Responsibilities, Unasked and Unwanted, Are Ours

As nearly as can be told at this moment, this looks like a probable result of the European war, no matter what its result:

World financial power will pass—may, is already passing—from London to New York. A financial world which has been accustomed to look to Threadneedle Street is going to look to Wall Street and to Pennsylvania Avenue.

This tendency has been marked before the war broke. There no longer seems any doubt of the result. Whether we like it or not, whether we want it or not, the United States is rapidly becoming the financial center of the world.

The relationship between the British pound and the American dollar is a weathervane that shows how this wind blows. Britain did not even try to maintain the pound sterling, but dumped it without support even before fighting started. It dropped immediately from $4.68 to as low as $3.73. During the four years of the World War it never fell below $4.51.

The whole financial relationship is different today from that of 1914. Then a sudden and expected war knocked the props out from under the American stock market. In 1939, a long-expected and well-discounted war saw an immediate advance in U. S. stocks. In 1914, the United States held about $1,900,000,000 in gold, perhaps 20 per cent of the world's supply. Today it holds more than $16,700,000,000 in gold, above 60 per cent of the world's supply.

The trade of South America is literally being dumped into our lap. Already orders have begun to come here from Brazilian and Argentinean, Colombian and Venezuelan firms supplied from Germany and Britain whose sources of supply have been cut off by the war.

This is not a question of the United States launching a campaign of financial imperialism or dollar domination. It is a fact, and it is happening today whether we like it or not, whether we want it or not.

When the war is over, the United States is going to be in a position which will dominate the financial and economic rebuilding of a shattered world. The position will be such that it will have to exercise this leadership, not from any wish to dominate, but simply to protect its own interests. It will be the world's great creditor country, the world's great source of material and facilities for rebuilding.

We may well begin now to survey this prospect and figure out what we are going to do about it. Perhaps a beginning may be made now, by linking the 21 American republics into a more interdependent economic system, with the money of all countries stabilized in relation to the dollar. Then there will be a nucleus of solidity about which a shattered world may rally after the war.

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—It has been assumed generally here that "the President has the votes" to get the changes he wants in the neutrality law.

That may be true today, but it is a wide-open question whether it will still be true when the matter comes to a showdown. Members of the so-called isolationist bloc in the Senate are beginning to be optimistic about the chances for retaining the arms embargo. A few days ago they were anything but optimistic; now they profess to sense a definite turning in the tide.

One thing which encourages them is the tremendous flood of mail that has been pouring into congressional and senatorial offices from the folks back home. One Senate postoffice attache says that it is even heavier than the flood which came in during the Supreme Court fight. It is strongly pro-embargo, and all but unanimously anti-war.

The isolationist bloc is capitalizing on that latter fact. It is speaking of itself as the "peace bloc" for one thing; for another, it seeks to rally the peace sentiment behind it by insisting that the move to repeal the embargo is based on a desire to help England and France beat Hitler and hence is a step toward war.

It seems certain that this will not be a short session. In the first place, technically, the neutrality legislation is in the hands of the Senate foreign relations committee.

On that committee are such stout foes of modification as Borah, Johnson, Vandenberg, and LaFollette. No bill will come to the floor for consideration before ample discussion has been had in committee.

All of which will take some time, during which period the isolationists will be extremely active. They will take their case to the country through public addresses, some of them by radio, some on the floor of the Senate, and some at public mass meetings.

A big meeting has been called for Washington on the night of Sept. 29 as a climax to the "march on Congress," which various peace societies are sponsoring. Another has been scheduled for New York.

After the bill reaches the Senate floor, the debate will really get going. There will not be a filibuster, but there will be a lot of speech-making; and as a result of it all, the isolationists believe, public sentiment will be rallied to such an extent that a majority in one or both houses will vote against removing the arms embargo.

The flood of mail from home is beginning to have its effect. One New England congressman not previously committed on the issue, called up a prominent isolationist senator the day before Congress convened and asked for some material to use in an argument against modification; said he had that morning received 526 letters from home, of which 521 demanded retention of the embargo.

That percentage is not maintained in all cases, of course. A number of southern congressmen, for instance, say that the majority of letter-writers in their districts urge them to vote for the President's program.

But, in a good number of cases, the keep-the-embargo majority is practically a landslide.

Another impressive thing about the mail is the proportion which comes from business and professional men—groups usually among the missing in this sort of barrage

BULLDOGS ARE DRILLED HARD FOR CONTEST

The Ranger Bulldogs had an unusually long workout Tuesday afternoon and evening, in preparation for the Weatherford-Ranger game to be played at Bulldog Stadium Friday night.

Coaches Tipton and Jennings started the practice session as soon as school was out, giving the entire squad drills on fundamentals first. After a scrimmage session the squad was divided into two teams of equal potential offensive and defensive strength and a full game was played, with straight 20-minute quarters and no allowance made for time out.

One or two new plays were used in the hard scrimmage, which had all the earmarks of a regular football game, and both teams showed more spirit than they have at a practice session for some time.

Coach Tipton has indicated that he is expecting to use his second team players a good part of the Weatherford game to give them an opportunity to show what they can do under regular game conditions. It is hoped by this system players of ability, who can be used in future games, might be developed.

Although there is no way in which the two teams can be compared, it is believed that the Bulldogs have a slight edge over their Class A opponents, but a closely contested game is anticipated, especially if the Ranger second team is used at any time in the game.

Weatherford has a strong passing attack, which is expected to bring long gains for the visitors, and which is likely to result in scores.

The game will start at 8:00 o'clock.

Oil Continues To Be Big Business And Tax Factors

By United Press

AUSTIN, Texas—Oil continued to be the major factor in increasing wealth in Texas during the past year, as assessors' report to State Comptroller George Shepard reveal.

Ector county in the West Texas oil field showed the biggest dollar gain over the previous year among the first 82 of the state's 254 counties to report. Its valuations increased $6,193,150 to a total of $23,852,400.

Yoakum county, also in West Texas, had the greatest per centage gain. Its increase of $5,860,170 more than doubled its previous valuation.

Other counties with increases of more than a million dollars included:

Refugio, $3,302,039 increase; Dallas, $3,099,000; Duval, $2,953,334; Hockley, $2,315,874; Marion, $2,150,466; Lubbock, $1,846,333; Jim Wells, $1,843,080; Gaines, $1,289,898.

Safety Education Within Department Paying Dividends

AUSTIN, Tex.—Safety education with the State Highway Department is paying big dividends, figures just released by the insurance division of the department reveal.

Since the inauguration of workmen's compensation and the accompanying factor of safety training, the accident frequency rate (the number of disabling injuries—injuries resulting in at least one day lost time—per million man hours worked) has dropped from 35.53 in 1938 to 21.62 in the first six months of 1939. The actual percentage of reduction was 39.15.

For the same periods the accident severity rates—the number of days lost per thousand man hours worked—were 4.31 for 1938 and 2.24 for 1939, making a total reduction of 48.03 per cent.

During 1938 employees of the department worked 15,195,841 man hours or about twice the 7,676,492 worked in the first six months of 1939, yet the lost time injuries for last year totaled almost five times as many as for the first six months of this year. There were 540 lost time injuries with a loss of 65,438 work days last year and only 166 lost time injuries with 17,218 days lost this year. Figuring the average wage of all employees at 40 cents an hour, this indicates a saving of approximately $50,000 for the first half of this year over half of last year. Hence, safety education, which really just began showing results this year, will probably net the highway department a total saving of $100,000 in 1939.

These cold statistics leave no doubt as to the value of safety training in working out a successful workman's compensation plan.

All Right, if They Want to Play That Way—

When the legislature passed an act in June, 1937, providing for workmen's compensation insurance for highway department employees, the newly established insurance division made prevention of accidents its first duty. As a basis for a safety program it required that all field employees should be trained in first aid. The American Red Cross cooperated by providing schools for lay instructors throughout the state. These instructors, whose regular duties range from engineers to common laborers, have taught the standard first aid course to some 8,000 employees of the department and about 3,000 employees of contractors, policemen, firemen, deputy sheriffs, ambulance drivers and other members of the public. Each field employee of the department is required to attend at least one safety meeting each month. Every resident engineer, maintenance foreman and other supervisory employee has established an individual safety council.

When the safety education program was inaugurated, January

FINGER-TIP GEARSHIFT ON STEERING COLUMN IN ALL FORD CARS FOR 1940

Enriched by refinements made possible by the manufacture under a single unified management of five cars which virtually bracket the motor car market, the Ford V-8 and the deluxe Ford V-8, 1940, announced today, present notable advances in styling, comfort, convenience and safety.

The new cars are big, substantial and powerful in appearance. Body lines are pleasingly streamlined. Front end designs are distinctively modern, with low radiator grilles, long hods and deeply rounded fenders. The trimly tailored interiors are big and roomy, with plenty of seat room, leg room, elbow room and shoulder room.

Two V-8 engines are available, an 85-horsepower engine in the Ford V-8 and the deluxe Ford V-8, with a 60-horsepower engine optional in the Ford V-8. Four Ford V-8 and five deluxe body types comprise the two lines. A new business coupe as well as a Fordor sedan, Tudor sedan and coupe are available in both. There is also a deluxe convertible club coupe with automatic top as standard equipment. Three color choices are available in the Ford V-8, six in the deluxe line.

An important new feature of the cars is a finger-tip gearshift mounted on the steering column under the two-spoke steering wheel. This provides increased room for driver and passengers in the front compartment. There is also a new controlled ventilation system. New Sealed-Beam headlights are used on all types, providing greatly increased driving vision at night.

On the 85-horsepower cars, an improved spring suspension with a longer, more flexible front spring, and a torsion bar ride-stabilizer provide an exceptionally comfortable steady ride. The ride-stabilizer also contributes to firmer, easier steering. Front and rear springs of deluxe cars are equipped with metal covers. Large double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers with self-sealing construction are fitted on all cars.

Comfort features are emphasized throughout the design. Seats are built for restful riding. Front seat backs are of new resilient type. Cushions have a new "floating" edge. Driver's seats are adjustable two ways—they rise as they are moved forward. Bodies are scientifically soundproofed, shutting out road noises. An "easy-shift" transmission, permitting speeds to be changed quietly; new design curved disc wheels and improved drums for the highly effective, quick-stopping hydraulic brakes also contribute to quietness.

The interiors of the cars appear in new decorative schemes. A pleasing duotone treatment in maroon and sand duotone distinguishes the interiors of the Ford V-8. In deluxe cars, window and door frames are finished in dark mahogany; hardware in rich maroon, knobs and escutcheon plates in sand, with striped mohair or broadcloth upholstery also in sand. In the Ford V-8, door and window moldings are in bleached walnut finish, handles are chrome-plated, with knobs and escutcheons in sand colored plastic. Upholstery is in taupe.

Instrument panels harmonize with the interior styling. Gages are grouped in front of the distinctive steering wheel. A grille for installation of radio speaker, glove compartment with lock, two ash trays and a cigar lighter are provided on the panel.

Other equipment supplied without extra cost on both the Ford V-8 and the deluxe Ford V-8 includes: front and rear bumpers and four bumper guards; spare wheel, tire and tube; twin electric air horns; dual windshield wipers with single control; battery condition indicator; foot control for headlight beams, with indicator on instrument panel, and diamond control for instrument panel lights.

Ford V-8 cars also have a sun visor, two ash trays and arm rests in the rear compartment of the sedans. A foot rest is supplied in the rear compartment of the Fordor sedan.

Additional equipment supplied on deluxe cars without extra cost include wheel bands, metal spring covers, two swivel-type sun visors, two tail lamps, ash trays in instrument panels and the rear compartment of sedans; arm rests at the driver's left and in the rear compartment of sedans, and a robe cord in the deluxe Fordor sedans.

On the Nose

Canine noseprints are as identification marks as human fingerprints says Chester Nichols, dog warden of Evansville, Ill., who has asked all city residents to have their pets "printed" like this. Ink is applied to glass plate with roll plate is pressed against dog's nose; then nose is pressed against a card.

U. S. Marines Will Receive Recruits

The United States Marine Corps is now making a metropolitan canvass of inland towns—particularly rural communities—with a view of finding the very young men possible for enlistment in the Marines.

Only 6,000 young men out of the slightly more than 10 million armed forces of the national defense are authorized by President Roosevelt for the Marine Corps. Thus, only one man out of a group of eighteen qualified candidates will be accepted for service with the "Leathernecks."

Requirements for enlistment remain the same—between 18 and 30 years of age, white, unmarried and without dependents, not more than 64 nor more than 74 inches tall, of good moral character, of excellent physical condition.

The local post office also kept advised by the Marine Corps Recruiting District headquarters of Dallas, of the requirements for enlistment. The information of young men in this locality. Preliminary physical examinations may now be by a local physician, after the Dallas office will advise applicants whether or not to proceed to that city for final examination.

SERIAL STORY

WORKING WIVES

BY LOUISE HOLMES

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Alone with her memories, Marian recalls how she let herself get deep into debt, tricked Dan into letting her go to work. He saw the danger, warned her. They had wanted a baby. Now the child was coming, and Dan was gone.

CHAPTER XXVI THE years had slipped by. A more expensive apartment, still a better one, furniture, clothes, Dan's path going stolidly onward, Marian's swooping up and away. He had tried to show interest in her progress, but he had instinctively recoiled from it. After the depression he had gradually worked back to his salary of $35 a week, and there he had remained.

After a while he hadn't called her Glad anymore. After a while she had not been particularly glad about anything. She was the best-dressed woman in the Loop, her friends were among the other well-dressed women in the Loop. She and Dan never quarreled any more. It took too much effort. Nothing mattered enough to start a disagreement. Dan had appeared to accept her life, he was agreeable and pleasant. And then, imperceptibly, a change had come over him. In his own words, he had finally arrived at the place where he could take no more.

Marian marveled, in her new position, that he had taken so much. She had been no wife to him. Far better, in that first year, to have told him of her extravagance and debts. Together they would have got out somehow. Was it too late to turn back? Was it too late to try? Sitting there in the miserable room which she had not taken the trouble to make livable, she faced about. It would be hard going, but well worth the effort whether she arrived or not.

A vague promise beckoned her on. Her back seemed to straighten. She raised her chin. Afraid? There was nothing to fear. Through her own weakness the worst had happened. She would fight her way back, one step at a time.

There was a larger apartment in the building. It had south windows, sunny and nice for a baby. She'd see about it in the morning. Her heart sent out tiny tendrils of gladness, she could almost feel them unfolding. She had found a job worth doing, a job which no one could take from her. No more sniveling and crying at fate. She'd do the job right, so that Dan would be proud of her.

There was much to be done, she could not change her faulty self over night. She'd learn to be Dan's wife, the mother of his baby. Someday, when she had learned, she'd go to him and he would be proud. Maybe his love was not dead. Maybe, if she built up instead of tearing down, he might love her again.

She went to sleep serenely. Upon waking, the first thing she saw was Janie's battered doll and she smiled. She went to the office with a lightness to her step, a softness in her eyes. It was well that she had spent Thanksgiving day with the Sands, it was well that she was fortified. For Mr. Fellows asked her to come to his desk. "Marian," he said kindly. "You've gone to pieces, d'you know it?"

SHE looked at him, smiling faintly. Gone to pieces? She had found herself. "You've got those charts in fine shape. They are usable and valuable. Now I'm suggesting that you take a rest, say six months on pay."

It was the thing she had dreaded, but her smile did not change. She raised her head. "Before you finish, G. F., I want to tell you something and ask a favor."

"All right—shoot." He had a relieved expression, as if he had been prepared for anything. "I have gone to pieces in the last few months and I want to give you the reasons, three of them. I think you'll admit that I've had cause."

"Yes?" "In the first place it hasn't been pleasant to see Sally Blake fitting herself into my shoes. It hasn't been pleasant to lose your confidence and regard."

He started to speak and she raised her hand in a silencing gesture, a gesture which asked him to hear her out. "I have it coming to me and I can take it," she went on quietly. "You and I did the same thing to Angie Doran years ago. Do you remember?"

"Yes. It's the way of the world, Marian." "The man's world," she corrected him. "Women do not belong in this world. Nature has made a better place for them, in the home, keeping their husbands happy, rearing children to be good citizens. A woman can't be supplanted in that job."

"You're right, Marian." "I know, and you know, that if I accept this leave of absence, I'll never come back to the office. Sally Blake knows it, too." She spoke without rancor. He dropped his eyes. "I'm sorry, my dear. The business world is a jungle—survival of the fittest." "There are two other reasons why I have cracked up," she continued, taking a long breath. This was the first time she had put the other two reasons into words. "My husband has left me, G. F."

"Dan left you?" Fellows' voice was comforting. "I didn't know—I'm so sorry, Marian."

"And I am going to have a baby." Tears filled her eyes. She blinked, trying to smile. Her mouth was as it had been when she first came to work for Mr. Fellows, tremulous and sweet.

Jumping from his chair, he leaned over her. "I can't believe it—I don't know what to say—you poor girl!" "Oh, no—not poor—I've never been so rich in my life. I've spent years trying to stamp out every natural instinct. I'm through stamping out—I'm free to be happy, to fight for happiness instead of success. I can't fail this time. It's written in the stars that I shall win because I am a woman and because I am going to have a baby." Her burst of eloquence ended on a hushed, thrilled note.

GENTLY, he put an arm around her shoulders and she leaned her head against him.

"And the favor, Marian?" he asked huskily. "Ask me anything—anything." "I want to stay as your secretary until the first of February. Then I'll go and I'll never come back. I'll never want to come back."

"I want you to stay," he said. "We'll make it our best time together—we'll work side by side again."

"Oh, yes!" Her eyes shone through tears. "And when you go—you'll take a bonus from this office, a bonus for very good behavior—enough to see the little fellow safely into the world."

"Thank you—only the little fellow is to be a girl." "My mistake," he laughed. Then, sobering, "What then, Marian—what then?"

"Dan will take care of us. He sends a check every month. Dan is fine and honorable. It will give me happiness to live on what he sends."

"What does he think about this? The young scamp. Why doesn't he send for you—or come back?" "He doesn't know—I don't want him to know." She looked down, her lips trembling. "I must make myself worthy of Dan. Then—if he's generous enough to give me another chance—"

Mr. Fellows patted her shoulder. "Good girl," he said. "If I can help—"

She shook her head. "You helped me ruin my life, and Dan's, to bits. I'll build it up alone." (To Be Continued)

Jackrabbit Caught By Amarillo Youth

By United Press AMARILLO, Texas — Charles Barkley, Amarillo youth, recently displayed a jackrabbit which he caught barehanded. Barkley saw the rabbit on a street and chased him into a corner between a fence and a building. "The rabbit couldn't run very well on the pavement," Barkley said. In the open, however, jackrabbits can easily outrun horses and most dogs.

Business in Southwest Is Taking A Sudden Spurt After War Starts

By United Press DALLAS, Tex.—Business in the southwest took a sudden spurt after the outbreak of the European war, the Federal Reserve bank of Dallas reported. "The rise in prices of agricultural commodities and livestock products was particularly beneficial to producers here early in September in this district." "The increased buying was better than usual in July and especially by manufacturers and dis-pending by more than the usual amount for the purpose of build-up seasonal amount in August, they up inventories in anticipation of a sharp fall in September and increased business activity or in the first half of the month and prices, but consumer pur-chases were about 5 per cent lower than those of some items, particularly during the corresponding period in heavy volume. In some in-tries the orders received were eleventh district was estimated at $3,866,000, which is slightly higher than the 1938 harvest. "An improvement in the crop production schedules and a con- siderable increase in employ- ment occurred in all states attached to this district except New Mexico,

Cranberry Season Consumption Guesstimated

By United Press FORT WORTH, Texas—W. D.

Bell, local produce broker, has computed that 60,000,000 cranber-ries will be eaten in Fort Worth in the next four months. His formula considers that each pound of cranberries has 145 ber-ries and that 400,000 pounds will be consumed. Who Was Your First Friend?

Wasn't be the kindly doctor, who ushered you into the world? Then came others... parents who taught you love, ethics and honesty... youngsters who showed you how to play with teamwork and sportsmanship... and teachers who guided you to work with a purpose. As you journey through life, you learn to appreciate the value of friends. Today, when you count your assets, experience tells you that the most priceless of all are your friendships. * * * Do you know of any better place to sow the seeds of friendship than in the atmosphere of your home? Do you know of any finer symbol of hospitality than Budweiser? Making friends is what made Budweiser the Perfect Host.

Humble Plans To Broadcast Games

The Humble Oil & Refining Company has announced that it has again contracted with the Southwest Conference for the exclusive privilege of broadcasting Conference football games. This is the fifth consecutive season in which the Humble Company has undertaken to bring play-by-play descriptions of outstanding conference contests to radio followers of the game.

The broadcasts, it was explained, are designed to broaden the service rendered by Humble Service Stations and dealers, to increase interest in Southwestern football and attendance at games, and to enable the 14,000 Humble employees to follow the conference as it develops. Plans for the broadcasting of specific games are thus for only tentative, as actual games to be broadcast are decided on from week to week as the season progresses. These tentative plans, however, call for broadcasting approximately 35 games. A capable staff of play-by-play announcers has been retained to handle the broadcasts. All are familiar to Texas radio football ed with the Southwest Conference fans, all are thoroughly acquainted—the teams, the players, the coaches, the various styles of play.

WHEN THERE'S HOT WATER READY FOR INSTANT USE

New Gas Automatic Heaters Pay Their Way

What chance has a woman for leisure when she is delayed and bothered each day by the inefficiency of an old-fashioned, worn-out water heater? Remember how many times hot water is needed . . . for dish washing, showers, bathing, shaving, laundering, housework, emergencies and many others. When hot water is not instantly available for these needs there is delay and a frantic rushing around.

Why let this go on any longer in your home when a modern automatic gas water heater is so easy to buy? Its amazing efficiency, its convenience and its aid in speeding up housework eliminate enough trouble and work to pay for its operation.

Sold on Attractive Terms

See your plumber, gas appliance dealer or gas company about bringing your hot water service up-to-date. You can well afford the easy monthly terms.
