NAZIS WARN THEIR ATTACK IS STARTING

By United Press
Nazi leaders today said the German army had felt "only the beginning" of its fighting power on the sea and in the air.
The long-expected offensive against the English still is to come according to comment in Berlin, in this week's Allied sea losses and on Monday's Nazi aerial raid in the Channel Islands.
"More surprise attacks will follow," the German statement said.
Allied commanders have been expecting a Nazi thrust for a long time. In fact they have been surprised by Adolf Hitler's delay. Some believe a big-scale offensive by land or air will be attempted only in desperation.
The British announced Royal Air Force bombers had completed series of daylight flights over Germany photographing military objectives.
The British were understood to be considering seizing German exports from neutral ships to deprive them of foreign exchange. Such action was taken in the world war.

German Invasion Again Threatens Belgium

Belgium combines fortresses with flood defenses in preparing against possible Nazi invasion. Should Germans break through main defense line, they would have to face additional guns in highlands of interior Belgium, water and mud in her inundated lowlands.

BODY TAKEN FROM A MINE NEAR THURBER

By United Press
STEPHENVILLE, Nov. 15.—The body of Fred Nolan, 24, of Okmulgee, Okla., was recovered today from an abandoned coal mine near Thurber, where he was killed Monday by black damp gas.
Three companions who were too weak to carry Nolan when he collapsed, reached safety.
The body was reached nearly three-quarters of a mile from the bottom of the 168-foot shaft, by the fifth rescue party sent into the mine. Rescue workers had to wear masks and breathe oxygen they carried. Rescue crews became exhausted.
John Hetherington, a veteran miner from Straw, and Bill Angus, state highway patrolman from Eastland, led the successful rescue. Three companions of Nolan, all from Thurber, were in the rescue party.

Maracaibo Fire Toll Nears 1,000

By United Press
MARACAIBO, Venezuela, Nov. 15.—Divers searched the oily waters of Lake Maracaibo today for the bodies of men, women and children who perished when fire swept the "stilt city" of Lagunillas, an oil town 40 miles southwest of here.
Estimates of the dead ranged from 500 to 1,000 and damage was set at $1,250,000.
Divers recovered 28 bodies in the first search of the town which sprang up 25 years ago when foreign oil companies began to take oil in Venezuela.
The fire started Monday night when a lamp exploded. It spread quickly, burning a bridge that cut off escape of 3,000. Two thousand escaped but the remaining 1,000 are missing.

Two Thanksgivings Too Many In States Many Departments

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex.—Three holidays in one month is too much for Texas state departments, so few of them will pay any attention to Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel's double-barreled Thanksgiving Day proclamation.
November 11 was observed as a holiday, being so designated by statute. Two Thanksgiving holidays in addition are considered too much by most department heads.
A state employee who refused to go to work either day, probably could sustain his right to observe both Thanksgivings. The law specifying state holidays includes all days of Thanksgiving designated by the president or the governor.
Other specified holidays are Jan. 1, Jan. 19 (Lee's birthday), Feb. 22, March 2, April 21, June 3 (Jefferson Davis' birthday), July 4, Labor Day, Oct. 12, Nov. 11 and Dec. 25.
In addition, state departments are authorized to declare a holiday for employees on all days when state elections are held, so they may go home to vote.

Holds U. S. Oil Is Still Plentiful

By United Press
STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Even though oil will be almost as important as food in a long European war, America need not fear that foreign demand will be a strain on our oil supplies, says Dr. Sylvain J. Pirson of Pennsylvania State College.
An expert on petroleum, Pirson said he did not anticipate any heavy demand for American crude oil unless the Allies are unable to get shipments through the Mediterranean, which he considered unlikely. Oil from Iraq, Iran and Dutch East Indies is brought to the Allies through the Mediterranean.
However, he pointed out that Germany is "critically concerned about oil and gasoline."
"Normally," he said, "it can produce only about 35 per cent of its peacetime needs, let alone the abnormal needs of wartime. About 10 per cent comes from its own oil wells and 25 per cent is converted into gasoline from coal by a process of hydrogenation."
"For the balance of its supply it is largely dependent on Rumania. There has been much talk about importing oil from Russia, but it is improbable that this will amount to much. Transportation facilities are too limited and furthermore, Russia needs all its own oil output. In fact, Russia even now has to import some oil for its own needs."

Confederate Ranks Steadily Thinning

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex.—Rolls of Confederate pensioners are steadily thinning. In a few years it is expected the present deficit in the fund to pay this class of pensions will be overcome automatically.
State Treasurer Charley Lockhart's summary of state warrants shows that 39 mortuary warrants were issued from it last month. The warrants reveal also that there remain only 59 Confederate couples on the roll, receiving $50 a month. There were 3,816 single pensioners receiving $25 each and 96 who are resident in Confederate homes. They receive $12.50 each. Total expenditure was $103,525.

Dr. Brown attended the University of Edinburgh in 1931 and 1932, and returned there in December, 1938, remaining until April of this year completing his work toward the degree.

10,000 Pilots Are Being Trained In U. S. at Present

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Some 10,000 air-minded students in 420 of the nation's universities and colleges are training for their wings.
They are the participating undergraduates who have enrolled in the civilian pilot training program conceived and developed by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.
They are scattered throughout the country in schools large and small, technical and academic, co-educational and regular. Two Negro colleges are among them.
The plan has been acclaimed a pronounced success both in Washington and on the campuses. Tried experimentally on a relatively minute scale in 1938, the program gave so much promise that Congress appropriated $4,000,000 for a full-blown exploitation of the idea this year.
There are two essential aims, as conceived by Robert H. Hinckley, CAA chairman:
1. To develop and possibly perfect fliers, well-schooled in the work, who would provide, in time of national emergency, a valuable adjunct to the regular armed services.
2. To stimulate private flying activities with an eye to promoting the aviation industry.
The CAA, under terms in effect this year, pays from $270 to $280 per student to the permanent pilot-teachers attached to the college's flying school. In addition, it allows the college $20 per student in the ground classes. It has set a maximum of $40 as the lab fee charged the student for his class hours.
Applicants for the courses are subject to rigid examination, both physical and educational. Courses, in addition to the actual 35 to 50 hours of flying, include History of Aviation, Elementary Aerodynamics, Airplane Structure, Meteorology, Navigation, Engines, Instruments and Parachutes.

Arnold sought to persuade the supreme court the lower court misconstrued the congressional intent. The indictment charged a conspiracy to fix milk prices in the Chicago area.

America Still Has Its Promises

Thirty years ago, Herbert Croly wrote a book which he called "The Promise of American Life." Croly couldn't foresee such events as the First World War and its hang-over, the 1929 depression and the Second World War. But even in that era, dimmed now by three great catastrophes, the author found the need not only for the preservation of democracy, but for conscious political effort directed toward such salvation.

Croly was more or less a pioneer in articulating the spirit that is dominant in America today. He believed in the free exercises of liberal thought, and to this end he founded a magazine in 1914. Since then, The New Republic has been generally recognized as one of the foremost organs of liberal thinking. It is read by people with a wide variety of political philosophies not because they happen to agree with everything its writers say but because here, at least, are presented problems that must be dealt with.

On its twenty-fifth anniversary, The New Republic takes time out to cast a mirror back to the First World War and to project on the future the image that it finds, using today only as a focal point. Liberal leaders in nearly every field of American life have contributed their views on the America of tomorrow.

War always blocks a clear view of the future. There is a tendency not to look too far ahead, not only because everything is confused but because there is some doubt whether there will ever be a future. But the writers in The New Republic have boldly accepted the premise of America's tomorrow and have reiterated the need for remembering that war in Europe should not distract citizens in the United States from problems at home.

If there is any one thing in which all of the writers have faith, it is the theory that modern society needs intense planning. Vast enterprises are accepted as part of the American system. There is no attempt to tear them down. But there is a general subscription to the theory that only through sound planning and direction can society get its money's worth. That goes for industry, labor, education, agriculture and every other integral part of American life.

The New Deal has planned, and you like it or you don't, that will scarcely upset your faith in the necessity for an integrated American life. Every phase of modern life in this country has become inter-dependent with every other aspect of life. Education can't be divorced from political thought any more than agriculture's problems can be considered independently of labor's. Whether the planning may be done by the Democrats or the Republicans or by any other dominant political party, the almost imperative need for a pre-directed social structure still exists.

WILD LIFE

Wildlife Research

One of the greatest of all organized forces working in Texas for the increase of Texas wildlife resources is the wildlife research units. There are really two of such units working in Texas today. One of them is located at College Station, the Texas Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit. This is one of ten such units that is working in the United States, and is operated in cooperation with the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission and the Bureau of Biological Survey, United States Department of Interior.

Dr. Walter P. Taylor, Senior Biologist of the Survey, is in charge of this unit. The Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission is now operating its own research unit under the terms of the Pittman Robertson act of our National Congress. We have a number of trained biologists working over the entire state. Also the Game Department has recently organized a research unit to work on inland fresh waters for the purpose of studying the water and find out what may be done to aid the increase of fresh water fish, so that they may more nearly meet the great demand that is placed on them by the anglers of all these states.

The main object of all these research units is for the sole purpose of furnishing you, the hunter or fisherman, with more and better game to hunt and more fish for the angler to catch. This object cannot be near accomplished without the whole cooperation on the part of the public to work with these agencies.

These units are studying the many wildlife species of Texas their present range and former range. They are trying to find out what might be done on or Texas farms and ranches to increase the carrying capacity for wildlife and what might be done on Texas ranges of the species to restore them to these areas.

The results exceeded all expectations. TAXICAB slid to a stop at the curb. The door opened and a young man's head emerged. "Officer! Officer!" the young man called.

Flynn turned. "What do you want at this time of the night? You're drunk, you're disorderly and I'll—"

"I'm not drunk I am, officer. We're looking for a minister. We want to get married."

"That's right, officer," the taxi driver put in. "There used to be a minister lived around here someplace. These kids—"

"These idiots!" Officer Flynn roared. "Here, let's have a look at you." His flashlight sent a beam through the darkness to show the laughing face of a youth peering out the cab door. Raindrops decked the young man's red hair.

"You're an honest face," Officer Flynn conceded grudgingly. "And that wild look in your eyes explains why you'd be getting yourself married on a night like this. But where's the girl that'd be marrying the likes of you?" His flashlight swept the interior of the cab.

Huddled in the corner was the girl. She was small, dark of hair, dark of complexion. It was her eyes that Officer Flynn remembered best, later in the night. "Smoky, they were, sir," he reported, "just like little live coals with a wisp of smoke coming from them."

"Can't you wait to be married in the morning, like decent folks?" Flynn growled at her, but his tone belied his anger.

"It's his idea, not mine!" the girl answered from her corner.

Flynn turned back to the young man. "It's a surly wife you're picking, if I may say so, lad. But then my own is no angel. Now what are your names?"

"Do you have to know that, officer?" the youth asked. "After all, we've committed no crime, just asking your help in finding a minister."

"Anyone that steps in front of Arnold Benthorne's house tonight has to give his name. Captain's orders. Come on, now tell me who you are."

"If you're going to write down our names, you'd better step into the cab, sir," the youth suggested. "Here, climb in. I'll stand out on the curb. I'll turn on the light for you."

Flynn pulled his notebook out of a raincoat pocket, leaned wet and dripping, into the cab. In the light the girl was even prettier. She hurried her slicker closer about her, turned her face to the darkness. "Now your name, son."

"John Douglas," came the voice behind him.

"And yours," Flynn nodded toward the girl. Her answer was softly spoken, so softly Flynn hardly heard.

"Ara Johnson."

"And let's see your license," to the cab driver. The driver fumbled in his pocket for a moment, finally withdrew a greasy card. "N-i-c-k S-m-i-l-h," Flynn spelled out slowly. "Well, looks all right. Now you get going, you'll find a minister on 21st and— Say! Where did that young fellow go?"

The cab's motor roared. Swiftly the girl reached across the seat, gave Flynn a shove and slammed the door. Before the patrolman could recover his balance and struggle to draw his revolver the cab had disappeared in the darkness. John Douglas was nowhere in sight.

Flynn's whistle shrilled through the night.

"HEY, you, where do you think you're going?" The policeman, gun in hand, darted from the shadows of the garage, hurried to the figure that had just come up the walk.

"I beg your pardon," a soft voice answered. "I am William Alston. I've come to see my daughter, Mrs. Benthorne. She called for me. I am sure she's expecting me. May I ring?"

"Captain's orders were to admit no one, sir," the policeman's tone was deferential. "Go ahead, ring the bell, and we'll see."

In a moment the door opened, throwing a shaft of light on the tall, old man.

"Come right in, Mr. Alston," came the butler's voice. "Mrs. Benthorne is in her rooms. She asked that you come up immediately. It's all right, officer."

The door closed. As the policeman returned to his post just inside the garage doors, the piercing notes of a police whistle spilt the night. The policeman ran toward the front of the house.

Suddenly he stopped short, as a shot echoed above the rumbling thunder.

Then he ran on.

JOEY DI TORIO smoothed his coat over the automatic in his armpit holster, pulled his hat deeper over his face.

"Now, Benthorne," he said softly to himself, "comes the payoff."

He walked out the door, into the clamor and din of night club gaiety. An orchestra blared from across the dance floor, and a throaty-voiced contralto mourned an unfaithful lover. Guests spoke to him as he walked between the tables. A waiter came up at his nod.

"Get Pete here," Joey ordered. He turned to a noisy table. "Lo Marge, lo Dave." A wave encompassed the others. "Getting off to a late start. Past midnight, Dave, and you're still on your feet—"

"Been here almost two hours—only six drinks, and still can see—" Dave laughed. "What're you doing, Joey, cutting your whiskey now?"

"Takes champagne to get you going, Dave." And as Pete touched his elbow, "Pete, champagne for Dave's crowd, on me." They all cheered and whooped after him as he walked away. "I'll be back soon, stick around and we'll have another round before closing."

They'd remember the champagne, and the time, too. Joey wanted them to remember the show, if they could see it.

"I'll be back in an hour, Pete," he added in a lower tone. "It's after midnight now." Joey pulled his wrist in front of him, made sure Pete saw his watch. "Take over." He went out into the rain.

In his car a few minutes later, he stopped under a street light, set the hands of his watch back, exactly one hour.

Motor Buses Use Stagecoach Corral

By United Press FREDERICKSBURG, Tex. — Motor buses now run into the same corral where dusty stage coaches once delivered passengers. The corral was at the Nimitz Hotel, a landmark on the western trail across Texas. Founded by a German sea captain the motel was built ship-shape. Its register still preserved shows that Gen. Robert E. Lee (then Lieut. R. E. Lee, U. S. A.) was an occasional guest. O. Henry often alighted from the stage there.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

By Bruce Catton NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — The Townsend old age pension organization is about to begin the most thorough and intensive campaign it has ever undertaken—one which aims directly at the election in 1940 of a President and a Congress pledged to enactment of the eldest of the currently popular back-to-wealth plans.

The campaign begins Nov. 9, when 17 Pennsylvania radio stations will begin a series of twice-a-week Townsend broadcasts. It will not end until the 1940 presidential election is over. Between now and then it will likely become the most striking "pressure" campaign in recent political history.

One week after the Pennsylvania broadcast series begins, Dr. Francis E. Townsend and Senator Sheridan Downey of California begin a joint speaking tour of the state. Into 21 cities and towns they will carry their tidings of the coming prosperity for old folks. Both the meetings and the broadcasts will be directed at the 1940 campaign; both will seek to strengthen and solidify Townsend strength in every quarter of the state.

In mid-December this whirlwind campaign will recess for the Christmas holidays. Immediately after the first of the year the scene will shift to New York. Dr. Townsend and Senator Downey will conduct a similar speaking tour throughout the Empire State, while between 25 and 30 New York radio stations will be signed for twice-a-week broadcasts. These broadcasts, as in Pennsylvania, will last until the presidential election has been held. Since the Senate will be in session during the winter, the doctor and the senator will hold all of their public meetings on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays.

After the New York campaign is ended, the same thing will be done in Ohio. Next the prosperity publicists will visit Illinois. Plans are not yet definite beyond that, but it is learned that the performance is to be repeated in state after state until the election.

The radio angle of the program, of course, cuts squarely across the recently adopted code of the National Association of Broadcasters. Under its rulings stations may not sell time for the presentation of controversial issues.

It is probable that a way out will be found. The code does permit the selling of time during political campaigns for the discussion of "public proposals subject to ballot"—which certainly covers the Townsend plan—and it is likely that it will be ruled that that clause will permit the selling of time in this instance.

The Townsend people are confident that as a result of this campaign they will be able to build up a bloc of anywhere from 6,000,000 to 12,000,000 voters who will apply to all candidates for every national office one simple test: will he vote for the Townsend plan?

This new campaign supplements one launched last summer. After the Townsend plan was voted down in the House of Representatives.

Dr. Townsend and his aides kept a careful check on the way the representatives voted. They immediately organized a number of "flying squadrons" to go into the districts of anti-Townsend Congressmen and do some intensive organizing work.

Evelyn Oppenheimer Speaks Before Well Filled Auditorium

Evelyn Oppenheimer of Dallas, famous young review artist of the Southwest reviewed Stigmund Byrd's "The Redlander" before a large audience Tuesday evening in the High School auditorium.

Miss Oppenheimer was presented by the Las Lealas Club, who have annually brought great entertainments to Eastland in the course of their club work.

"The Redlander" is the story of a boy born and raised in the redlands of Southeast Texas, of his leaving the "Redlands" only to return. It is a novel based on Texas history and is authentic in description of our own lands and of our own times.

Miss Oppenheimer, noted as one of the foremost literary commentators, has had her review scheduled to include Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, and as far east as St. Louis and as far west as Hollywood this season. She is original in thought, frank and witty in the course of her reviews. Her personality and technique are new and inimitable in the field of cultural entertainment. She has a simplicity of expression and a richness of tone that give her reviews life and makes them enjoyable.

"An authority on modern literature, she expresses her ideas simply and convincingly, uses no technical academic terms but reduces everything to simple human terms that everyone can understand and apply." (St. Louis Post-Dispatch).

"Among the most interesting speakers appearing in the Southwest." (Dallas Times-Herald).

Kay believes the Irwin horse lived in the Pleistocene or Ice Age. It "probably did not differ importantly from the modern horse," he explained. "He existed contemporaneously with early man in North America, but eventually became extinct for causes unknown."

Only the teeth, foot bones, ribs and other fragments of the animal were found.

ONE OUT OF EVERY FOUR ADULTS HAS—

Sinus Disease

According to leading doctors "sinus trouble is one of the most prevalent diseases of today. This dreaded and severely painful disease is caused by and follows the COMMON COLD." All kinds of serious complications besides sinus infection follow the common cold. America's Public Health Enemy Number One, the common cold germ wages its attack to pave the way for such serious illnesses as bronchitis, pneumonia, tuberculosis and other serious health-wrecking diseases. Frequently cold infection extends into the ear or mastoid.

HEAT YOUR ENTIRE HOME FOR YOUR HEALTH'S SAKE

DURING the common cold months, or winter season, it is especially important to take every precaution to protect your health. Quick changes of temperature should be avoided. Sudden changes of temperature, such as occur when going from a warm room into a cold one, make it easy for you to "catch cold." For your health's sake, and to obtain the greatest value from the fuel you use, heat your entire house and provide adequate ventilation during the short winter season.
