Britain Backs Off and Looks at the War Anew

Oddly silent throughout the first month of the European war, David Lloyd George has at last spoken, and when he spoke he said a mouthful.

The little Welshman who was Britain's World War premier, and one of the "Big Four" who made the peace of Versailles, has suggested that Britain make clear that it is not fighting to force back under Polish rule the unwilling people of another race, nor for restoration of a regime which had been a "wretched class government," had failed to prepare its people for defense, and then deserted them when their "feudal" government tumbled about their ears in military disaster.

These are bitter words. Lloyd George goes further to suggest that the Russian invasion is not as bad as the German because Russia took over territory largely occupied by non-Polish peoples. His implication is that even if Germany should be forced to disgorge the part of Poland it has swallowed, Britain should not ask the same of Russia, and that even if Polish state should be re-established, it would look much different from the one set up in 1920.

According to his book, "The Truth About the Peace Treaties," published last year, Lloyd George is not inconsistent in this stand. No one gave more trouble than the Poles in the Versailles deliberations, he indicated, and cities repeated instances in which the Poles demanded that more territory be included in the new Poland than was justified by populations. France, he said, wanted Poland to be as large as possible for military reasons, and French pressure led to including in Poland "populations which would be an alien and hostile element... a source of permanent weakness and danger."

The weakness has been shown, the danger realized. Now what?

Even more interesting than what Lloyd George said was the time he said it, just when Poland as a functioning nation had ceased to exist. Just what is Lloyd George trying to tell the British people and the world? He denied that he wanted to relieve Britain of her guarantee to Poland, though he had been against making it without Russian support.

What will Britain do now? The Polish war is over. Restoration of a Polish state is one of the British war aims.

But what kind of a Polish state? Lloyd George's letter strongly suggests that the part of Poland taken by Russia may never be restored. This would seem an effort to assure Russia that Britain does not want to fight her, but only Germany.

Any restoration of Poland can be accomplished only by a full-dress war on Germany. Such a war has really not started yet. Will it start soon, and will it start at all? And if it does, what will be the stated war aims of the British and French?

At the end of a month of the European war, these are the questions Britain and France may be expected to answer. Until such questions are definitely answered, it is difficult to pierce the fog that now lies heavy over the European war scene.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The real question at stake in the fight over revision of the neutrality law is both simpler and more profound than the general trend of argument so far has revealed it to be. Basically, it is just this:

Is this country going to decide now, once and for all, that the most important thing is to see Hitler beaten—or is it going to decide that the most important thing is to stay at peace even if that may mean having to swallow a Hitler victory over England and France?

Underneath all of the window dressing, that is what is at stake. The struggle over repeal of the arms embargo has become a symbol. Boiled down, what it symbolizes is—do we take sides, or don't we?

The one driving force behind the effort to remove the arms embargo is a conviction that this country cannot afford to stand by and see Hitler win.

That conviction rests on the belief that the world just won't be big enough, in the long run, to hold both democracy and the totalitarian idea. Because of that belief, this administration is not now neutral.

It wants to help England and France, and that is why it wants the arms embargo lifted. And since the actual, concrete effect of lifting the embargo is less important than its symbolic effect, the administration—in the Pittman revisions to the Bloom bill—is willing to consent to practically any stiffening of the present law if only the embargo clause can be lifted.

It ought to be added that the revisions are entirely sincere in saying that they do not believe that lifting the embargo will lead to war. There is no need to doubt that the administration means what it says when it announces that it proposes to keep the country at peace.

But it is equally true that the reason for trying to get the embargo lifted is a desire to exert America's influence against Hitler. The administration wants to see Hitler beaten. That is the basic fact that underlies all of the talk about "true neutrality," and the like.

On the other hand, there are the isolationists. Like the administration, they are centering all of their attention on the arms embargo itself. The fact that the Pittman revisions give them practically everything but the embargo leaves them cold. For the conviction which holds them together is the conviction that the one important thing for America is to stay at peace—that the calamity of going to war is so much greater than the calamity of a Hitler victory that the latter ought to be risked rather than the former.

And the bitterness of the fight now being waged can't be understood unless you understand the thing which many men in Washington are saying privately—but which few say in public. These private opinions boil down to this:

That because the arms embargo does symbolize so much beyond its actual content, we are liable to commit ourselves to something we can't back out of if we repeal it. If, that is, we have an administration that whole-heartedly wants Hitler beaten, and if we repeal the arms embargo in order to make Hitler's defeat more likely, then the die is cast and we are in for it whenever something beyond mere repeal of the arms embargo is necessary to keep Germany from winning.

SERIAL STORY

JOAN OF ARKANSAS

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Illustrated by Art Krenz

"Remember that Purdue game when Keith scored two touchdowns in the last five minutes? They couldn't touch him. And Webber leading the way."

YESTERDAY: A cryptic telegram announces the arrival of a "transfer" to Alpha Nu sorority. Tech's football hero, Keith Rhodes, his blocker, Dan Webber and Carol Reid, chapter president, meet the train. The girl—Joan Johnson—is the most beautiful cued they have ever seen. Keith tumbles immediately.

"Oh—you aren't?" Her tone was icy. "And with what do you concern yourself besides football?" "Ceramic engineering," he answered curtly. "How quaint," she murmured. Keith laughed. "Sure—I tell him he's wasting his time, but he

"You abide by all the rules don't you?" Joan observed. "His only bad habit," Keith cut in. "Okay, Web—let's go before you work yourself up into a frenzy and kill some poor third-string end." "Well, there goes the varsity,"

CHAPTER II

"YOU'RE going to like it here at Tech," Carol said enthusiastically. "But how come you transferred from Northwestern? And why didn't you let us know? Not that it makes much difference, was it a sudden decision on your part?"

Joan looked back coolly. "Just wanted a change of scenery, I guess. Have a successful rush week?" she asked in turn. "Swell... best in years. Fourteen pledges all sewed up." "All swell lookers with plenty of money," Keith chimed in. "Alpha Nu certainly gets the cream of the crop—the bestest and the mostest. Incidentally, the girls are wondering if they're getting a lemon in you. They'll be breaking their necks to see what they got."

"Pay no attention to him," Carol advised, "and tell us more about yourself. That is, if you don't mind the audience."

"Not at all. I was born in Arkansas but have lived in Connecticut for the last five years. I was having a pretty fair time at Northwestern, but Dad thought it would be better if I went to school nearer home. You see, mother died last year and Dad figured it would be more convenient for me to come home week-ends or for him to pay me a flying visit for a day. So I transferred here for my last two years. Dad wanted me to come here in the first place."

"What's your major?" Dan asked curtly, entering the conversation for the first time. She glanced back. "Why, none, really. Just fiddling around with a general arts course, learning how to kill time."

"Not surprised at all," he remarked, but was surprised at himself in turn for having the nerve to say as much.

keeps harping on the fact that he doesn't want to sell bonds or teach physics when he graduates. But you'll like him when you get to know him better. Great guy, Web is... lived with him for three years and I know."

Joan turned rearward again. "Hear that, Mister Webber? You're getting a plug. I'm being told I'll like you when I get to know you better."

"It's doubtful," he returned dourly, and both girls laughed. "Two more blocks and they drove up before the Alpha Nu house. There were a half dozen girls on the terrace and as she walked up the flagstone path Joan felt, rather than noticed, their frank looks of appraisal."

"You sure had us guessing," Kay Granger said during the course of introductions, "but then, you couldn't blame us, popping in at the last minute."

Joan smiled in agreement and turned to hear Chesbro chatter: "Pay your fees yet? There'll be a goshawful lineup at the registrar's office tomorrow if you haven't."

"I refuse to be worried," Joan replied lightly as they entered the house. They went on a tour of inspection and showed Joan the room she was to occupy with Marianne Burrows and Chesbro. Marianne was a junior from Cincinnati with small, almost doll-like features and dusty blond hair.

"Hope you don't mind three in a room," Marianne laughed, "but it won't be so bad because I take up hardly any space at all."

They went downstairs and found Keith and Dan ready to leave. "Web's afraid we'll be late to practice and wanted to dash off. I insisted on staying to say good-by—for the time being, that is."

"I wasn't just rushing off," Dan blurted. "Keith knows darn well we're due down at the stadium by 3:30, latest. We have four days before the first game."

Carol led Joan over to the glider. "There isn't a girl on the campus who wouldn't go wild over Keith Rhodes if he gave her half a chance," she explained. "He's the glamor boy if ever there was one. But he just isn't the kind that can be planned down. And the best have worked on him."

There was a slight gleam in Joan's eye. "That so?" she purred. "Maybe people around here don't have what it takes."

Carol detected the challenge in her voice and smiled. "It's an open field, darling."

"May I be so bold as to ask if you're one of those who has tried?"

Carol laughed heartily at that. "Lord, no. Keith and I come from the same town-upstate... went through high school together. I probably know him better than anyone on campus."

"Really," she went on to explain, "Keith is a swell kid. But to him life is just a lark... and he's never heard of clipped wings."

It was then that an express truck rolled up. "Luggage for Miss Joan Johnson," the driver announced, coming up the walk.

THE RECORD... Facts That Concern You

ONE INCOME THAT'S INCREASED MIGHTILY SINCE 1932!

IN 1932 (last year before repeal) BEER'S TAXES WERE PRACTICALLY NOTHING!

*Data from Liquor Control Board, includes beer license fees and estimate (not official) of mixed license fees.

BEER helps even those who do not drink it! To the tune of a million dollars a day nationwide, beer tax revenue reaches back into every community, to help pay for relief, for public works, for education... and to lift a burden that would otherwise rest directly on the taxpayers.

To this, add a million new jobs made by beer. And a 100 million dollar farm market.

How can you keep these benefits... for you and for us? Brewers of America realize this depends on keeping beer retailing as wholesome as itself. They want to help public officials in every possible way. They cannot enforce laws, they can—and will—cooperate!

You May Have Been Cause of a Fatal Accident Recently

CHICAGO.—Have you ever been responsible for a fatal automobile accident without knowing it? Have you ever zoomed along the highway at night unaware that the car you just passed crashed into the ditch—and it was your fault?

Questions of this type were pre-pounded today by the Trippie Safety Foundation of Chicago, in a report of a survey on "head-light glare," which reveals that hundreds of persons are injured annually, many fatally, because drivers have been "blinded" by glaring lamps of cars traveling toward them.

The survey points to newspaper headlines from all parts of the country which emphasize the danger of glaring head lamps. "Blinded By Lights, Crashes Into House"; "Blinded, Hits Fence"; "Mishap Caused By Blinding Lights"; "Blinded By Lights, Youth Dies"; and "Family Injured Lights Blamed."

"Every motorist who drives on the highways at night is at the mercy of selfish drivers who refuse to dim their glaring head lamps," Graham Trippie, president of the safety foundation, said. "The solution of the problem depends on educating drivers to the danger of glaring lights, rigid enforcement of laws compelling motorists to dim their lights when passing cars coming toward them, and the perfection of lamps which give a maximum of illumination and a minimum of glare."

While the "sealed-beam" headlights promised for the 1940 cars may on the road still carry glaring head lamps. To overcome the hazard, the Trippie foundation suggests the mounting of safety auxiliary lights about twenty inches from the ground—lamps tance along the highway and al-which throw light for a long distance low no uncontrolled illumination to stray above the center of the lamp.

Nursery Bottles Removed As Oct. Funds Assured

So that citizens who contribute to the nursery project in Eastland may know that sufficient funds have been secured to assure the operation this month, "donation" bottles were removed from counters of business houses Thursday.

Those correlating efforts to assist in the operation of the nursery explained that each month when sufficient money has been given to the school the bottles would be removed.

The bottles will make their appearance again on November 1. Those who are able were asked to contribute. When enough money has been secured for November then the bottles, like this month, will again be removed. They will be replaced the following month.

Officials thanked citizens of Eastland for the manner in which they are responding in supporting the nursery school. It became necessary recently to secure the support of Eastland citizens in the operation of the nursery because of new federal regulations.

"world's biggest school bus," recently delivered for use at Big Lake High School in Reagan County.

Purchased through a Sweetwater truck concern, the special bus is 38 1-2 feet long. It will carry students from Texon, Rankin, and Santa Anita to the Consolidated High School in Big Lake.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches—people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking poisons out of the blood. They help most people pass out 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging headaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, backaches and dizziness. Erupting pimples, spots, skin eruptions, itching, and itching sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Don's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Don's Pills.

MEASURING VALUES IN TERMS OF SERVICE—

The average American like you and me drifts along from day to day without giving much thought to the question of values. We buy what we want, go where we please and enjoy an unrestricted freedom unknown in any other land.

And we have the right to measure our own values, too. In the other countries, not so—the individual has them all measured, wrapped up and delivered, and what a price he pays!

When you buy something, or do something, where is its value? The folks who are getting some where today are measuring values in terms of personal service and community up-lift. Spending money for the home or on the home is measuring values in the right direction.

SERIAL STORY JOAN OF ARKANSAS BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

YESTERDAY: Joan of Arkansas the Alpha Nu house agent. Carol tells her that Keith had-to-get-glamor-boy, Joan to the challenge. The arrival of her luggage—two trunks, suitcase—make the girls wonder if she owns a department store.

CHAPTER III
Joan regarded Joan quizzically she supervised the job of hanging her belongings upstairs. "You don't mind me asking," she said, "just what do you have those cases?"
"Registered surprise," she said. "Why, isn't much here at all. Had a lot of stuff at home before I didn't think there'd be room for everything."
"You mean you had more than at Northwestern?" Bonnie inquired incredulously.
"Joan struggled with a 'But there were only two room there."
"Kay said significantly. I caught the note. 'But don't be wrong,' she added hastily. 'There ought to be plenty of room for course,' Carol cut in. Then, looking at her watch, 'Just about time to unpack before dinner, help you,' Marianne offered helpfully, and set about unstrapping suitcases.
"More than a half hour Marianne 'cooed' and 'ahhed' at each they hung away or placed cramped drawer space.
"There were six formal gowns, no one else in the house had more than three... tricky sweater and sportswear of every description... and Marianne counterparts of shoes.
"She said breathlessly, 'Are we going to put all this room is bulging at the seams yet?'
"She looked up, her face flushed. 'I'm up,' she replied mournfully. 'Guess I'll have to ship of this junk back home.'
"There was a sacrifice in Marianne's voice. 'Junk! I wish I had like this.'
"She met Joan at the foot of stairs after she had showered and changed clothes. She ushered to the living room for more instructions.
"The freshmen were required to live in university dormitories, but were about a dozen girls she had not yet met.
"It wasn't instinct which told she was the center of all that was all too apparent.
"Only she wished her arrival had been quite so theatrical. That she had meant it that—but as far back as she could remember, everything she did was the lines of the spectacular. graciously as possible she set breaking through their re-
"Have any trouble with this," she asked Carol.
"Carol laughed. 'Oh, once in a while some of the girls start count-alongies, but for the most part manage to please everyone.'
"She looked at Joan for a moment then continued. 'Why—any-thing in particular to which you're referring?'
"Absolutely nothing. I'm one of those fortunate souls who can eat anything."

"I'm glad," Carol said simply, and Joan knew exactly what she meant.
After dinner, girls who were expecting dates went up to dress. The rest, Joan included, adjourned to the terrace. The cool late September air was like a tonic as Joan relaxed in a comfortable wicker chair.
Marianne and Elaine Chesbro lounged in a glider beside her and told her about school, the Tech chapter of Alpha Nu, and themselves. About an hour later Carol came out and suggested they walk down to the Varsity for cokes.
"THE Varsity was a typical college hangout. Twosomes and foursomes filled small booths. On the wall hung pictures of Tech football teams, varsity men, pictures of homecoming queens and their court, and prom shots.
"Someone put a coin in the electric nickelodeon and got a hot Kay Kyser number.
"They squeezed into a booth and after a few minutes a perspiring, harassed student waiter took their orders.
"We did okay," Chesbro observed. "Orders taken in four minutes as the crow flies. Usually wait 15."
"It was just after they finished their drinks that Keith Rhodes walked in with Barney Hughes, football captain.
"Almost immediately, it seemed, Keith spotted them and picked his way over while Hughes stopped to chat at another booth.
"Howdy, folks," he greeted, but he looked directly at Joan.
"They returned his greeting in chorus and then he looked above their table and grinned.
"You sure picked the right pew. Couldn't done better myself if I'd ushered you over here."
"They glanced up. Right above them on the wall was an action picture of Keith Rhodes.
"It's simply awful how that man plagues us," Chesbro sighed.
"He squeezed her straw in the middle, cutting off the flow of liquid. Then to Joan: 'How about me picking you up in the morning for a sightseeing tour of the campus? Best guide in these parts.'
"Sounds good to me," she said. "Better pick me up at the administration building. I've got to pay my fees. Will 10 be okay?"
"It's a date," he promised, and waved a goodby salute to them all.
"Our great Mister Rhodes is wasting little time," Marianne observed as they walked back to the house. "But if you're smart you'll discount that grin of his about 70 per cent. Three dates with one girl is just about par for the course with him."
"SHE wore a sweater set in two shades of blue next morning. And no one could wear blue the way Joan Johnson did.
"Walking up the steps at the administration building she almost bumped into Dan Webber.
"Hi, there," she cried. "What're you trying to do—block me out of the play?"
"For the briefest second—but not too brief for her to notice—he took in the glory of two shades of blue.
"Looked to me as though you were doing the blocking. Anyway—what're you doing here?"
"Paying my fees," she told him as they walked through the double doors.
"Me, too," and then he stopped in his tracks. There were about 250 students in line outside the bursar's office.
"Looks like all the late-payers in school had the same idea we did—get here early and avoid the stampede. Well, we're just doomed to a long session in line."
"Hey," she wailed, "that'll take an hour. I can't wait that long."
"You will—and like it," he said flatly.
"Oh, will I?" Her tone was challenging, conspiring. She walked over to a pay station by the wall. He followed more out of curiosity than anything.
"Going to call Prexy and tell him what you think of the nasty way he treats newcomers, no doubt?" he inquired.
"No doubt—not. But the telegraph company will be glad to furnish a messenger to stand in line to pay my fees for me," she explained brightly.
"Clever girl, aren't you?"
"I think so."
"You're too damned clever," he replied almost venomously, and walked over to take his place in line.

I Give You Texas By BOYCE HOUSE

This is the time of year when the football fan takes pencil and paper and, from comparative scores, tries to figure out the winner of the game coming up. And this calls to mind an expression of W. J. Barnes, former district attorney of Eastland, now practicing law in Houston:
"A coon can whip a dog; a dog can whip a possum and a possum can whip a coon."
It's like the story of the little boy who was given this problem: A frog fell in a well 21 feet deep; he climbed up two feet every day and dropped back three feet every night. How long did it take him to get out of the well?
The boy worked on the problem for several hours and then reported to the teacher, "Give me three more pencils and another tablet and I'll have him through to China by tomorrow morning."
For "color," it would be difficult to surpass a one-time oil boom town holding a reunion. Glimpsed in the crowds at the recent Breckenridge homecoming were Lea Walker of Ranger (brother of the late Breck Walker, chief figure in the development of Breckenridge) who is said to be the only child born on a cattle drive up the trail; Bill Little of Hot Spring, N. M., who drilled the discovery well in Stephens County and now owns a gold mine in New Mexico—he brought back $2,000 in gold flakes as proof; and "Shorty" Thompson, owner of the Burch Hotel, whose first job in Breckenridge was in a furniture store and the first sale he made was an ordinary table at the amazing price of $150—and one for Ripley is that, just recently, Thompson bought that table back for $7!
One of the exciting stories told of the Breckenridge boom was that of a "shooter" on a Sunday morning who grabbed a shell filled with nitroglycerin when it was forced back up out of the hole and thereby saved the lives of the congregation in a church house a few feet away. Tradition had not preserved the name of the hero but Edgar B. Davis, who works in ELECTRICAL APPLIANCES Texas Electric Service Co.

This-and-that:
Is Harley Sadler of Sweetwater, celebrated tent-show owner and comedian, going to run for Congress?
Senator Wilbourne B. Collier of Eastland, first man in the history of the district to be elected for a second term, is likely to run again next summer.
No-Man's-Land Beauty Shop is in Wichita Falls.
Another odd name: Guaranty ice cream parlor in Ranger—the origin: the Guaranty bank was located in the building during the oil rush.
From the unpublished autobiography of a reporter:
Henry Helms, leader of the Cisco bank robbers (he shot two officers to death) was on trial for his life in Eastland and I was sitting right behind him. Suddenly, he whirled in his chair and his cold, gray eyes gazed into mine. Perhaps he had expected to find a friend had made his way there, ready to hand him a pistol with which he could shoot his way out of the courtroom; or maybe he hoped to find the chair occupied by an officer who might have been caught off guard and his pistol seized. Anyway, he turned back around after a few seconds.
And speaking of "chilled," did you ever eat a chilled Pecos cantaloupe at Pecos? If not, it's worth the trip (provided you don't have to drive over 300 miles each way).
