the University of Texas Longhorns 34 to 10 tonight in a one-sided exhibition before probably the largest crowd which has witnessed a basketball game here this season.

Holding the Steers to one field goal and four points in the first half, the Aggies had the game under control from the start, the first period closing with a count of 21 to 4. The Steers at no time held the lead and their defense collapsed early in the game. Close man-for-man play of the Aggies kept them out of scoring distance during most of the game.

Sam H. Hiron's Views on the $900,000 Road Bond Issue

To the Editor: Let me say that the $700,000 from the state to Howard county for road building is not a gift for the gasoline tax of 4 cents per gallon on the amount of gasoline purchased in Howard county will yield $700,000 in 12 years, so you see that in place of Howard county being taxed to raise $900,000, we, the people of Howard county, will be paying $1,500,000—$900,000 direct, $700,000 indirect. Now let's look again. Nine hundred thousand dollars at 5 per cent is $45,000 interest the first year after sold slightly decreasing each year as parts of the serial bonds are retired. At $45,000 a year for 30 years the total of interest would be $1,350,000. Now add $1,600,000 and $1,850,000 and we have the grand total of $3,900,000. Less $700,000 that the federal road aid gives that leaves $3,200,000 for the tax payers to dig out as the late gets all of our gasoline tax. Why not let the state build the highway and let Gov. Sterling have a chance to make good his campaign pledge to the people of Texas as in his campaign he said he could take the $54,000,000 gasoline tax and build good roads all over Texas and I believe he can. Now don't you think that $2,500,000 is a high price to pay for a highway that will only last five years and believe me it will sure have to be some good highway to withstand these 50 and 60 ton untaxed, unregulated trucks 1 buses running from 25 to 50 miles per hour over them. I am going to take the life of my neck Tuesday evening over at Coahoma at 7:30 p. m. at the high school building.

Listen, Biddy, I believe that you are a real square shooter, so come over to Coahoma Tuesday evening. SAM HORTON

West Texans Defeat McMurry Aggregation CANYON, Texas, Feb. 7 (AP)—The West Texas State Teachers College Buffaloes grasped more firmly their hold on first place in the western division of the T.I.A.A. here tonight by overwhelming the McMurry Indians, 41 to 11.

The Braves tried to make a game of it by using a delayed defense, and for the first fourteen minutes held the Buffs to a 5 to 3 tie. It just could not last, however, for the herd shot so many times in the second half that the law of averages provided the margin. McMurry made only one point in the last half.

Improved Texas & Pacific Facilities Are Reviewed

(This is the first of three articles which recently appeared in The Railway Age, the leading industry periodical. The Herald thanks the editor of the magazine for promptly extending permission to reprint the articles which are naturally of interest to all directly connected with the T&P as well as the general citizenship of Big Spring and the entire territory—Editor.)

Part I
In October, 1916, following several years during which earnings were insufficient to pay the interest on its funded debt the Texas & Pacific was placed in receivership, the second in its history. In 1929, this road had a net income of $6,130,074, which was equivalent to $28.86 per share of preferred stock outstanding, or $12.75 per share of common stock outstanding after paying five per cent, or $1,185,150, dividends on preferred stock. Thus, in only 13 years, the Texas & Pacific has staged one of the most remarkable comebacks in railway history.

TO ENLARGE GRADES
LONGVIEW, Feb. 7.—Extensive improvements in Longview to care for rapid business expansion will be made immediately by the Texas & Pacific Railway. In the main, they consist of new track and switches. J. B. Payne, vice president in charge of traffic, while here Friday announced the railroad's plans.

Many industrial concerns are negotiating for sites along the right of way and trackage to these alone will involve expenditure of considerable money.
Longview is growing rapidly as a result of oil development, according to a survey made Friday. The Dixie Gas and Fuel company has installed more than 100 new meters during the last thirty days, and the Southwest Gas and Electric has put in almost the same number. The gas company plans to rebuild its plant at Kilgore.

E. Q. Whitney, manager of the power company, announced that a new line had been completed to the Moncrief farm. Later a well new line will be started to Kilgore and the Humble holding immediately.
remarkable comebacks in railway history.
It is true that oil, which has lubricated the wheels of success on many a line in the southwest, was a factor in this rapid regeneration, but it was only a factor. Another factor was the correction of a major defect in the original installation. On February 9, 1929, a congressional act amending the railroad's federal charter of March 3, 1871, removed a restriction on the right to issue securities of the financing conditions and betterments, which had long throttled efforts to make sorely needed improvement in the physical properties in conformity with a consistent program, although modified from time to time in accordance with the dictates of circumstances and volume currently available.

The Territory Served
During the earlier years of the period of betterment, it was necessary to confine expenditures to projects affording immediate relief, but as the betterment program bore fruit and the financial stability of the company improved, it became possible to undertake projects of broader scope and more permanent effect in the way of operating economies and traffic capacity. But, coupled with the physical betterments, there has been built up a competent operating organization which has overlooked no measures for economy in operation.

The Texas & Pacific consists of a main line from Gouldsboro, La., (opposite New Orleans) to El Paso, Tex., 1,160.3 miles; a 66.8-mile line from Marshall, Tex., to Texarkana, Tex.-Ark., affording an important outlet to the north; an alternate main line between Texarkana and Fort Worth, Tex., via Sherman, 245 miles, and 595 miles of secondary main line, branches and terminals. In addition, the T&P owns controlling interests in the Weatherford, Mineral Wells & Northwestern, the Abilene & Southern, the Cisco & Northwestern, the Pecos Valley Southern, the Texas-New Mexico, and the Texas Short Line, which from the physical standpoint are all branches of the main line from Fort Worth to El Paso and total 375 miles.

Projected under a federal charter in 1871 as a transcontinental line, construction was completed to Fort Worth in July, 1876, and extended to Sierra Blanca, where it ran aloft of the conflicting enterprise of the Southern Pacific. But in November, 1881, just a month before the line was completed to Sierra Blanca, a settlement was effected under a contract which gave the T&P equal and perpetual joint trackage with the Southern Pacific of approximately 92 miles of line between Sierra Blanca and El Paso.

As a consequence, the Texas & Pacific provides a direct bridge line between connections at El Paso and lines to the northeast at Texarkana, as well as the shortest line between El Paso and New Orleans. In addition, it links the strategic advantage of the Santa Fe (KCM&O and GCSF) are crossed at Sweetwater, Texas. By reason of a connection with the International-Great Northern at Longview Junction, that part of the T&P between that junction and Texarkana serves as an important link for Missouri, Pacific and southwestern Texas. Being the oldest line in such a territory it serves, it possesses a marked advantage as a result of the development that has taken increased in number and in length, the present standard being 100 cars, improvement as to this feature of the property has been most pronounced west of Fort Worth, where passing tracks of only 35 to 40 cars capacity were spaced at intervals of about 30 miles, necessitating the construction of new sidings between the old ones and a change in the standard capacity first to 75 cars and later to 100.

The physical improvement of a railway for the purpose of effecting a reduction in operating expenses is generally assumed to embody considerable attention to grade revision. However, the attention presented on the Texas & Pacific is one that does not offer opportunities for a reduction in ruling grades at a reasonable expenditure. From Shreveport to El Paso, via Dallas and Fort Worth, and from Texarkana to Fort Worth via Sherman, the territory subject to heavy grades, the location is across the drainage. Consequently, although short of complete rebuilding would effect any appreciable change in ruling grades.

For this reason, grade revision has been confined to what might be termed corrective work between Texarkana and Ranger which embodies the cutting down of summits and raising sags to permit the introduction of longer vertical curves and the smoothing out of gradients on long hills, all for the purpose of improving conditions for gravity operation. The total capital expenditure chargeable to this work and to bank widening between January 1, 1922, and December 31, 1929, amounted to $1,872,280, a relatively minor item in the total outlay for physical improvement to the property which has been made that period. In addition, considerable expenditures have been made for the protection of embankments from erosion and a total of $1,174,820 was expended for the construction of new bridges, the strengthening of existing structures and the replacement of pile trestles with concrete culverts.

Second-track construction has been confined to districts subject to the heaviest traffic, namely between Dallas and Fort Worth for some distance out of New Orleans and a few locations. After completing 37.7 miles of second track since 1928, the Texas & Pacific now has a total of 96.9 miles of double track on its own lines and has trackage rights over 6.1 miles in addition.

(Parts 2 and 3 of this article will follow in early issues—Editor.)

The Independent Oil Man's Corner
EITHER DIRECTLY OR indirectly the oil industry touches the daily life of every man, woman and child in the United States. And yet, 14 gigantic oil companies practically "control" the oil industry in the United States. This means that 14 oil companies control a twelve billion dollar industry. And this is how these 14 companies control the industry as set forth in the December 1929 issue of "Shaughnessy's South American Oil Report":

1. Own or control 95 per cent of the crude production of the United States.
2. Own or control the 97,000 miles of pipelines in the United States, thus controlling 100 per cent of the domestic crude transportation facilities of the country (movement by tank cars is a negligible factor).
3. Through control of transportation facilities these companies purchase practically the entire country's crude production not produced by them.
4. Own or control 100 per cent of ocean transportation facilities.
5. Produce 85 percent of the grade oil and refined products imported into the United States and 95 percent of the exports.
6. Control 85 percent of the refining capacity of the country, and the same percentage of the domestic distribution facilities, approximately 50 percent of which are to the ultimate consumer.

Stimson Criticises Wilson Policy Toward Latin America

NEW YORK, Feb. 6 (AP)—Criticism of President Wilson's policy toward Latin America was couched by Secretary Stimson tonight with high praise of this country's general attitude for a century past toward the Republics lying to the south.
Addressing the Council of Foreign Relations, the Secretary of State outlined the American policy of recognition, and characterized the United States stand upon the traffic in arms to countries suffering from internal strife as "blazing the way for the subsequent growth of the law of Nations."
He took occasion also to answer "criticism of our decisions" concerning recognition of the seven Latin American republics overthrown by revolution in the past 10 months, and at the same time gave his interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine as "a declaration of the United States versus Europe—not of the United States versus Latin America."
Admitting some "temporary intrusions into the domestic affairs of some" Latin American republics, Stimson maintained that the United States "policy, in its general conception, has been a noble one." He asserted, however, it had been "radically departed from" by President Wilson.

In 1913, the Secretary of State said, the late president decreed cooperation was possible only when the government concerned was "based upon law, not upon arbitrary or irregular force," and then put this policy into effect in respect to recognizing the government of President Victoriano Huerta in Mexico.
"Although Huerta's government was in de facto possession," Stimson said, "Mr. Wilson refused to recognize it, and he sought through the influence and pressure of his great office to force it from power. Armed conflict followed with the forces of Mexico, and disturbed relations between us and that republic lasted until a comparatively few years ago."
The present administration had refused to follow the policy of Mr. Wilson and has followed consistently the former practice of this government since the days of Jefferson.

"As soon as it was reported to us, through our diplomatic representatives in Bolivia, Peru, Argentina, Brazil and Panama were in control of the administrative machinery of the state, with the apparent acquiescence of their people, and they were willing and apparently able to discharge their international and conventional obligations, they were recognized by our government."
Stimson added that this policy had been uniformly followed by the present administration save where affected by preexisting treaty.

The recent recognition of Guatemala was described as falling under this category. Stimson explained that the United States had agreed to adhere to a treaty adopted by Guatemala, Honduras, Salvador, Nicaragua and Costa Rica. Under its recognition would not be granted if the new president of the country concerned had been a leader in a preceding revolution. The new Guatemalan government, he added, was recognized only after the resignation of General Orellana, who set himself up as provisional president last December. "The distinction between this departure, which was suggested by the five republics themselves and in which we have acted at their earnest desire and in cooperation with them," he said, "and in the departure taken by President Wilson in an attempt to force upon Mexico a policy which she resents must be apparent to the most thoughtful student."
Secretary Stimson warmly defended and praised the American policy governing the exportation of arms and ammunition to countries engaged in civil war. It grew, he said, from a resolution adopted by Congress in 1922 providing the maintenance of "an embargo upon the exportation of all arms and munitions which might reach the rebels," but permitting their sale to the government whose power was threatened.
In the case of Brazil, where the government was overthrown shortly after the United States had agreed to ship its arms, Stimson said he had been "criticized for taking sides in that civil strife." He maintained, however, there was no necessity of maintaining neutrality until the belligerency of the Brazilian rebels had been recognized by this country or Brazil.

In a final argument for the upholding of a policy under which only the government in power should be supported, he said:
"I had little difficulty in reaching the conclusion that those who argued for the liberty of our munitions manufacturers to continue for profit a traffic which was staining with blood the soil of the Central American Republics were not progressive in international law or practice."

Electric Refrigerators In America's Modern Kitchens Number 2,500,000; To Be Increased Soon by 1,000,000 Units

More than 2,500,000 electric refrigerators are in use in American homes today and household economists who have closely watched the modernization and beautification of the kitchen, forecast that 1,000,000 new ones will be added this year.
Their forecast is based upon the educational programs to be used this year by large manufacturers of electric refrigerators and a $1,000,000 advertising campaign soon to be launched by the electric light and power industry to promote this household appliance.

The rapid growth of the electric refrigerator industry is due largely to the household economy that this product makes possible, according to H. S. Fawcett, representative of Frigidaire Corporation, which today is said to have more than 1,500,000 of its units in use.
"The electric refrigerator," he says, "made it possible for homemakers to materially reduce household expenses and they were not lax in accepting it. It enables them to make one trip to market and buy the food supply for the entire week. By doing this they are able to take advantage of quantity prices and the even more profitable Saturday special prices. In addition, they find they can eliminate food spoilage losses and prepare 'left overs' into appetizing dishes which are thrifty substitutes for costly foods."
"At present it is our aim to acquire every housewife in this section with this economy, and to carry on our educational work we have obtained reports from users which show that they can save money. A budget book and copies of these reports are available to the housewives at our show-room."

Chalk Is Honoree of Delightful Parties in Bonham

The two following society items from the Bonham Daily Favorite, indicate the popularity of Miss Estelita Chalk on a visit in that city:

Honoring her house guest, Miss Estelita Chalk of Big Spring, Miss Frances Ware entertained with five tables of bridge and for two Friday night at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Ware. The house was lovely with vases and baskets of cut flowers and ferns.

At the conclusion of the games a delicious salad course was served at the tables, with date sticks in the center of each table.

In cutting for the favors, Mrs. Frank Davis was high, and she most generously presented her favor to the honoree. Bradford Nunnelee cut high for the boys. The favors were in keeping with the tables, which were valentines, and the lucky ones were presented with attractive little valentines. It was a most enjoyable evening for everyone.

DELIGHTFUL PARTY

One of the delightful parties given last week in honor of Miss Estelita Chalk of Big Spring, Texas, who was the house guest of Mrs. Tom McDougal, on Saturday afternoon. She entertained with three tables of bridge. The rooms were lovely with vases of cut flowers and ferns.

Favors were presented to Miss Chalk as guest of honor, and to Lucia Greasier Martin of Marshall, and Mrs. J. B. Birdwell for their luck in the games.

A delicious salad course was served at the conclusion of the afternoon. Mrs. McDougal was assisted in serving by Mrs. H. A. McDougal and Miss Norma McDougal.

rived in a private car and spent the day and night in Big Spring. The morning was given over to a drive over our city. Driving then was in horse drawn vehicles.

The afternoon was for the ladies of the town to call on the ladies of the Gould party. The large upstairs room on the west side of the Y.M.C.A. building was used as the reception room. The small room on the north opening off to it was used to serve the callers punch and wafers.

These rooms were made attractive by the members of the reception group of ladies, they having practically dismantled their own homes. It was a big task but was put over in real style and the ladies that received with the Gould party that afternoon would scarcely have been recognized as the same that had worked far into the night to make this an unusual occasion in the history of Big Spring.

"At the close of the afternoon

"That night the men of the town called and the men of the Gould party received with Miss Gould. The ladies remained in the back ground until the reception was over, at which time the party was again served simply with sandwiches and coffee.

JOAN CRAWFORD HERE IN NEW SUCCESS, 'PAID'

Film Version From Play Of Great Force

Hard to Pick 'Plain' Women As Extras In New Sound Picture

Hollywood is always associated with a people's minds as a place where beauty congregates and motion picture studios are similarly catalogued as centers of pulchritude where only the most alluring conception of the movie center was made apparent when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sent out a call for "homely women" to be used in "Paid," Joan Crawford's latest starring production which will be shown today, Monday and Tuesday at the Ritz theatre.

The women were to play the roles of inmates of a penitentiary and everyone who has ever been through a typical women's prison knows that the hard-boiled, criminal-schooled inmates are no beauty types. Consequently the need for plain women.

From the flock of extras who answered the call, there was no doubt about the fact that every person in Hollywood is not a plain beauty.

"Paid" was adapted from the sensational Bayard Veiller underworld drama. "Within the Law," Joan Crawford as the shop girl who is sent to prison for a crime which she did not commit plays her first straight dramatic role under the direction of Sam Wood. The cast also includes Robert Armstrong, Marie Prevost, Kent Douglas, John Miljan, Burnell Platt, Hale Hamilton and others.

Sam Wood, incidentally, seems to be fated to handle "ugly ducklings." In his last picture, John Gilbert's "Way for a Sailor," Wood had to select a group of "ugly" young women for his Liverpool barroom scenes. Any size, any color would do, but beauty in any form was taboo. And the same ruling applied in the selection of extras for "Paid."

Tiffany Picture At Queen Real Western Drama

The theme song of "Oklahoma Cyclone," Tiffany all-talking western drama produced by Trem Carr, which comes to the Queen Theatre on Friday and Saturday, is "Song of the Range" sung by the featured players, Bob Steele and Nina Bay. "Song of the Range" was written by Carlos Molina and Jack Scholl, while another song in the new picture, "Let Me Live Out on the Prairie," was written by Jack Scholl and Ernesto Piccolo. "The Lavender Cowboy," a third, sung by Al St. John, is an old-time cowboy chuckwagon ditty, the origin of which is unknown.

Joan Crawford Likes Clothes of Different Sort

If Joan Crawford ever gets tired of acting she can always make a good living as a fashion creator.

For the youthful Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star is almost as well known for her original style ideas as for her clever work in the dramatic field.

Among her other innovations, Miss Crawford was first to wear the off-the-face hats. The inspiration came while she was on a picture set. After waiting patiently for the cameraman to adjust the lights so that the shadow from her hat brim wouldn't cover her eyes, she became impatient and pushed her brim back against the crown, revealing her face directly to the light, much to the cameraman's delight.

Following release of the picture, off face hats became ultra-smart and universally popular.

Miss Crawford's latest fashion novelties will be seen in "Paid," her new dramatic vehicle opening today at the Ritz theatre.

LIQUOR CHARGES

Charges of possession for sale of intoxicating beer, were filed in Justice of the Peace Cecil C. Collins court Saturday against Earl Hood. The charges followed an arrest by Constable Miller Nichols.

TWO RITZ SCREEN HEADLINERS

John Miljan, Joan Crawford and Kent Douglas, in "Paid," to be shown at the Ritz today, Monday and Tuesday, are shown at the top. Below the scene scene is one from "Min and Bill" showing Dorothy Jordan, Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery.

French Girls Enroute Here

Reginald Denny With Captivating Crew of Lassies

"Those Three French Girls," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will present Wednesday and Thursday at the Ritz, might well be subtitled "Making Whoopee in Paris," for this talkie farce contains an amusing series of incidents connected with the French capital as has been shown on the screen in some time.

Heading the group of revelers in the Cosmopolitan production is Reginald Denny, who, as the sportive nephew of a wealthy English peer, makes the rounds of the Parisian pleasure resorts and returns to his uncle's home with an ill-assorted group of companions, including the piquant Fifi Dorsay, with whom he has fallen in love; two American ex-doughboys in the persons of Cliff (Ukulele Ike) Edwards and Edward Brophy and their two girl friends, portrayed by

'Min and Bill' Billed Here

Marie Dressler Star In Serious Leading Role

A ton of tuna, a few boatloads of other assorted fish and several lobsters were among the orniferous "props" that helped give local color to "Min and Bill," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of the fisheries, filmed largely on location at Terminal Island, San Pedro. Russell Hopton, who plays the "heavy" in the new picture, in which Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery head the cast, passed a week hauling a tuna as large as himself about the docks on his back as part of the action of the plot. His role is that of mate on a fishing scow of which Beery is captain. Cannery details and interesting glimpses of the work of the fishermen add an unusual touch to the picture which was adapted from Lorna Moon's widely-read novel, "Dark Star."

'Men On Call' Centered Around U.S. Coast Guard

"Men On Call" coming to the Queen Theatre Monday and Tuesday will mark the fiftieth directorial effort of John Blystone for the Fox Film Company. Making half a century of seven persons who find a hundred productions for one company was some sort of record and Blystone celebrated in an appropriate manner. He is the pioneer director of the company, and was serving as a property man with the navy beyond the veil—is the organization when he was made a director in 1918.

"Men On Call" is a story of the United States Coast Guard and to get authentic scenes, Blystone acted in the same capacity in the two his entire company to the government stations at San Francisco, Cypress Point, and Monterey Bay, and with the technical and physical aid of the Coast Guard men themselves made a picture that shows the actual conditions under which these men live.

Edmund Lowe has the principal featured role and others featured include Mae Clarke, William Harrigan, and Warren Hymer.

BRIDGE-

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3) are concentrated in the hands of the two confederates. "Second-carding" is much simpler in bridge than in poker, as the dealer has to do it only once to put a desired card where it will help—either in his hand or his partner's.

Cold decks ordinarily are not resorted to, says Mr. Lenz, until a game is adjourned to a sharp's stateroom. A handkerchief is passed across the brow, or a nose is blown, and a new deck enters the game, although the victims don't know it. The prize cold hand goes like this:

Spades, A K K Q Hearts, A K Q J Diamonds, K J 9 Clubs, A K Q J

It is dealt to the man whose money is about to be taken. One of the confederates holds four little diamonds and no spades; the other, the high diamonds and a string of spades. The confederates take the bid with five diamonds, doubled and redoubled. They seize control by trumping a' the outset, and the one with the four small diamonds leads through the possession of the seemingly impregnable hand. It all sounds complicated, but work it out with a deck. You'll find the result to be a grand slam in diamonds.

Lenz is in charge of a brigade of 200 bridge experts on the French line, who lecture and hold duplicate hand tournaments. He says he and his colleagues apparently have scared away the sharpers.

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3) and Dee Foster were appointed on a committee to present names for the election of officers for the next meeting.
