And Now It Is Lloyd George Who Wages Peace!

Nobody is likely to argue that Prime Minister Chamberlain of the United Kingdom, on his record, is one who is likely to turn heedlessly aside from any honest offer of peace that really promises a civilized Europe. It was Chamberlain who sacrificed so much (that did not belong to England) to the cause of "peace in our time."

So it seems strange indeed to see a figure rising in the House of Commons and demanding that Chamberlain give fullest consideration to any offer of peace coming from neutrals. And stranger still that this figure should be that of the stocky little Welshman, David Lloyd George.

It is 20 years ago, true, but the world can scarcely have forgotten that this is the same Lloyd George who was so great a factor in forcing through the Versailles mill the treaty whose failure put the world where it is today.

Was it not this same Lloyd George who went before his electorate just before the peace conference opened, with a program of "hang the Kaiser and make Germany pay the full cost of the war"?

Was it not this same Lloyd George who won his election on that platform and then returned to Versailles in such a position that he could accept little less than his election platform called for?

Was it not this same Lloyd George who, with implacable Clemenceau, jammed through the peace negotiations impossible reparations demands on Germany, and who helped to jettison President Wilson's Fourteen Points?

Was it not this same Lloyd George who pushed aside the advice of the American negotiators when they said that the harshness of the Versailles terms would inevitably lead to the rise of a German leader who would seek to throw off the oppressive treaty?

Yes, it was the same man, and not one whose record would seem to argue that he is best qualified to contribute to the question of a 1939 peace. Such a peace must be better than the peace of 1919, or it will have been scarcely worth the making.

Lloyd George wants the United States dealt a hand in any new peace conference "because you have there a great power whose interests are not European interests and which has not been involved in any of these disputes and quarrels."

Whether the United States might have any interest in the making of a general peace in Europe would depend largely on whether it proved to be a mere military armistice or a real settlement going to the root of economic, colonial, financial and armament problems in a truly international way.

That Woodrow Wilson once envisioned such a world settlement, and what happened to his hopes, and why it happened, no one is in a better position to remember than David Lloyd George. And if there should appear in the United States a certain reluctance to take another hand in that game, especially if there are any deuces wild, again Lloyd George is in the best possible position to understand.

Organization of the National Dunking Association in New York puts the cruller into the blue book. It also reminds us that not all the sinkers in the world are submarines.

How About a Peace Offer on This Front?

EASTLAND MAVERICKS MEET LONGTIME FOES AT CISCO ON FRIDAY

Although a non-conference game, Eastland's engagement with Cisco Friday afternoon at 3:30 in Cisco, is expected to be one of the most interesting of the season to fans of both cities.

Years of intense rivalry between the two schools accounts for the great interest in games in which Eastland Mavericks and Cisco meet.

Eastland had never defeated Cisco in its history until when the Mavericks got over 28 points to the opponents' 7. Eastland remained victorious over the ones until 1928 when Cisco defeated the Mavericks, 14 to 6.

The record of games between the two teams from 1931 through 1938 is as follows:
1931—Cisco 6, Eastland 0.
1932—(No contest because Cisco disqualified).
1933—Cisco 12, Eastland 6.
1934—Cisco 7, Eastland 28.
1935—Cisco 0, Eastland 28.
1936—Cisco 0, Eastland 28.
1937—Cisco 0, Eastland 6.
1938—Cisco 18, Eastland 6.

This year Cisco is in Class AA and Eastland in Class A. So far this season Cisco has won one game, last two and tied one. Playing Weatherford, Cisco won 19 to 0. Against Graham, Cisco lost 7 to 0. In game with San Angelo, Cisco was loser, 19 to 13 and against Mineral Wells tied 19 to 19. Eastland has won two of its games so far this season and lost one. Against Scranton, Eastland was winner 27 to 0. In a conference game with Hico, Eastland won 33 to 6 and against Gorman, conference foe, lost 12 to 7.

The odds probably are on the side of Cisco. In weight, however, the Lobos and Mavericks are about equal.

Gorman earlier in the season gave Cisco the worst of a scrimmage, Cisco fans remember in not taking as a criterion what might happen when Eastland and Cisco meet Friday afternoon.

Reports from Cisco say that the Lobos are devoting attention to their pass defense, their weakest point; and to punting another weakness.

With Eastland, too, it was shown in last week's game with Gorman, improvement is needed in pass defense. Eastland's passing offense has not been clicking satisfactory since the start of the season but news from the Maverick practice field indicate the team will not be asleep when it meets Cisco.

The Cisco roster: Probable starters— Warren Doggett, end 51 138 Alton Lomax, end 74 139 Frank Walton, tackle 68 160 Leo Callerman, tackle 71 162

Curtis Gamblin, guard	69	140
Ray Burnside, guard	66	167
T. Stewart, center	50	185
Chesley Tipton, back	55	145
Coy Warren, quarterback	65	148
Raymond Reames, back	64	166
James Qualls, back	53	110
Cisco reserves—
Derwood Norris, center	67	142
Glenn Boyd, center	73	143
Jibby Donovan, back	58	144
C. Donoway, back	63	138
W. C. Gardner, c	52	134
Albert Henson, guard	54	138
Bill Houser, end	60	168
John Potter, guard	72	155
Kenneth Tomlinson, end	56	145
J. V. Heysler, tackle	59	154
Frank Norris, tackle	55	180
Darwin Norris, tackle	62	162

Aviation Meeting Due This Evening

Prospective flying students and those interested will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Chamber of Commerce in Eastland and hear representatives of the Ranger Flying Service. The firm is considering offering of flying lessons one or two days a week at Eastland.

SCHOOL SAFETY WEEK PROCLAIMED

Bumpers were declared more deadly than bayonets for Texas school children as Governor O'Daniel upon educators, parents and civic groups to intensify traffic safety education during School Safety Week, Oct. 30-Nov. 4. Directing the state-wide safety campaign will be, left to right in the picture, L. A. Superintendent of Public Instruction; Governor O'Daniel; Col. Homer Garrison, Director of Public Department; and George Clarke, Secretary of the Texas Safety Association.

Two Ford V-8 Cars for 1940 Presented

HERE are the two Ford V-8 cars presented for 1940. One is a Ford V-8 and the other a deluxe Ford V-8. Top, the deluxe Ford V-8 Fordor sedan; below, the Ford V-8 Tudor sedan. Both are big cars with graceful lines. Emphasis in interior styling is on fine appointments. Among numerous important features are a finger-tip gearshift on the steering column, a new controlled ventilation system and Sealed-Beam headlights for safer night driving. Two V-8 engines are available, an 85 horsepower or a 60 horsepower engine in the Ford V-8 models. Cars with 85 horsepower engine have improved suspension and a torsion bar stabilizer. Four Ford V-8 and body types comprise the A new business coupe and coupe, Tudor sedan and Ford are available in both. These deluxe convertible club automatic top standard.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The startling fact emerging from a comparison of the two measures is that the administration's proposed revision of the neutrality law is a far more stringent "isolationist" measure than the present law with the single exception of the arms embargo clause.

Under the existing law, for instance, trade in munitions to belligerent nations is prohibited; but trade in other commodities—steel, oil, wheat, raw materials, and manufactured goods of all kinds—can go on freely, and may be carried in American ships.

Under the administration's proposal, no American vessel may carry any materials whatever to any warring nation, and no American business firm may export any materials whatever to any warring nation unless title to the goods is transferred to the purchaser before the shipment is made.

Under the present law, Americans may travel to belligerent nations on American ships. Under the administration's proposal, they could not travel to belligerent nations at all on American ships, nor could they ride on anybody else's ships if those ships have to pass through a "combat area."

The present neutrality law is not called into operation unless the President so decides. The administration's proposed revision would empower Congress to put the law into effect.

The cash-and-carry section of the administration proposal would remove a feature which the administration permitted to die last spring. Strictly speaking, it is not precisely a cash-and-carry section, since it provides for 90-day credits. In this, it is similar to the present ban on loans to warring nations, which excepts ordinary commercial credits and short-term obligations "customarily used in normal peacetime commercial transactions."

Almost the only point in which the administration's proposal would represent a relaxation of the present law, then, is in its clause which would permit the export of arms and munitions.

As a tactical move, this may be of considerable importance in the fight in the Senate.

Administration leaders are now in a position to say to the isolationists, in effect: "If you're so anxious to keep the country out of war, why not take our plan? It would keep American ships and American cargoes out of the war zone completely; the present law only keeps munitions out. We could be dragged into war through the torpedoing of American ships carrying wheat or cotton, under the present law; we couldn't, under our plan."

The isolationists, however, have their answer ready for that one: "Okay. Why not keep the arms embargo, and then take the other features of your plan, and be doubly sure that we're safe?"

What all of this boils down to, of course, is the fact that the arms embargo is the single important issue at stake. To get it lifted, the administration seems prepared to yield on practically everything else—and the isolationists will give up practically everything else to keep it.

JOAN OF ARKANSAS

"Your bags," Carol cut in. "Get them and dump them here in Keith's car."
"Thanks," Joan replied. "I've arranged to have them sent out. It wouldn't be convenient to put them in the car, anyway."

CHAPTER I
CAROL REID, president of Alpha Nu, ripped open the telegram messenger handed her, and read it with a somewhat puzzled expression on her pert, freckled

"Saany—listen to this," she began. The dark, curly-haired youth sprawled on a glider looked up.

"Good news, bad news, or just news?"

"You guess." And then: "ARRIVING ON 2:15 STOP PLEASE HAVE SOMEONE MEET ME AT STATION STOP FOR YOUR INFORMATION WILL BE WEARING DUBONNET TAILORED SUIT STOP JOAN JOHNSON, TRANSFER, OMICRON CHAPTER."

"Omicron?" echoed a cute sophomore from the depths of a low-slung wicker chair. "That's U. of Kentucky, isn't it?"

Kay Granger, most beautiful of all the Alpha Nus, tossed a pillow at the sophomore. "Alabama, Chesbro. Forget your pledge manual so soon?"

"You're both wrong," Carol corrected. "It's Northwestern."

Keith Rhodes, 6 feet and 185 pounds of de luxe halfback, uncoiled himself from the glider.

"Never mind the small talk, ladies. Who's this Joan Johnson person? Interested, y'know. New words to conquer, and stuff."

Carol studied the wire again. "You can't prove it by me," she said. "Miss Joan Johnson is strictly a stranger. Funny, though—we haven't had any previous communication from her. She's certainly getting under the wire—just—with tomorrow last day fees can be paid without fine."

"Maybe she's sent 'em in by mail," Elaine Chesbro mused. And then getting back to the subject, "But what do we do about her?"

Carol looked surprised. "Why, meet her, of course. Isn't much else we can do, is there? C'mon, Keith. You've got just enough time before practice to run me down to the station. Kay won't mind."

"It gets me the way football players can afford to be like this," Carol observed, climbing into his convertible sedan. "Call out his guard."

"Only the good ones can," he said. Walking slowly toward them, you know—"

They swung down College Drive and passed the ivy-covered home economics building.

"Pull over, Keith." They were approaching Jennings' bookstore. "There's Dan Webber. Been wondering when he'd get around to stopping at the house. Let's pick him up and take him with us."

"Ok—" And then calling to a husky young man in a maroon varsity sweater. "Hey, Web—"

"Look up and down both ways," Carol added, as Webber waited for a stream of cars to pass.

"Don't worry," said Keith. "He will—that's just the sort of guy he is—dead serious about everything."

"Including the way he blocks for you," Carol said under her breath.

"Hi Carol! Hi Keith! Where bound?" He stumbled into the back and stretched his legs. He didn't have Rhodes' height nor the handsome features. Yet he was good-looking enough. His shoulders were broad and hinted of power—the kind of power that could blast an opposing end or tackle right into the stands.

DAN WEBBER could hardly remember the last time he had carried the ball for Tech. His was the blocking post and when Keith Rhodes started off on one of his celebrated off-tackle slants or wide end sweeps it was Dan Webber who usually led the way.

The wind whipped tousled hair into his serious brown eyes. "Well, where we bound for?" he repeated.

Before Carol had finished explaining they were at the station. Carol gripped their arms simultaneously a minute later as passengers came up the ramp. "Over there," she nodded, "and do you see what I see?"

They followed her gaze. Keith let go with a whistle. "Don't look now, but it's an optical illusion."

"Jeepers," said Dan softly, "call out the guard."

Walking slowly toward them, direct contrast with the excited, milling groups criss-crossing through the crowded station.

They walked up to her. Carol said: "I believe you're looking for me—or rather I'm looking for you. I'm Carol Reid, president of Alpha Nu—and of course you're Joan Johnson."

Joan Johnson smiled and extended her hand. "Right, and thanks for meeting me. . . . And then as her eyes swept deliberately over Keith and Dan: "Quite a reception committee."

"Just a couple of porch lizards who infest the terrace back at the house," Carol offered banteringly. "One of them, especially, Joan, this is Keith Rhodes, and . . ."

Before she could get any further with the introductions, Keith had taken Joan's hand.

"I've heard of you, haven't I?" she murmured. "The great Keith Rhodes . . . you play football or something, don't you?"

He grinned, holding her hand a couple of seconds longer than usual. "That's right," he admitted breezily.

WHEN Keith had released Joan's hand, Carol continued. "And this is Dan Webber . . . another varsity man."

"I'm doubly honored." She looked into Dan's rugged face, saw none of the eager challenge that had been so visible in Keith. "And what position do you play?" she inquired, almost too politely.

"Right half." He was very brief. "Keith plays left."

"Your bags," Carol cut in. "Let's get 'em and dump 'em right in Keith's car."

"Sure," Keith said. "Let me have the claim checks."

"Thanks," Joan replied, "but I've already arranged to have them sent out to the house. I don't think it would be very convenient to pile them in a car, anyway."

Keith opened the front door for her, and got in behind the wheel. Dan and Carol climbed into the rear.

"MUSSED SHIRTS" PRESENT
PASADENA, Cal.—During one of the hottest days of the season here, Superior Court Judge Frank C. Collier invited attorneys and everyone else in court to take off their coats if they so desired. Not a single man divested himself. District Attorney David J. O'Leary, sweltering, remarked: "There seems to be a lot of mussed shirts present."

Harvey Sees Bright Chevrolet Future With New Models

O. E. Harvey, local Chevrolet dealer, in an interview today looked forward to a bright future with the showing of the new 1940 Chevrolet at the Harvey Chevrolet Company on Saturday, October 14th.

Harvey commented upon the economic importance of the automobile industry, of which Chevrolet is an important part, according to the 1931 report of the United States Government Census for Manufacturers, which shows the following ranking of the five largest industries in the United States in volume of production.

The importance of the automobile industry may be further realized by a brief comparison of the transportation it furnishes. Some one has said that the steam railways are the arteries of our nation. If that is true, automobile transportation is the network of capillaries that distributes the life blood of commerce to every cranny and nook reached by man.

Important as are the great systems of railways, their capacity for transportation is limited by immovable ribbons of steel. They can serve only the communities through which they pass. The population living at a distance from railways must depend upon some other means of transportation to bring to their doors the things needed to sustain life and develop the soil.

Harvey continued by informing us that again Chevrolet will do its part in adding to man's transportation facilities by giving the public a new and improved model which will be on display Saturday, October 14.

Three Days Adrift

Adrift three days in a tiny boat without food or water, 19-year-old Joy Allen Duncan of Richmond, Va., returned to the United States on the Holland-America liner Pennland to tell a thrilling story of the sinking of a Danish ship on which she was a passenger. Miss Duncan, with her aunt, was a passenger on the S. S. Ronda which struck a mine in the North Sea Sept. 14. She was rescued with her aunt and members of the crew.

Laughton Film To Play Eastland In Benefit To Lions

Members of the Eastland Lions Club voted Tuesday at their regular luncheon at the Connellee Hotel to sponsor the showing within the next two weeks of the film, "The Beachcomber," English film starring Charles Laughton, acknowledged as the world's greatest actor.

The members of the club voted to sponsor the showing after the proposal was offered by Cecil Barham, Texas Consolidated Theatres, Inc., resident manager. The showing will be at the Connellee Theatre.

A substantial portion of the receipts will be for benefit of the club which will use them for the aid of a Boy Scout troop sponsored by the organization.

L. R. Burnside presided at the session. T. C. Williams introduced Marion Jacobs, Billie Cole and Betty on Powell, "Three Sweet Singing Syncopating Sisters of Cisco," who sang several numbers. J. L. Ball was elected to membership.

Announcement was made that the next zone meeting will be held Monday night, Oct. 30, at Breckenridge. Lions and their wives will attend.

SEAGULLS MOVE INLAND

BIDDEFORD POOL, Me.—Although they never mated at Harvard, seagulls in this section have developed such a fondness for goldfish that few remain in pools on private estates.

CORNERSTONE OUT

PASADENA, Cal.—A 15-year-old Pasadena boy, who had borrowed the family car without permission, was being pursued so hotly by his father in an effort to escape crashed into a church with such force that he knocked the cornerstone out of the foundation. The juvenile court and all concerned went into a huddle on the affair.

HORNED OWL CIVILIZED

WALLINGFORD, Vt.—William Delphia of Wallingford captured a "great horned" owl which now has taken to domestic life to the point where it now feeds on fresh meat and vegetables that comprise the Delphia family menu.

New Ford Models Attracting Interest At Local Company

Great interest has been evidenced by the public in the new Ford models, according to H. L. King and J. L. Ball, owners of the King-Ball Motors, Ford dealers in Eastland.

Many persons from Eastland and surrounding territory have viewed the new models on display and expressed commendation in the new features, it was stated.

Many have stated, it was declared, that the new Ford is undoubtedly the greatest built by the Ford company, both in its appearance and performing qualities.
