

ONE MAN DIES AFTER SHOOTING AFFRAY

ROTARIANS HEAR BENDER RAP RECORD

Earl Bender, vice-president of the Eastland Rotary Club, presiding today in the absence of President Joseph M. Weaver, told the members present—there being 22 out of the 41—that the attendance record of the club was not what it should be and urged them to make it better.

Mr. Bender also told the members that his opinion was that if the members themselves got up the programs instead of importing so many outsiders for the purpose of putting on programs, the Rotarians would, as a rule, get more benefit from the work.

I. Moldave, the only member of the program committee for the day present, gave a splendid talk on the leather, cattle and shoe industries, showing the connections between the three.

Ed Woodward, Rotarian from Brownwood, and Rotarians Nick Nichols and E. P. Crawford of Cisco, made short addresses.

An invitation was delivered to the club by Vice-President Bender from the ladies of the Eastland Thursday Afternoon club to put on some "stunts" on a program the club was sponsoring for next Friday night. The Thursday Afternoon club, it was pointed out, was offering a first prize of $10 and a second prize of $5 for the best and second best "stunt" provided for their Friday night program.

James Beard, Curtis Hertig and Paul Brown were named as composing the program committee for next week's meeting.

Aged Driller Dies Suddenly Here Sunday

W. D. (Bill) Morgan, 63, driller, died Sunday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Foster, West Commerce street. He was stricken suddenly and no one realized the seriousness of his condition for an hour or so. Dr. L. C. Brown was called, but arrived just a moment after Morgan died. Arrangements for the funeral and burial depend upon information from relatives in Pennsylvania.

Morgan had been in Eastland for the past nine or ten years, most of which time he had made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Foster. He had, for the past week or so, been employed as watchman by LeRoy Arnold on a lease west of town. He worked Saturday night and Sunday morning, returning to Eastland about 12:00 o'clock. About 1 o'clock he appeared at the fire station and lay down on a settee, and apparently went to sleep. After a while he got up and started home, but fell to the sidewalk. Friends picked him up and others took him home and put him to bed. Later Richard Jones of the fire department came to the Foster home to see him and it was Jones who called Dr. Brown.

DETECTIVE SHOT BY SUSPECTED BANDIT

BALTIMORE, Md.—Sergeant F. W. Carroll and Elmer O'Grady were wounded and Henry Peterson, suspected Brooklyn, New York, bandit, was reported dying in a hospital today after a gun battle last night in front of the police building here.

Peterson is in a hospital with seven bullet wounds in his body.

The shooting came after Sergeant Fred Carroll had gone to a hotel two blocks from the police building where Peterson was reported registered. The officer entered Peterson's room and said he was wanted at headquarters.

"Sure, I'll go with you," Peterson told the sergeant and the two left the hotel. Near the police station, Peterson took out a revolver and fired. The bullet clipped the detective's ear.

Sergeant O'Grady saw the shooting from his office window and summoned Sergeant Joe Carroll. Peterson turned his fire on them and one bullet struck Carroll in the ear and another struck the leg. Another bullet wounded O'Grady. Shortly after, the suspected bandit fell on the ground with seven wounds.

CHAPTER I

The bag was empty. But Jerry couldn't believe it. Again and again he thrust her hand into the felt folds, poking and digging in a space that could not long have concealed a pinhead.

Her roommate, powdering her nose before the golden oak dresser, heard her gasp and wheeled in alarm.

"What's the matter?" "My money is gone!" "No!" Myrtle stared at the open bag in Jerry's nervous fingers as though it were poisonous. "Maybe it fell out. Let's look in the closet."

The search was a frantic one. Every inch of the dark cubicle was covered.

"I warned you not to leave it here," Myrtle said when at last they gave it up. She was exasperated because she knew what the loss of the money would mean to Jerry Ray. When a girl refused to treat herself to a soda for weeks and weeks...

"Why didn't you give it to Mrs. Addison?" She knew the answer to that too. If their landlady knew that one of them could save money they certainly would get that threatened raise in their room rent.

"I thought it would be all right for one night," Jerry sobbed. "The theft was fast becoming a reality to her. For nearly a year she had saved that money, dime by dime, quarter by quarter and dollar by dollar. It had been almost impossible to believe, when she opened the bag and found it gone, that it had been stolen, that it really was gone. Why, she had starved for it—for the chance it was to bring her—"

It seemed sort of funny that only a few minutes ago she had run up the stairs ahead of Myrtle, who wasn't going to Atlantic City, tripping over the hole in the carpet before their door, as usual, but with an unusual song in her heart. As quick as that everything could change. The song was a dirge now.

Myrtle tried in vain to comfort her until George came. Then she had to go. George couldn't be kept waiting.

Jerry lay on the bed, white and tense, her disappointment eating deeper into her consciousness as her thoughts traveled backward. Another year at the lace counter before she could have a vacation again. Another year of automats and self-service restaurants, of movielets Saturday nights and not even a late magazine to read.

Myrtle had argued heatedly over what she called Jerry's crazy idea. But Myrtle didn't know. Myrtle didn't want things the way Jerry wanted them. Myrtle Crane was content to look forward to a future with George in a three-room flat. Myrtle believed in love. Jerry didn't.

"I've seen enough of it," she said when Myrtle wanted to know "how she got that way. It's just a snare."

Her mother in the hot kitchen at Marblehead. There was no gas in their neighborhood and the grocer on the next street was glad to give them boxes and crates—her father wouldn't buy oil when he could get summer fuel for nothing. And her mother's room under the sloping roof—hot in summer, cold in winter.

And her father and her brother Harry. Both of them hated work. Harry had married a cute little kid he met at a dance. Jerry had listened in silent anger to Doris' ravings about Harry and romance. Myrtle had twisted her lips in contempt as she dwelt on that year Harry and Doris had spent at home after their marriage. She could not forget Doris' disillusionment when she discovered that Harry was more interested in what he had to eat than in how she looked or what she thought of him.

But such a thing could never happen to her. Her mother's experience was enough. She had never heard her say one word against marrying for love, but Jerry had guessed at her bitter awakening.

Once her mother had confided to Jerry that she was the only beautiful thing in her life and in Jerry's heart had been born then and there a fierce resolve to compel beauty for her mother, to bring some luxury into her life.

She wanted, with a longing that had grown with her through the years, to rest her mother's hands, to see the callouses disappear and the broken nails mend. She wanted skillful fingers to rub out the furrows on her mother's brow, but above all she wanted to see those drooping shoulders lift and a light shine in the dull blue eyes.

And for this she had come to New York. She told them frankly at home that she was coming to marry money. They laughed at her, all but her mother. She warned Jerry gravely against making a mistake.

But New York had disappointed Jerry. Rich men did not come seeking brides at Fane's department store. She met a few boys, friends of George, but they were like the boys she had known at Marblehead, satisfied to have just a "job"—nothing else.

That would not do for Jerry. If you believed in love it was different—you must marry blindly. But if you were not a sentimental boob you could make your marriage a career. Jerry had read somewhere that marriage was a matter of propinquity. Being what she called intelligently interested in marriage she looked up propinquity in a dictionary and learned that it meant nearness in place or time.

If that was all there was to it why not benefit by it? Going around with boys who had nothing but love to offer, who would marry for love. For love! Jerry believed that most people knew more about it than a hen knows why she lays an egg. It was a nice word, but you might as well marry for stardust, or roses, or nectar, or anything else that sounds well.

Sports Matter

By George Kirksey Baby Joe Gans, the gray-haired partly-bald headed Los Angeles negro, is Jack Dempsey's pick of the lightweight.

"The next lightweight champion," is the way Dempsey refers to the California negro. And Dempsey had backed his opinion with money. He recently purchased a financial interest—said to run into five figures—in Gans.

The California negro has had phenomenal success in the east since his first appearance in the Garden against Jackie Brady of Syracuse. It was largely through Dempsey's insistence that Gans, an unknown in the east at that time, was given a place on a Garden card.

King Tut Setback Gans' only setback since he came east was at the hands of King Tut, hard-hitting Minneapolis fighter, in a 6-round bout on the Mandell-McLarnin card at the Polo Grounds early the past spring Tut won a close decision. Since that time Gans has made more progress than Tut.

Dempsey has long taken an interest in Gans, with whom he formed a close friendship in Los Angeles some time back.

Gans is the first fighter in whom Dempsey has ever held a financial interest. Dempsey permitted big game to be used in connection with Amend Emanuel, the San Francisco light-heavy-weight, for half-year purposes, but early had a disagreement with Papa Emanuel which led Dempsey to withdraw his endorsement of the young Jewish fighter. Dempsey is said to have advised Papa Emanuel not to match Armand with Mickey Walker who knocked out the California fighter when the bout was held.

Deadly Puncher "This is the first time I have ever invested money in a fighter," Dempsey said, "and I consider it a good investment. Gans is one of the greatest ringmen I have ever seen. He is a wonderful puncher with accurate and deadly puncher with either hand and a cagey ring general. He knows how to fight and how to counter. He is dead game and a thorough sportsman. Frankly, and not because I have bought part of his contract, I regard Baby Joe as the best lightweight in the world, and a certain champion if he ever meets Mondell. I thought that even before I bought interest in him."

Dempsey will not interfere with Larney Lichtenstein in any way in the management of Gans.

"You've got the wrong idea," Jerry had answered serenely. "I'm not going to Atlantic City to parade the boardwalk."

"You don't expect to meet a Social Register guy in a second-class hotel do you?"

"I'm not going to a second-class hotel. Listen, Myrtle. What do you think I've been saving my money for? I'll tell you. I'm going to have a week in the best hotel in Atlantic City. The right clothes, the right place, and I know I'll find the right man."

Now, thinking over all the sacrifices she had made, the money she had wanted to send her mother and hadn't because it was to free them both from the ugly confines of poverty, Jerry felt weak and defeated.

The room was stifling hot, filled with the heat of the city's masonry that even the night could not entirely release. Jerry had let her mind train itself to picture the things she wanted for her mother and herself. Smooth beaches, roof gardens, the deck of a white and mahogany yacht—she had read of them, seen photographs of them, seen fleeting glimpses of them in the news reels.

If such places and things existed why should she not aspire to them? Certainly the people who had them had not been content to want less, she reasoned.

Her room, by contrast with the things she had dreamed of, seemed doubly hot. And how she hated it—the jaundiced wall paper and threadbare rug, the curtains that hung with a listless ness like her mother's movements.

Tired. That was it—the room was tired, perhaps tired of the stream of colorless tenants who came and went, their drab-patterned lives making no imprint. Tired, as her mother was tired of the years that came without event, unheralded, unsung. Flat, tedious years. Years like a gray soil that had put forth one blossom to justify its existence and then had gone on moulding, dying.

Saving to lift her mother, by the only way she knew, into a more gracious world than this, had not been an unadulterated hardship. It had been thrilling to watch her savings account grow. Yesterday, when she had withdrawn it from the bank because she would have no time on Saturday to attend to it, she had felt like dancing out with it. What were sodas and shows then?

The risk of leaving it in her room overnight had seemed unavoidable. She was leaving on Sunday morning. She had worried a little over it—there had been a sneak thief in the house two years before, she had heard, but she was too elated over the prospect of what lay before her to think much of trouble.

Her new suit case was packed with lovely things. Not a faded or mended garment in it, such as filled her share of the limited drawer space in the mutually-used dresser.

She could see it now, from where she lay on the bed. Well, she had that much to show for her thrift. Some pretty clothes. Too bad she hadn't bought the evening dress here that she had planned to get in Atlantic City. She had thought it would be exciting to shop there. She wondered what good the clothes would do her now. (To be continued.)

Relief from Gas Stomach Pains Dizziness

The doctors tell us that 90 per cent of all sickness is due to stomach and bowel troubles. You can't be well if your digestion is bad; you are likely to get sick unless you relish food and digest it properly.

Tanlac has a wonderful record as a relief from digestive troubles, even those of years' standing.

Mr. James F. Campbell, of 1012 W. Fifth St., Little Rock, Ark., says: "I had bloating after eating. My rheumatism was so bad I could hardly raise my arms. Now I can eat anything and do a good day's work."

If you suffer from gas, pains in the stomach or bowels, dizziness, nausea, constipation or torpid liver; if you have no appetite, can't sleep and are nervous and all run down, you need Tanlac. Cranberry Bread Pudding

Two cups cranberries, 1 cup water, 1 cup sugar, 3 to 4 cups coarse bread crumbs, 4 tablespoons melted butter, 1 teaspoon cinnamon cream.

Add sugar and water to cranberries and bring slowly to the boiling point. Cook about ten minutes. Put a layer of crumbs in a well buttered baking dish, add a layer of cranberries and cover with butter and cinnamon. Continue layer for layer until all is used, making the last layer of crumbs. Sprinkle cream over the crumbs and bake 30 minutes in a moderately hot oven. Serve warm with top milk or whipped cream.

Walker county, Texas, will gain approximately 12,000 bales of cotton this season.

Letters From The Readers

Mr. Editor: Now that the football season is about past, and is entirely past in so far as the Eastland players are concerned I want to submit some impressions of a father of one of our team players.

First, I feel that playing the games has done my son a great deal of good, both mentally and physically. It has helped him as a social being has helped to make his character and future conduct. With the help of the coach he has learned what it is to play the game fairly, honorably and manly. He spurns "rough stuff" or unworthy playing. He knows what it is to stand by his team and fellows, even though the tide of battle goes against him. Yes, our entire team this year is composed of manly game boys, in the face of many defeats. They have stood the gaff from the beginning and have been game throughout. They have no apologies to offer to anybody. They have played far better football than the scores and reports indicate. They are home boys (not imported), they are manly young men. They know, and the school knows, their ages bring them within proper ages to play football. They have made their grades last year and this year the entire school session. Their principal and teachers know them and do not have to make excuses for them in any way. No stain of questionable eligibility is upon anyone of them.

Now that the ball season is over, we are hearing that several charges of ineligibility are lodged against certain players. To us it is strange that any school authority can excuse himself for such a situation as that. During several months ample opportunity has existed to know the boys in their teams. If he doesn't know his boy, he does not need to take chances, and can keep the player out of the games until satisfactory proof of eligibility is presented. If his school has gone out and gathered in boys whose ages and scholarship and playing records are unknown he ought to keep them out of the team altogether until the second year, thus giving him and others opportunity to know of their eligibility. It is a matter of school integrity and the burden is on the shoulders of the school principal and other school authorities. As a result of using ineligible boys you may win games and your team may go to the finals, thus enabling your school to gather in hundreds and thousands of dollars, and you may at the end of the playing season, when outsiders have learned the facts about your ineligible players, have to admit the facts in humiliation. I suggest that some financial penalty should be assessed against any school who for any cause allows an ineligible player to play a conference game.

SCIENTISTS SET FOR EXPEDITION TO SEE ECLIPSE

Britons Will Travel to Malaya for Phenomenon in 1929.

GREENWICH, England.—British scientists rapidly are preparing an expedition to observe the eclipse of the sun in 1929. While they had only to travel a few miles to Giggleswick, Yorkshire, last year to witness the total eclipse, this year they have to go to Malaya.

The track of the 1929 eclipse cuts across the northernmost portion of Sumatra, the Malay peninsula, the southernmost portion of French Indo-China, and the Philippine islands, and ends in the Pacific ocean. Col. Waley Cohen, a member of the expedition, has inspected the sites for two camps. These are situated at Alorstar, the capital of Kedah, and Patani, in southern Siam. Already, the grounds of the observatory here are crowded with equipment such as huts and wooden shelters to protect the scientists from wind, rain and sun. In one corner, swathed in tarpaulins, is the telescope which Dr. J. Jackson, one of the leaders of the expedition, had had specially made for his own use. It is 21 feet in focal length, with an aperture of seven inches. It will take plates 15 inches square and photograph an area of the sky three degrees in width and three degrees in depth. The astrographic equatorial telescope used for the international photographic mapping of the skies, will also be taken.

BULL ELEPHANT THAT KILLED 7 FINALLY SLAIN

Joseph Grove, American, Downs Huge "Devil-Devil" in Burma.

By HAROLD P. MILLS. United Press Staff Correspondent. SHANGHAI.—One huge foot and one mighty tusk of "Devil-Devil" the rogue elephant which for months terrorized the natives of the Mimbua district of Burma, killing seven persons and destroying thousands of dollars worth of crops, now repose in the Shanghai office of the United Press—the gift of Joseph R. Grove, slayer of the great pachyderm. Before, Grove completed 16 years in the jungles of Burma, sailed for his home in San Francisco and stopped long enough in Shanghai to distribute a number of big game trophies to newspaper men. In Burma Grove was superintendent of an oil field owned by an English concern.

"Devil-Devil," the rogue elephant, was killed after a three-day hunt in the jungles. The beast measured 9 feet 4 inches at the shoulders and is stated to have been the largest elephant ever killed in Burma.

After a three-day search in the bamboo jungles Grove came upon "Devil-Devil" unexpectedly. Both man and elephant were surprised.

The average Burma elephant, which is of the Asiatic species, will flee at the sight of a man. Not so with "Devil-Devil." Before Mr. Grove could get his gun to his shoulder the great beast charged. With the enraged beast within six feet Grove let go with his .404 Jeffries, an English-made magazine rifle dealing a blow of 4,000 pounds. The bullet failed to stop the elephant. Grove jumped and the beast thundered by, but turned to charge again. Another bullet from the Jeffries rifle killed him. During his years in Burma, Grove has killed 16 elephants. To the United Press he said that the best and surest way to kill one of the beasts is to aim for an imaginary line between the ears.

T. C. U. Has Good Tennis Prospects

FORT WORTH.—For the first time in several years, the tennis prospects at Texas Christian University are bright for a successful season. With an influx of several star net men from last year's freshman squad, Capt. Weir McDiarmid is expecting to put on the field a strong contender for conference honors. In the first match of the year played with Trinity university, the Frogs won every match. They showed unexpected strength both in doubles and singles. Two brothers, John and Weir McDiarmid, form the nucleus around which the team will be built this year. John has No. 1 ranking and Weir No. 2 in the competition so far. John McDiarmid spent last summer tramping over the Middle West, entering tennis tournaments and seeing the style of play of other sections. He won the junior championship of Ohio and was runner up in several other matches. He is a sophomore at T. C. U., and much is expected of him in his three years of competition.

Everybody Happy as Hornsby Signs

HOKY AND SLIDES

Henry L. Farrell

Tough. Oh, My Yes! It has been a tough season for those experts who Saturday after Saturday seek to name the football winners. Not a Saturday has passed by but what one or more teams upset the dope bucket.

It is getting tougher and tougher to pick the winners in football, and this situation is not over for the year yet.

One has a chance of going wrong five times in five guesses for games to be played Nov. 24. Any one who comes to the front with five right ones on the Army-Nebraska, Yale-Harvard, Illinois-Ohio State, California-Stanford and Northwestern-Dartmouth games ought to get a reward of some kind.

Then there are two other games that are going to tax the guessing apparatus of the experts. Those games are the Army-Stanford and Southern California-Uotre Dame that follow later.

Big Help to Cause Notre Dame's victory over Army was an indirect boost to the football teams at Wisconsin and Georgia Tech a reader from Chicago points out in a letter.

He says: "Army has been boosted all the year as the best team in the country and the one deserving of national honors if it managed to escape defeat the entire season."

"They barely trimmed S. M. U. by a 14-13 score, and Notre Dame, beaten by Wisconsin and Georgia Tech, tripped them. Without going deep into anything but the scores of these games, it seems that the football teams at Georgia Tech and Wisconsin deserve a bit more ranking nationally because of this, especially if they end their seasons without losing any games."

So We've Heard The fullback of the University of California football team is Charlie Schmidt—remember the name?

A hard-hitting, courageous fighter, this Schmidt is, and that is what one expects of him if they know his daddy is none other than Charlie Schmidt the former Detroit catcher of 20 years ago. He has an uncle, Walter, who caught for Seattle in 1927 and 1928 and served his time in the majors. Schmidt is said to be one of the best fullbacks California has had in years. Incidentally, he's the catcher for the California baseball team and has shown possibilities of reaching the big leagues some day.

When Do We Rest? Ohio State recently announced its football schedule for the 1929 campaign and for an institution with no coach signed for the season so far, it seems quite an ambitious one. Certainly it is one that will put a new coach, if Dr. Jack Wiley doesn't stay, to the big test in his first year.

The Buckeyes have one real soft spot. That's the first Saturday in October, and they haven't filled it yet. It may turn out to be another tough game.

The schedule shows games with Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, Pittsburgh, Northwestern, Navy and Illinois on successive Saturdays. That's the kind of a schedule that only the most foolish will expect to see completed without a defeat or two stuck in some place.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Snyder of Maryland beat Yale . . . he gained 134 yards by himself . . . and Yale gained only 168 altogether . . . The experts say Madigan, Maryland center, was an All-American that day . . . Minnesota has one player who is so small they had to cut down the smallest pants to fit him . . . he is named Polizzotto . . . That Brasfield, whom Wade kicked off at Alabama, quit school and got married . . . A brother of Flash Covington, old Centre star, is with Kentucky now . . . Walter Stewart, the Browns' south paw, used to throw 'em right-handed . . . Speaker also changed to left-handed . . . and Edd Roush switched to right-handed . . . The Browns are growling about their new manager.

Basketball Team Is Discussed At State University Already

AUSTIN, Tex.—Despite the loss of several stars, among them Joe King of Dallas and Captain Johnny Estes of Dallas, Coach Fred Walker's 1928 basketball team will be entirely capable of taking care of itself this year.

Holly Brock of Beaumont, one of the fastest and most spectacular players ever seen on the local court, will be leading the Steers and play none of the forward positions. Brock has been a star ever since he came to the University, and in this, his last year, he is expected to do great things.

As a running mate for his captain, Walker will have "Sugar" Camp of Rockdale, John Looney of San Antonio, Thad White of Dallas and James Miller of Peru, Ind., to pick from. Any one of these men is fully able to take care of the assignment, and Camp looked especially good last season.

"Big 'Un" Rose of Dallas, Frank Cheatham of San Antonio and Leo Baldwin of Wichita Falls are a trio of centers that would do credit to any team, and James Fomby of Austin, who comes up from the freshman team, will be another aspirant for the position.

"Red" Wray of Donna and Nona Rees of San Antonio are both old letter men, but they will find plenty of competition among the group of guards who starred as freshmen last year.

Coach Walker is optimistic over prospects, and all indications point to a good year for the Orange and White.

Want Ads Cause Numerous Smiles

MANILA.—Tmusing qualifications for employment often are cited by the many Filipinos advertising for positions through the Bureau of Labor.

There is, for example, the 29-year-old gentleman "with five years experience as municipal chief of police and four years as clerk and municipal secretary," who "wants to be employed as watchman."

A Filipino musician who declares himself to be "healthy and robust" declares that he "plays contrabass at first sight with ten years experience."

Also there is a bookkeeper "who finished the second year in the College of Liberal Arts with three years experience as such," whatever that may mean.

One young man "with three years experience as clerk, salesman and typist, desires to work in any of the three positions he has held."

Virtually all the applicants would class as accomplished linguists in any other place than the Philippines. Those asking only $30 a month salary usually speak at least three languages. One "lady typist" who desires only a "reasonable salary" cites among her qualifications the fact that she speaks English, Ilocano, Tagalog, Visayan and a little Spanish.

URGES 'PLANE PIGEONS.

PARIS.—A plea for the use of carrier pigeons in future ocean flights is made by M. Machel-Souplet, well known French authority on aviation, who believes that many lives could be saved, as during the war, if one or more of these birds were carried by every aviator crossing the sea.

He believes that on the average pigeons prove as efficacious as radio so far as flying is concerned and quotes an English statistician to show that during 17 months or 50 occasions seaplane pilots in distress released carrier pigeons and rescues were made in 45 cases. In nearly every case, the radio had failed.

Interest Growing In Church Revival

Revival service being conducted by the Evangelist A. H. Lovall, of Dacoma, Oklahoma, at the church of God Chapel, corner Valley and Lamar, streets are growing in interest and enthusiasm.

Sunday's services were exceptionally good and were marked for their definite Teaching and Holy Ghost Power.

In the morning the Subject was "The Baptism of the Holy Ghost and in the evening "The Road to Salvation."

At the morning service the Evangelist carried conviction to the hearts of his hearers in his message "The Baptism of the Holy Ghost."

"Tarry, and God will keep His promise. Each must examine his own heart to make sure it is ready and prepared for the Holy Spirit to come in and dwell," he died. Then comes the "infilling"—bringing with it "Power"—Power from God—Power to live right in this world—Power to please God in our lives.—Power to show to the world that we are truly disciples of Christ and Power to overcome the difficulties and obstacles that would hinder our service to God."

In the evening service Evangelist Lovall took for his text "Acts 16:30—"What Must I Do To Be Saved?" "Many people," he said

"today are taking this question and every man and woman, who professes to be a disciple of Christ ought to be able to answer this question convincingly.

Rev. Lovall emphasized five miles posts along the Road to Salvation that all must observe. Conviction, Repentance, Confession, Forgiving (Restitution and Faith in God to bring the result.

There will be service every evening at 7:30 and every one is invited and urged to attend. Evangelist

Lovall is planning to charts in his messages.
