REDS ALMOST SUCCESSFUL IN VIIPURI RAID

A bloody battle on Viipuri Bay was reported today when Russian forces attempted to surprise the defenders of the city and neared the coast before being discovered.

Troops on motor sledges were also beaten back in the south when attacked by Finnish planes. Another Finn, a former school-teacher, was today added to the list of heroes who have staged single-handed attacks on Russian forces.

From Moscow word has been sent out that May Day, the traditional Red holiday, has now been set for the downfall of Finland, after their boasted conquest of Feb. 23 anniversary of the Red army, failed.

Webb Miller, United Press European News Editor, who has been covering the Finnish war, reached neutral territory today and reported that observers believed that Russia would seek peace after the fall of Viipuri, as that would gain for Russia the Karelian Isthmus territory she demanded from Finland.

The Finns, Miller reports, have thrown up strong defenses behind the city, however, and apparently intend to keep up the fight. Spring weather, which will melt the ice on the Finnish lakes, is expected to be a decided advantage for Finland and will hamper the Russian advances, if the defenders can hold out that long. Snow has played an important part in Finland's military strategy throughout the winter, and the thawing ice on her many lakes is also expected to be utilized as a natural barricade.

To Canvass Returns In Saturday Vote

Returns from Saturday's county-wide beer election will be canvassed Thursday and the result declared by members of commissioners court, it has been announced. Unofficial returns indicate drys won by a majority of 118.

Preparations were being rushed to completion today for the fourth annual Ranger Livestock Show, which will be held all day Thursday, Mar. 7, in the Ranger Softball Park.

Fire Chief G. A. Murphy and members of his department were busy today building pens in which hogs, goats and sheep are to be exhibited, and P. E. Moore, secretary of the show, announced arrival of coops enough for 40 pens of poultry and six pens of turkeys.

Cattle entries will be staked around the park where they can be displayed adequately. A larger number of entries than ever before was indicated today with word from many communities that livestock owners would be on hand early Thursday with numerous entries.

Word has been received from Strawn that one man there would have several high-grade sheep and goats to display and that boys would have at least two club calves from the town.

A. C. Pratt, assistant county agent of Eastland County, who was aiding in preparations today, said that more 4-H club entries would be ready for the Ranger show than were displayed at the livestock show held last week in Cisco. Practically all entries in the Ranger show will be taken Thursday night to Fort Worth, where they will be entered in the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show, which begins Friday, Mar. 8.

Pratt stated today that at least 14 Jerries, owned by 4-H club boys, from six to eight hogs and from four to six beef calves that have been on feed will be displayed in addition to those entered by FFA boys and adult growers of fine livestock.

A larger number of entries in all divisions of the show is indicated by advance information about entries, it was stated today.

Dr. Ross Hodges, chairman of the livestock show, stated today that his brother, Dr. Bob Hodges, would have some of his fine Karakul sheep on display, though there were no prizes offered in this division. Dr. Hodges has one of the few flocks of Karakuls in the State of Texas, and the only flock in this part of the country. As many people have never seen a Karakul sheep or lamb, his exhibit is expected to attract much attention at the show.

All entries in the show will be in place by 9:30 Thursday morning and judging will start at 10:30. All animals will remain on exhibition until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

No entrance fee is to be charged for the show, and anyone owning fine animals or poultry are eligible to enter as many as they wish. A total of $71.50 in cash prizes and 146 ribbons will be awarded in the show.

All Americans Want to Vote

A proposal to brand as paupers all persons who remain on relief for three consecutive years hit the New Jersey legislature in Trenton a few days ago and loosed a storm of indignant protest. If the plan were carried out, it would automatically remove the right to vote from persons who fell under its provisions.

The recommendation was submitted to the legislature by State Senator Homer C. Zink, chairman of the Emergency Relief Committee, but was the work of a hired investigator, Col. G. Barrett Glover. It was not a committee report and was not submitted as such, but that didn't temper the amazement of people who feared an infringement on their civil rights.

It is a pretty serious thing to be called officially a pauper. It knocks the wind out of you. It leaves you humiliated and desolate. People don't take the pauper's oath unless there isn't much else they can do.

It is equally serious to be stripped, at the same time, of your right to vote. A man forced to live on relief for a long period of time is not necessarily a poor citizen. He is more likely to value his franchise than does the man who has a job and security. He has more time to think about it.

Colonel Glover's way is not the right way to go about straightening out the relief situation. It's an easy way, an obvious way. But, aside from the harm it could bring to individuals, it doesn't answer the fundamental question: How can we reduce our relief rolls without causing too much suffering?

Colonel Glover can't be blamed for wanting to reduce the number of relief clients; but the methods of the army, from which the colonel retired a few years ago, won't work here. You can't just give an order and expect that it shall be done.

The state of New Jersey, like every other state, some day will have to figure out a way of getting its people off relief. Calling them names and disfranchising them won't do it.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine of New York has decreed that confiscated gangsters' guns cannot be shipped to Finland. They might go off and hurt somebody.

A Virginia prison has only one inmate left. The others tore a hole in a wall and escaped. Maybe the one who stayed hadn't finished a chess game with the warden.

Red Cross Better Prepared For War Than During 1918

By United Press

FORT WORTH, Texas—The American Red Cross is organized much better for aiding Europe's war victims today than it was in 1918, James K. McClintock, National Vice President in charge of finance, said here recently. McClintock said that special administrators had to be sent from the United States to France when money was raised for sufferers in the 1914-18 war, to insure that it was properly distributed. Sixty-two nations now are organized under the Red Cross, he said, and funds can be put into use rapidly. In Finland, for instance, $100,000 provided by the American Red Cross already has been sent to that country.

The Red Cross vice president denied that the Finnish relief campaign directed by former President Herbert Hoover is duplicating the work of the Red Cross. "With so many Finns needing aid and so little money coming in, there is no chance of duplication," he said. Money raised by Mr. Hoover's organization is being used in Finland by a government committee that is cooperating with the Finnish Red Cross, McClintock said.

Idea of Saving for Rainy Day Is Dead Professor Declares

By United Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Saving your pennies for a rainy day is out of date because nowadays when it rains it rains easy credit, and a dollar invested today might easily shrink in purchasing power in the future.

Dr. Charles W. Coulter, University of New Hampshire sociologist, expressed those sentiments in a lecture before 200 economists, social workers, and representatives of lending agencies gathered at a consumers credit conference sponsored by the University of Michigan.

Also, he said, the government has encouraged householders to obtain credit for rebuilding, repairing, remodeling and installing new equipment, and he added that it is so easy for a family of average means to borrow money for luxuries as well as necessities that continuous insolvency faces many.

I GIVE YOU TEXAS . . .

By BOYCE HOUSE

Wherever fine pecans are known the Burkett pecan is known. J. H. Burkett is the man who discovered and perfected the variety which bears his name. This observer recalls—after a lapse of a good many years—the privilege of a visit to the parent tree, under the personal guidance of Representative Omar Burkett of Eastland, son of the man who developed the pecan.

And now, J. H. Burkett at an age when 80 is not far away, has begun a new study—the study of grass.

Grass is commonplace—it is taken for granted. But Walt Whitman called it, "The handkerchief of the Lord." Carl Sandburg wrote:

"Pile the bodies high at Austerlitz and Waterloo,
Shovel them under and let me work—
I am the grass; I cover all."

John J. Ingalls said it this way: "Grass is the forgiveness of nature—her constant benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruts of the cannon grow green again with grass, and carnage is forgotten.

"Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish but grass is immortal. It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance or splendor but its homely hue is more enchanting than the lily or the rose. It yields no fruit in earth or air, and yet—should its harvest fail for a single year—famine would depopulate the world."

As Mr. Burkett says, "Our civilization depends upon grass." Flocks and herds marked the beginning of civilization. Not only does it still provide sustenance for unnumbered sheep and countless cattle grazing upon a thousand hills, but grass provides a background of beauty, a soft restfulness for the eye. Imagine what a bleak, brown, bare world this would be without grass. Further, grass prevents floods and stores up the bountiful water of spring against a later need and it holds the good earth, with its rich fertility, in place.

Perhaps Mr. Burkett will be able to develop grasses adapted to our Western ranges—hardy, drought-resisting. Grass too may be the answer to the challenge of the winds sweeping in blinding clouds through a "dust bowl."

And think of the spirit of a man, well past the three score years and ten mark, taking up a new study. The lines of Browning on "Rabbi Ben Erza" come to mind:

"Grow old with me,
The best is yet to be;
The last of life, for which the first was made."

More lawyer jests for old "old joke" competition:

A man, just acquitted of cow-stealing because of his lawyer's eloquent speech to the jury, asked the attorney as they were leaving the courtroom, "Does that mean I get to keep the cow?"

That defendant probably was the same man who, before his trial, was asked by a friend, "Are you guilty?" and he replied, "How do I know till I hear the evidence?"

Then there was the man who went to a lawyer's office and inquired, "Suppose my cow was to get into your garden and eat up $8 worth of vegetables, would I be responsible?" To which the attorney replied, "Yes, sir." The citizen laughed and said, "Well, pay me, then because it was your cow that got into my garden." The lawyer handed over $8 and then said, "Now, my friend, you owe me $10 for legal advice."

It's the squeakin' axle that gits the greatest—as my grandpa ust to say.

Some years ago, when this observer was on the staff of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Harold Banks—then state editor—heard that there had been a fire, the night before, in a small town so he called the local correspondent. The latter had been out of town and promised to investigate and report back—which he did, in a few minutes.

"The fire wasn't in town," he said, "and it wasn't much of a fire—just a farm-house."

"I see," Banks replied and was just about to express his thanks and hang up the receiver but the correspondent remarked casually: "By the way, one of the children burned to death."

"What?" gasped Banks. "And another one isn't expected to live," the correspondent continued. "The farmer and his wife were burned also in trying to rescue the children. He threw the year-old baby out of the window and the little fellow didn't get a scratch. Also he had just sold his crop the day before and all the money was burned up."

By this time, Banks had gotten his breath:

"I see—not much of a fire; one dead, one dying, two others burned, baby miraculously saved and the earnings of an entire year destroyed."

The other said, "Yeah, that's right—and, say, Blankville plays football here next Friday and you tell Boyce House we want a darn good writeup."

YESTERDAY: Ann learns more about Paul during their first date. He is a college graduate, anxious to succeed. There is no room in life for romance. They agree to be just friends. Two weeks after Ann's arrival in her new home, Florabelle asks her to go on a party.

CHAPTER XIII

ANN hesitated. There was a difference between going on a party and going to a party. When she hesitated, Florabelle said, "And you too, Clara."

"Oh, Florabelle," Clara breathed excitedly. "That's swell—swell. Isn't it, Ann?" "I'd like to go to a party," Ann admitted. "What—what kind of a party is it?"

"Oh, Florabelle continued carelessly, "we'll have dinner somewhere—and dance."

Clara's eyes sparkled. "Will we meet swell fellows?" She had a definite idea of swell fellows. They worked in offices behind big mahogany desks, they spent their evenings in night clubs. She had seen them in the movies.

"The best families in town will be represented," Florabelle assured her with a little grimace. "Oh, gee," Clara sighed. "What'll I wear?"

"Well, don't try to be dressy. Wear street clothes. The smartest girls in Chicago never dress."

Clara ran to the closet and brought forth an atrocious taffeta frock. It was cerise, trimmed with cream lace. "Will this be all right?" she asked excitedly.

"It'll do," As she left the room, Florabelle said, "You're the important one, Ann. The party is being given in your honor."

"My honor?" "Sure, Jake Bontel was in the taxi the other night. He saw you and asked me to bring you round."

"Will there be a man for Clara?" Florabelle nodded. "Three men will be there. Clancy Horton—he's mine and don't you forget it for a minute—Jake Bontel and Steve Claybourne. Steve goes with the North Side crowd. Occasionally he likes to meet the other half."

Ann was a little dubious about the affair. She had the feeling that Florabelle was railroad-ing her into something. On the other hand, she was eager for gaiety. Dinner and dancing—it sounded delightful.

Florabelle took her acceptance for granted. "Just wait till Steve Claybourne sees Clara," she said, laughing lazily.

THERE was a flurry of baths and dressing in the apartment the next evening. Ann wore the new blue dress and little pancake hat. Her hair was like gold, vivid color burned in her cheeks, her eyes were mysteriously dark. Florabelle's gown was black, sleek and plain. At her throat she wore an immense rhinestone clip. A smartly veiled hat partially covered her ash blond hair.

Clara was a living demonstration of what a girl should not wear. The cerise dress fought with the shade of her rouge, her flame colored nails fought back. She'd had her hair done at noon and her head had an ice-bound look. Bangle bracelets jingled from her wrists, a bib necklace of raw gold covered her chest.

"Aren't you going to wear any jewelry?" she asked Ann. "I haven't anything nice."

"Gee, I wish I'd known it. They have swell stuff at the store."

Ann looked at Clara's decorations and was not in the least envious. They found a cab waiting at the curb and Ann quietly enjoyed the unaccustomed luxury.

At last they stopped before an apartment hotel on Sheridan drive. Florabelle gracefully led the way to an elevator and they shot upward, Ann's doubts increasing with every floor.

"Why should we go to Mr. Horton's apartment?" she asked. "Why don't we meet them where we are to have dinner?"

Florabelle lost patience. "Look," she said firmly. "Are you planning to have a good time or are you going to put on an act at every turn? Who is throwing this party, anyway?"

Ann felt properly squelched. "I just wondered," she said lamely. "Well, stop wondering. Take things as they come. I go to parties like this about five times a week and I'm none the worse for them."

SHE knocked on a closed door and it swung open. A large, beefy man with several chins and a bulging waistline beamed out at them.

"Three little gifts from heaven," he proclaimed loudly. "This is Clancy," Florabelle said. "Ann and Clara."

"Howdy, Ann and Clara. Come in. The two male earth beings behind me are Jake and Steve. Step up, boys, and do your manners."

Ann knew right then that her doubts had been well founded. She glanced about the apartment. No one lived there, that was obvious. It had merely been taken for the evening's entertainment. A kitchen, brilliantly lighted, opened off the main room. From where Ann stood, she could see down a hall from which opened bedrooms and bath.

Jake took her hand. "It's plain that you need a little drink," he said thickly. "Come with you old pal, Jake." He led her to a console table which had been turned into a bar. It was loaded with bottles and glasses.

Ann said, "I thought we were going out to dinner." Anything to get away.

"That's the surprise," he told her with sly heaviness. "We're having dinner right here. You like that, beautiful?"

Florabelle had removed her fur and hat. With a glass in her hand, she sat on the arm of a chair, looking extremely decorative. Clara, aided by Steve, was getting out of her wraps. She was laughing and talking inanely. Ann looked at Steve. He was younger than the other men, younger and nicer.

Jake had gone behind the improvised bar. "What'll it be, angel?"

Ann was at a loss. Evidently this was what was meant by "being on a party." She had never tasted intoxicating liquor, her father had seen to that. Inexperienced as she was, she knew that it was up to her to bluff. She couldn't "put on an act" as Florabelle had said.

"Mix up something you think I'll like," she said indifferently.

BY this time Clara was sipping a long drink. She was doing her best to be casual about it, imitating Florabelle's every move. While Jake hilariously mixed the drinks Steve crossed the room to Ann. He was an exceptionally good-looking young man, well groomed and nice mannered. He was a little less intoxicated than his two friends.

"I've never had the pleasure of meeting you," he said. "Perhaps you've never gone slumming in the right places," she returned coolly. Ann was angry, more angry at herself than at the three men.

Why had she come? Why had she let herself in for something she might not be able to handle? What was the fun in a gathering like this? Where was the excuse for it?

"Pert little devil, aren't you?" Steve remarked. "I can hold my own in any crowd."

"Do I detect gravel in that remark?" "I put some in. Maybe you are clever enough to detect it."

Jake came from behind the bar, a stemmed glass in his hand. "Here you are, my sweet."

"Thank you," she took the glass. What was she to do with it? Why—oh, why had she come? (To Be Continued)

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Unless there is a big change this spring, no candidate will go to the Republican national convention with enough delegates in his pocket to take charge.

It looks now as if a huge proportion of the delegates—perhaps even a majority—will be unattached.

This is entirely to the liking of most of the national committee members.

The office of Sheriff Los Woods, asked to assist, reported Wednesday noon that no word had been received as to the location of two missing Eastland boys who were going to El Paso on one bicycle.

Bill DeBusk, Eastland oilfield worker, returned to Eastland Monday night after fruitlessly pursuing as far as Abilene his son and the other boy.

DeBusk, according to an Abilene newspaper, said he had traced the boys as far as Abilene. A policeman told him he had seen the pair riding one bicycle Monday night.

The boys are John DeBusk, 14, and Tommy Jordan, about 12 or 13. John is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 107 and was last seen clad in khaki pants, blue shirt, aviator cap and gray coat.

The elder DeBusk at Abilene described the Jordan boy as being about 5 feet tall, weighing about 97 pounds. He did not know how he was dressed.

The bicycle they are riding is equipped with one red tire, and one black tire.

Old Death Battle Proves to Be Hoax

LONDON.—For more than half a century a stone axe-head, buried in a 4,000-year-old animal skull has been accepted by visitors to the Sedgwick Museum at Cambridge as evidence of a prehistoric battle to the death.

But now Major Gordon Fowler, research worker, lecturers and the public have been duped by a practical joker. While both axe-head and skull are authentic, he says they were found separately and the axe-head was placed in the skull as a joke.

Denison Dam Is Becoming Reality As Quarrel Grows

By United Press

DENISON, Texas.—While proponents and opponents wrangle, the Denison Dam on Red River is becoming a reality.

Work is going ahead, steadily and competently, despite legal entanglements and the threatened humanitarian war of Oklahoma's illigient Governor Leon Phillips to halt the project.

One contract is about midway toward completion, another is scheduled to get underway May 1, and a third, to excavate for the main embankment, is to be awarded the low bidder about March 15.

Nearly half-finished is the excavation for the outlet works and version of the stream. A gap-canyon in the Texas bank has been dug with giant shovels, and trucks to turn the riv-

A $4,000,000 chunk of concrete and steel, comprising the outlets of four flood control and four power tunnels, will be set in another hole on a level with the stream bed on the Texas bank.

This phase is scheduled to start May 1. Although it is the biggest contract yet let, the embankment job coming up next month will be twice as big.

Litigation has not delayed any of the contract work, but appraisal of the dam site was held up until the recent U. S. Supreme Court decision refusing to accept jurisdiction in Phillip's injunction suit.

The governor later hinted he might use national guardsmen to shut down the $53,000,000 power and flood control project.

Congress appropriated $5,675,000 for the first year's work which ends July 1, this year. Approximately $14,000,000 will be asked for the next fiscal year. Contractors are paid every 15 days.

The first year's appropriation will not have been spent by July because of savings in all three contracts. The low bids were far below the engineers' estimates.

Practically all equipment and supplies have been purchased for the beginning of the outlet contract. The principal sub-contract has been awarded a Chicago company to furnish and install the metal liners for the power conduits. These, carrying water from the intake structure beneath the dam to the power house, will have a 20-foot diameter and will be approximately 800 feet long.

Contractors said they were living up to an agreement to employ local men except for the key jobs. Two hundred men now are on the outlet excavation and diversion job. Sixty more are employed by the outlet works contractor. This latter number soon will be increased to 500.

Declining German national health is reflected in other striking figures which the former Berlin clinic head has gathered.

"They prove," he says, "that the German people, living for the last six years under the frightful pressure of war conditions, has reached the limit of its physical and psychic working capacity, and that if no relief comes it faces the prospect of a collapse much more dreadful than that of 1918."

Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church entertained with a buffet luncheon Monday at one o'clock honoring the members of the Elizabeth Pettit Circle. The luncheon prefaced the Mission Study which is slated to be held each Monday afternoon for six weeks.

Rev. P. W. Walker, pastor of the church, led in opening prayer. A toast was offered to the Elizabeth Pettit Circle by Mrs. W. H. Mullings, with response given by Mrs. Lynn Hardin, leader of the honored circle.

Plate favors of tiny booklets which had the name of the Mission Study Book, "Right Here at Home," on the cover, contained dates and program leaders for the five succeeding Mondays for the Mission study class. These were explained by Mrs. Garner Kinard, acting Missionary Superintendent, who also introduced the Study book.

In keeping with the book to be studied, which begins with the pioneer days, heirlooms of table lamps, small accordian, candle molds and bullet molds were used in the decoration theme, which belonged to Mrs. Anna Townsend. Mrs. Townsend, who is a charter member of the first Ladies Aid organized in the Methodist church and one of the oldest active members serving in the present Missionary Society, gave a short talk on the church organization and the pioneer days. Mrs. Annie Day, who is also one of the oldest members and was the first president of the present Missionary Society organized in the church, was honored.

Lovely spring flowers were used on the luncheon table. Concluding the program was the assembly singing of "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds."

There were 42 present for the buffet luncheon of assorted meats, salads, vegetables, pie and coffee.

Following the luncheon period Mrs. Kinard and Mrs. Frank Crowell taught the first two chapters of the Missionary book.

Miss Hale Re-Elected As Head of Jr. Las Leales

At the Tuesday evening meeting of the Junior Las Leales Club Miss Irma Ruth Hale was re-elected as president to serve the coming year. The session was held at the Women's Clubhouse.

Others to serve in official capacity are Mrs. Howard Miller, vice-president; Miss Maynell Edmondson, secretary; Miss Sybil Holder, treasurer, and Miss Jerry Terrell as project chairman. Mrs. James Horton is the sponsor for the club.

On entering the clubroom the members were given miniature maps of Texas by the hostess and leader, Miss Naomi McBeth, who presented the program on "Texas" which was opened with musical selections of typical range songs played on the accordian by Mrs. Lydia Krauskopf of Cisco.

Mrs. Alfred Irbly of Cisco was presented as guest speaker and gave a talk on "This State of Ours." Facts of the ranches and ranchers in Texas, particularly the famous King Ranch, were brought by Miss Lorene Davidson.

The program closed with the assembly singing of "The Eyes of Texas." Response to roll call, "Oddities in Texas," were given by Misses Rama Barber, Lorene Davidson, Maynell Edmondson, Irma Ruth Hale, Frances Harris, Sybil Holder, Naomi McBeth, Frankie Webb, Margaret Wynne, Norma Vickers, Jerry Terrell, and Mmes. Howard Miller, Harry W. Brogdon, Roy Gallagher, Horton.

Fred Scott, Slaton, was a visitor Wednesday in Eastland.

Rotary Education Talks Are Given At Eastland Meet

Talks on Rotarianism were given at the session of the Eastland club this week at the First Methodist Church.

In charge of the program was T. P. Johnson. The talks were given by Earl Bender, Jim Horton, J. W. Ligon, R. N. Wilson, Rev. J. B. Blunk, Dr. J. H. Caton and A. H. Henderson.

Visitors were L. R. Pearson of Ranger; John W. Turner, guest of Judge W. P. Leslie; Dr. F. M. Warren of Abilene, guest of Dr. Caton, and R. A. McDaniel, guest of Johnson.

It was announced that Jim Horton will be in charge of the program next week.

Passengers Claim Boulder Saves Train

PRINCE RUPERT, B. C.—The story of how a huge boulder prevented a derailed train from crashing 300 feet to a rocky canyon bottom was told here by passengers of the train who were being brought by boat from Vancouver.

When the train was traveling the White Pass and Yukon route railway, a passenger and baggage car was derailed in the Skagway river canyon, seven miles from Skagway, Alaska. The rock, lying beside the tracks, miraculously held the entire train on the edge of the cliff.

Qualities of Rogers Discussed at Meet

The qualities that made the late Will Rogers a great man were discussed Tuesday by Dr. F. M. Warren of Abilene at a meeting of the Eastland Lions Club at the Connellee Hotel.

Dr. Warren, now conducting a revival at the First Christian Church in Eastland, was introduced by Rev. J. B. Blunk, pastor of the church.

Earl T. Williams and B. F. McInroe were in charge of the program. Present at the meeting in addition to the visitors and regular members were L. B. Watson, one of the newer members, and Rev. Jones W. Weathers, re-instated member.

National Guard Want Old Military Music

DETROIT—The Michigan National Guard has made an appeal to Detroit residents for a strange type of training instrument—phonograph records.

Capt. M. S. Kanaga, chaplain of the 182nd Field Artillery regiment, has asked that people rummage in their attics for old marches and other types of military music. Explaining that the change from a four man to a three man column in army drill has increased the amount of practice required of the National Guard and other units, Capt. Kanaga said that the records would be used in drilling small groups.

A West Virginian made sure of getting his reward when he sent a brief case back to the owner C. O. D. He would trust human nature a little more, perhaps, if he didn't know it so well.

The Republicans won an Ohio congressional district from the Democrats. Celebration of the victory will be suspended until after the November elections, however.
