When the Value of Citizenship Is Appreciated

We Americans take our citizenship pretty casually. To most of us it is a commonplace. It came to us through no effort of our own but was ours merely by the accident of birth. We sacrificed nothing to gain what the men of Valley Forge fought and froze and starved to gain—the right to be Americans.

Thus accepting as a matter of course the boon of citizenship, we have too often taken just as casually the duties that go with it—the duty to take an active, intelligent interest in public affairs; the duty to vote with the public welfare in mind; the duty to give freely a reasonable measure of co-operation in social matters.

Since 1929 there has been a change. Conditions have been such as to show even the indifferent that public affairs really do matter. Circumstances have placed the national government on every man's doorstep, and interest in public affairs has mounted. The same thing has become doubly true since Europe's long mismanagement has finally brought that continent once again to war. Now as never before, public affairs matter.

It is inspiring, therefore, to see new citizens flocking to the courts to take the oath of allegiance to the government of the United States. Anyone who has had the least touch with the process of naturalization, and seen the glowing eyes and upraised heads of those who take that oath for the first time, knows how valuable the great majority of these new citizens are to the Republic. For the time has passed when passive acquiescence to the law is enough. The Republic needs active, loyal work in its behalf as it has not needed it for many years. It needs the firm, intelligent guidance, that can come only from an alert, informed, loyal and determined citizenship. It needs not blind and unthinking cannon-fodder citizens, but free men and women who will gladly and voluntarily play their part as citizens of a free Republic.

How long has it been since you, native-born American, have repeated the oath that is being taken every day by new citizens? It would not hurt every one of us to read it through and accept, mentally but consciously, the responsibilities it implies. Here is that oath.

"I do solemnly declare, on oath, that I will absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty; that I will support and defend the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same. So help me God!"

Though we'd suspected it for some time, it is finally officially announced that Sreeno is not one of the Marx Brothers.

A London paper predicts Hitler will offer to quit. This puts British prognostications about on a level with forecasts that Brooklyn would win the pennant this year.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The Russian gentleman who was born Samuel Ginsburg and now calls himself Walter J. Krivitsky has had an uneasy time of it during the months preceding his appearance here as a witness before the Dies committee on un-American activities.

On the one hand, he has been afraid of violence at the hands of Russian agents. For that reason he has kept in strict seclusion, remaining under cover in cities in New York and New England.

On the other hand, he has been afraid of the United States government, which has been trying to deport him. Only the intervention of Congressman Dies kept the government from shipping Krivitsky back to France last spring.

The true story of Krivitsky's stay in this country is only now coming out.

He entered the country on Nov. 10, 1933, carrying a French certificate of identity, French travel papers and a permit allowing him to live in France until December, 1940. His papers permitted a four-month stay in America.

At the same time the Labor Department (of which the Immigration Service is a branch) received a communication from William Bullitt, U. S. ambassador to France, saying that Leon Blum, ex-premier of France, had asked that all legitimate courtesies be extended to Krivitsky and had stated that he, Blum, was ready to vouch for him. Bullitt, who was in Washington at the time, passed this on without recommendation.

Krivitsky had lost his Russian citizenship—by his own account he was a former chief of Soviet military intelligence for western Europe, now in very bad with Dictator Stalin—and was what the State Department calls a stateless person, or a man without a country.

He joined forces with a literary collaborator to prepare some special articles and begin work on a book, and vanished from sight.

Nothing more was heard of him until March 21, when he applied for a renewal of his permit, due to expire March 23. On March 24 he was formally notified that his application had been received and that he would be informed of the decision in due course.

On April 15 appeared the first of his articles—an "expose" of conditions in Soviet Russia, printed in the Saturday Evening Post. Chairman Dies immediately decided that Krivitsky ought to testify before the un-American committee.

Early in May a friend of Krivitsky's went to the immigration service and complained that Krivitsky hadn't yet had any word about his application. He was told that the application would be denied and that Krivitsky would presently be notified.

Dies heard of this, and promptly served Krivitsky with a subpoena, to prevent his deportation until after his appearance as a witness.

Krivitsky lived uneventfully thereafter until June 29, when three things happened.

Newspaper stories announced that he was about to be deported; the company which had put up the $500 bond under which he had been admitted to the country was notified that if he did not surrender within five days his bond would be forfeited; and Immigration Commissioner James I. Houghtelling telephoned the Dies committee and asked if Krivitsky was under subpoena.

Told that he was, Houghtelling said no action would be taken to interfere with his appearance before the committee.

There the matter rested until Krivitsky was finally put on the witness stand just the other day.

Alameda Club Visits A Model Kitchen

The Alameda home demonstration club met Friday at 2:30 p. m. October 20, in the home of Mrs. H. E. Calvert.
 After the recreation and business sessions, Miss Ruth Ramey, county home demonstration agent made a talk on feather comforts.
 She said it took 10 yards of material for the top and lining, and this should be a good grade (and the samples she showed were 49c per yard) and that the floral designs were more satisfactory as they did not show soil places as plain as the solids.
 She also said she would give a feather comfort demonstration in her office in the very near future, but there were some articles she would have to install first.
 As Mrs. Calvert is our kitchen demonstrator, she took the club members through her "new" kitchen. Instead of it being a dark kitchen with only one door to the outside and one window, also an old ice box, she has put in a new floor, new linoleum, two windows in the south, that let down from the top as well as raise up from the bottom, papered with a white back ground with a small design paper, built in a storage cabinet, put in sink and a Servel Electrolux. The club voted that her kitchen had been improved one hundred per cent.
 Mrs. Calvert passed cake and iced punch to visitors: Mesdames Jim Lové, Walton Blackwell, Bill Reed and Miss Ruth Ramey and Eloise King and club members, Mesdames S. R. Rogers, Shirley Brown, Melva Love, W. H. Lee, G. O. Smith, L. C. Cooksey, G. H. King, E. E. Blackwell, John Love, Joe Blackwell, Dick Weekes, A. H. Dean, Mattie Walton and Mrs. Calvert, the hostess.

Eastland Boys To Meet On Gridiron In Commerce Game

If Travis Cook catches a pass or two from Tommy Samuels of the Howard Payne College of Brownwood team Friday night of this week when that school meets East Texas State Teachers College at Commerce, Eastland fans would likely call it merely a force of habit on the part of both.
 For several years Samuels and Cook at Eastland High School formed one of the most efficient passing teams in high school play of this section. Samuels is still passing with success at Howard Payne.
 Cook is playing in the backfield at ETSTC and this year has passed many times with success as about equal as the time when he was receiving Samuels' passes.
 Asked recently what will happen in the Friday night game, Samuels said jokingly, "I guess I'll throw to Cook and Cook to me."

 The old soldier said he believed he was the only survivor of the 1,200 men who made up the Wolseley Expedition.
 Ramsay said he carried telegraph dispatches between Calgary and Edmonton during the second Riel rebellion.

Membership Drive Begun By P. T. A. Organizations

The Parent-Teacher organizations of both the South Ward and West Ward schools begin their annual membership drive soon with a plea to all parents to join in this work, as stated as follows: "The Parent-Teacher Association offers you an opportunity to definitely become a part of the school where your child is going to spend the greater part of his childhood and youth, through active Parent-Teacher membership. Our public schools of today are the most democratic institutions in our present civilization. As a member of this folk-movement you will have a part in preserving the finer things of our democracy, of building better homes and better communities.

"Youth's greatest craving is for stability and security. Parents and teachers are challenged as never before to assure for the child the type of teacher, the kind of training in the home and school which will make it possible for him to earn a living. You have this privilege—through membership in a Parent-Teacher movement.

SERIAL STORY

JOAN OF ARKANSAS

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD
COPYRIGHT, 1936, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Kay Granger wins the homecoming queen election. Keith doesn't get in from the celebration until 1:30. Webber is angry, later blames Joan for keeping Keith out. She starts to protest that she did keep Keith from drinking, then stops, walks away from Dan.

CHAPTER XIV
A HIGH-GEARED Tech steamroller crushed West Virginia that Saturday and started preparation for the homecoming game with Vanderbilt.

"Won't be able to see you at all this week," Keith told Joan in class Monday. "Slocum is going absolutely punch-nutty. Honest, the poor guy is going around muttering to himself. Why, his wife has forbidden him to drive the car because he can't get his mind off football. She's afraid he'll wrap himself around a tree while trying to dope out a new play."

Keith shook his head dolefully. "He's got us eating, thinking and dreaming football. And that means there'll be no homecoming dance for us Friday night. We thought maybe the Old Man would let us show up for a half hour or so but he's afraid some second string tackle will break an ankle shagging. So," he sighed, "we don't stir out of the Country Club."

"Gee," she said. "Too bad. We could have had fun."

"I can get one of the boys to take you . . ." he offered.

"Nope, that's out. No more pinch-hitting."

HOMECOMING activities really got under way Friday. Young grads, old grads—they poured back for two days of riotous reminiscence. They descended upon the university district and really took over.

Joan met so-and-so from '32 and some others from '34. And then there was a flock of matronly Alpha Nus from '24 and '25 who stopped in with paunchy, sm-bald husbands.

"Something for us to look forward to," Elaine cracked.

All but a handful of girls had dates for the dance that night in the gym. Kay Granger, done up in black marquisette, was prepared to reign in all her queenly glory.

"To put it in simple words," said Joan, sweeping a glance over her, "you're the nuts."

and helping others along the way. The leaneer is one who wants and accepts everything, does nothing, grumbles daily, thinks the world owes him a living. As soon as possible he shifts his burden to the back of a lifter.

"Are you a lifter or a leaneer? Anyone interested in the child, upon payment of dues, join the West Ward or South Ward P. T. A."

"Know the child's teachers and playmates, study parent education, and enjoy the friendliness which is the watchword of Parent-Teacher work."

Andy Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jess N. Taylor, underwent an appendicitis operation Thursday morning in the Payne Hospital. His condition was reported as being satisfactory.

"Did you ever stop to think that you might have been standing here instead of me had you so desired?" Kay asked softly.

Joan pushed her out of the room. "G'wan, get going before I start bawling. I'm not going to your little party, y'know. And besides, Bob Lake has been waiting for you for 15 minutes."

Bob Lake, as chairman of the homecoming committee, was Kay's escort for the dance, and the game next day. He was a Delta Rho from Memphis and had a cute southern drawl.

"Have fun," said Joan as they went out the door.

SATURDAY was crisp and golden, not only from the bright November sun but from thousands of mums that were in evidence.

Sitting in the stands, Joan, Carol and the others felt a glow of pride as they witnessed the pregame ceremonies. A motorcade of cars rolled around the running track and came to a stop before a portable microphone. That was when Kay took over.

She greeted the returning grads and enthusiastically kissed the rival captains good luck as a battery of photographers went to work. Then as an afterthought Kay ran over and gave Barney Hughes an extra smack for good measure and the crowd roared.

"Cute, eh?" Elaine giggled.

The more serious business at hand wasn't quite so cute. Vandy, although the underdog, was loaded for bear. Even though the southerners were crippled by injuries they put up a terrific battle until they ran out of competent reserves in the last half.

Midway in the third quarter, slipping lightly behind Dan Webber, who rode the Vanderbilt end all the way out of the play, Keith went down to the 6-yard line on a 33-yard jaunt. Tony Mangano bucked it over in two plays. A few minutes later Johnny White heaved one straight down the middle. Barney took it on the dead run, picked up a couple of interferences and went over standing up.

OLD MAN SLOCUM ruled with an iron hand before any game but he always let up after it was over. The Gammas celebrated the week-end with an informal dance at the house, and this time Joan didn't miss.

Keith kissed her lightly in the car when he called for her and she gave him a hug. "Nice going today, Rhodes. We really poured it onto them, didn't we?"

"Yeah, once we got started." And then "Say, it's remarkable the way you've taken to the vernaular—"poured it on them," and stuff like that."

She laughed. "Don't look now, but I'm getting an awful big kick out of this football season. And no one's pulling for an undefeated year more than I am—and no one wants Tech to go to the Rose Bowl more than I do."

"How about me making All-American," he prompted.

"That goes without saying, you dope," she said, snuggling up close just as they arrived at the Gamma house.

IT was a swell dance. Gangs of people were there and complete introductions were impossible. But she deliberately managed an introduction to Dan Webber's date, a sweet Pi Gam named Eileen Campbell.

She spent a casual five minutes with Eileen while they were repairing their makeup and it didn't take much more than that to admire Dan's taste. Eileen, Joan knew, was as sweet as they come.

"Wasn't Dan swell today?" Eileen enthused. "I was sitting right below the press box and I heard one sports writer tell another that he had never seen one man make so many tackles in a single game."

Joan straightened her corsage on her shoulder. They were gardenias, her favorites. "He sure was," she agreed without looking up. And then she went out to join Keith on the dance floor.

"It's suddenly occurred to me," Keith whispered in her ear, "that I'm dancing with the most beautiful girl in the house."

"You're not being very gallant," she replied. "Is that all the territory you can take in?"

She felt the pressure of his hand. "I see by the papers that we have a full moon tonight," he said.

"I don't believe what I read in the papers," she whispered.

"Fine. Then let's go out and see for ourselves. You're right about not trusting the papers."

They strolled out on the terrace and continued out to the garden in back.

"There it is. Take a look. Big as a basketball."

She looked up and he took her in his arms and kissed her—hard. He kissed her again and held it for a long moment.

"Hey," she gasped. "Give me air."

When she looked up over Keith's shoulder she saw Dan Webber looking at them from the terrace. He was alone. Dan stared at them for a brief second, then turned and went back inside.
